Soviet Bloc Spurns Little Assembly Draft Role

Boycott Announced Before 38-0 Vote for Subcommittee on Plan's Final Form

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Russia and her satellites today refused to participate in working out the finished form of a United Nations "Little Assembly" proposed by the United States.

The boycott was announced by Andrei Gromyko immediately before a 38-to-0 vote approved the setting up of subcommittee which will study the American proposal with its numerous amendments and draft the concrete resolution.

Russia's announcement was echoed in rapid-fire order, and with almost identical language, by Ukraine, Byelorussia, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Delegates appeared fairly sure, however, that the Soviet bloc could not afford to abstain from participation in the year-around Standing Committee of the General Assembly when it is finally approved.

Both Russia and Czechoslovakia refused to accept membership in the 15-nation subcommittee which is expected to finish its work in about a week. Proponents of the "Little Assembly" were certain that the boycott would not prevent final approval by the General Assembly.

It was the second time Russia has boycotted a United Nations decision. Several weeks ago she refused to participate in a Balkan commission which the political committee approved to observe the guerilla fighting in northern Greece. That was also proposed by the United States.

Today's meeting of the committee ended the week-long debate on the same note of fox-hole language which the Soviet bloc has used in declaring the "Little Assembly" was really an attemp to circumvent the Security Council.

Has Obsession, He Says

Dmitri Z. Manuilsky of the Ukraine, assailed practically everyone who supported the proposal as puppets of the United States. Herbert V. Evatt, foreign minister of Australia, who asked for a subcommittee study, suffers, "an obsession" against Big-Power unanimity, said Manuilsky.

Sir Hartley Shawcross of Britain, who yesterday asked for an end of the tough talk, "insults human reason and conscience," yelled Manuilsky. "This is noth-

Manuilsky Speaks Bluntly

New Byrnes Book Puts Him On Soviet's Warmonger List

(See today's instalment of "Speaking Frankly," on Page 1, Section II.)

By a Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Former Secretary of State James Byrnes has joined the Soviet list of "warmongers."

Dmitri Z. Manuilsky took umbrage at several things in Byrnes's book, "Speaking Frankly," which he said contained threats against the Soviet Union.

"It asks for war, no less, against the Soviet Union," he said.

The book "only serves to unveil the true warmonger," he asserted.

The book, he said, disclosed that Byrnes recommended that Soviet armies should be "removed by force" from eastern Germany and that "more atom bombs should be made."

Manuilsky said that Byrnes also recommended a separate American peace treaty with Germany, without the Soviet Union participating.

Actually Byrnes said the Western allies should proceed "early in 1948" to make peace with Germany without Russia if the Soviet Union refused to participate. Then, Byrnes went on, Soviet troops should be expelled forcibly, if they refused to leave eastern Germany.

Cartoon Pictures 'Ike' As 'Aggression' Cook

Moscow, Oct. 18 (AP).—A Literary Gazette cartoon today pictured Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a cook's uniform, preparing a dish from kettles marked "intrigues," "aggression," and "atomic blackmail."

The Gazette, which has criticized President Truman and other high United States officials, printed a caption above the Eisenhower cartoon quoting him as saying "I hope to be remembered as a chief of staff who did something to improve Army cooking."

Peace Offer Made in Paris Transit Tie-up

Follows General Strike Threat Issued on Eve Of Commune Elections

Paris, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—First break in the paralyzing Paris transit strike came today when Minister of Labor Daniel Mayer announced the government has agreed to study the question of "equalizing" the wages of bus and subway workers with salaries paid out by the newly nationalized gas and electricity industries.

Mayer said the government's decision was taken at an emergency afternoon meeting of the inner cabinet presided over by Minister of State Pierre Teitgen. Until now the government has refused to discuss increased pay for the strikers.

First Strike Violence

The first sign of a government concession in the strike followed a Communist threat to call a city-wide general strike on the eve of the showdown struggle between Communists and Gen. Charles de Gaulle's new anti-Red Party in municipal elections tomorrow throughout France.

In 36,000 communes across France, voters were said to be minimizing local issues, even though they were preparing to elect municipal councillors. The question tomorrow was communism—the strikes the party had inspired, and the anti-American aid line it had adopted.

Some 25,000 Communist-led bus and subway employes voted this morning to continue their crippling five-day-old walkout. Eugene Henaff, Paris area secretary of Communist-dominated General Federation of Labor (CGT), flung down a general strike threat in a fiery speech to the strikers.

Seamen Win Pay Rise

Introducing violence for the first time, the strikers beat up one non-striking worker, fought with police, hijacked government-operated buses and reinforced their picket lines.

In a whirlwind bid for votes, the Communists prepared to bombard the government with an entire new series of wage demands and denounced Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier as a strikebreaker, traitor to the working class and "agent of American capitalism."

Henaff met this afternoon with National Federation of Employers officials and presented demands for a flat 15 to 20 per cent wage increase, pending a general upward

Greece Closes 2 Communist Newspapers

Sophoulis Says Press Isn't Free to Advocate Solidarity With Rebels

Athens, Greece, Oct. 18 (AP).—The Greek government, acting on the initiative of its liberal ministers, struck hard at Communist propagandists tonight and closed Communist Party and EAM newspapers by police action which may have been agreed to by the American and British embassies.

The police occupied the offices of Rizospastis, the Communist Party morning newspaper, a Communist weekly, issued from the same headquarters, and the offices of Elletheri Eliada, organ of the Communist-directed EAM, a so-called national resistance group.

No Arrests Made

No arrests were made.

The liberals in the coalition government thus succeeded in doing in 24 hours what the previous Rightist administration had not dared to do in 16 months, apparently because of fear of the international reaction.

Liberal Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said that the Greek press was at liberty to criticize the government but when "the press manifests solidarity with the guerillas and incites the people to take to the mountains" the government would have to take security measures.

[According to the United Press, Rizopastis' editors and printing plant manager had been fined and sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment yesterday because they printed "false stories" and remarks "insulting" to Dwight Griswold, chief of the American aid mission. In hiding, they were convicted in absentia. In its final edition this morning, Rizopastis hinted that it intended to publish underground.

[Meanwhile—members of the American aid mission to Greece attended conferences tonight in an effort to avoid a threatened general strike by 500,000 workers demanding wage increases. The Greek labor confederation demanded a wage boost of 30 per cent along with other benefits before November 5.—Editor's note.]

Army Changes Due

Premier Sophoulis confirmed reports in the Liberal Party newspaper Vima that changes were being made in the Greek army high command, but gave no details.

The newspaper said Lieut. Gen. Constantine Ventiris would be replaced as chief of staff by Maj. Gen. Kallegeropoulous, commander of the Second Army Corps. Lieut. Gen. Spiliotopoulos, inspector general, was being retired, the paper reported.

General Rawlings, chief of the British military mission, was reliably reported to have opposed the changes. Maj. Gen. W. G. Livesay, chief of the United States military mission, was reported to have told Sophoulis that Ventiris was "the best man in the army," although he did not actually oppose the changes.

Former OSS Man Tells How Nazis Spilled Their Secrets

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

German publication of railway freight rates tipped off the United States to prime bombing targets, a former OSS man disclosed yesterday.

He is Walter Levy of 1835 Monroe st. nw., who during the war served as the Office of Strategic Services representative on the Enemy Oil Committee, a subcommittee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Further, smart, painstaking American intelligence work not only enabled this country to know, with a maximum percentage of error of only 5 per cent, Germany's petroleum situation, Levy said, but in one case to get wise to a high Nazi rascal before Hitler himself did.

Levy, who has just been awarded the President's Certificate of Merit for his wartime services, is now head of the Department of State's research and intelligence operations on oil. He recently served as petroleum adviser for the American delegation of the Austrian Treaty Commission.

While in England before the war, Levy had learned that the Germans published freight rates in an obscure railway journal, and realized their potential intelligence value.

They were obliged by decree to grant reduced rates for oil produced in Germany, and these rates became effective only when published in the bi-weekly journal, usually about two months before a plant started actual operations.

"Through OSS channels we were

More Health Funds Asked By Truman

Report Says Money Spent for Research Should Be Tripled; Policy Lack Denied

National expenditures on medical research, including Government outlays for this purpose, should be tripled, the White House urged yesterday.

The recommendation was made by the President's Scientific Research Board, and indorsed by Mr. Truman. It was contained in the last of a five-volume series issued by the board under the general title of "Science and Public Policy."

The report released today, "The Nation's Medical Research," warned of a critical shortage of investigators in medical and allied research, and called on the Government to take the lead in remedial action.

Lack of Policy Decried

It also pointed out that although the Government undertakes one fourth of the Nation's medical research work, it has no national policy to guide it. Assistant to the President John R. Steelman, chairman of the board and issuer of the reports, recommended that an advisory committee of Federal and non-Government medical scientists should be established at once. It should deal with "large-scale, long-range planning for a national medical research policy."

In making the report public, Mr. Truman again stressed the need for a national health insurance system, a program which he has sought to create ever since he has been in office.

Noting the report's recommendations, the Chief Executive added:

"Increasing research expenditures and training more scientists will not improve the health of our citizens unless the results of medical research are made available to them.

"I have previously emphasized that our national welfare demands a health program which will bring medical care within the reach of all of our people.

Insurance Plan Asked

"Only a national health insurance system will meet that need. Such a system together with an expanded and well-balanced research program, and an increased supply of medical scientists and doctors will strengthen our Nation and reduce unnecessary human suffering."

The President pointed out that publication of the fifth volume completed the task of the Scientific Research Board. He termed the series of volumes a "comprehensive and farsighted attack upon the complex problems of the Nation's scientific research."

National expenditures for medical research should be brought up to 300 million dollars a year as quickly as possible, yesterday's report said. At present, the Nation spends about 110 million dollars annually for this purpose. Of this sum, the Government puts out about 28 million dollars, half of it spent by the Public Health Service and most of the rest by the War and Navy Departments.

The Government should increase its support of medical research, but the funds it uses should "supplement, not replace" other funds spent by private and educational institutions, the report said.

Krug Finds Resources To Back Aid

Program of Relief Won't Hurt Living Standard, But He Warns of Shortages

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

America has the natural resources to support "a considerable program of foreign aid" without endangering the national security or our standard of living, Interior Secretary Krug has reported to the White House.

The Nation's industrial and agricultural capacity is adequate to sustain Marshall Plan aid to Europe on an export rate close to the phenomenally high levels of the first half of this year, he implied.

But the program will intensify shortages and raise difficult problems with five commodities, Krug admitted. These are wheat, coal, steel, nitrogen fertilizer and certain industrial machinery. In general, he said, these problems can be minimized by careful screening of European requirements and "channeling of supplies."

Report Cheers Truman

Krug's report, a 240-page study prepared by the Interior Department with the help of many other Federal agencies, is one of three commissioned by the President to throw light on the problem of foreign aid. It deals exclusively with the adequacy of our physical resources and our productive capacity.

The other reports are being prepared by the Council of Economic Advisors and a public committee under the Secretary of Commerce. They consider respectively the economic impact on the United States of aid abroad and the nature and quantities of aid which may be "safely and wisely" accorded.

In making public the Krug report today, Mr. Truman noted that these other factors must also be considered. He promised to release the other two reports dealing with them as soon as they are completed. Meantime, he said, "the fact that our natural resources are adequate to permit sharing is heartening."

Krug's Intention Unclear

Krug's report was in most respects highly optimistic, even though it took as an underlying assumption the most difficult situation. This was that the present high prosperity—and therefore very high demand for goods by domestic consumers—would continue for the next five years.

Even so, the report found, aid to Europe in—presumably—about the terms of the Paris Conference Marshall Plan program could be granted. And it could be done without dangerously depleting our exhaustible natural resources and without diverting essentials from American producers and consumers.

This in itself appeared to be an answer to questions raised by Marshall Plan critics on whether we can feed Europeans without underfeeding Americans.

Even the difficulties in the five commodities mentioned, the report said, are mostly short-term problems, relating principally to next year.

What Krug meant by the possi-

Out-of-Date Quota

Chest's Goal of $3,900,000 Regarded Only as Starter

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The Community Chest Federation is asking for $3,900,000 to meet its next year's needs and that's a lot of money, but——

It isn't as much as the federation asked and didn't get last year.

It doesn't take into account, in most cases, the sharp increases in cost of living to federation employes, who can't hope, under next year's budget, to get salary increases which would give them pay comparable to similar employes in other agencies.

It doesn't allow for increased case loads, in case Congress continues its policy of paring public welfare funds down below acceptable minimums.

But the most tragic thing—the thing that makes $3,900,000 seem like a small sum to federation workers—is what insufficient funds does in terms of human values.

One agency head explained that the people who came to his agency for help "come before their situation has completely deteriorated."

"They come early enough in their difficulties that the marriage can become better, that children can be helped, that health can be improved, that employability can be strengthened, that self-confidence can be regained, that the emergency can be handled.

"To deny people this help, or to give a limited service, because of insufficient funds can only contribute to breakdown of the home, to an increased divorce rate, to more juvenile and adult delinquency, to worry and oftentimes continuing poor health, to less productive employability, to loss of self-confidence, to increasing breakdown due to inability to meet emergencies."

Federation officials hope that the campaign quota will be greatly oversubscribed this year. If it isn't, they know they are in for trouble. They didn't set the quota higher because they didn't feel it would be fair to ask the volunteer solicitors to try to reach a goal higher than last year's $4,200,000, when last year's campaign was unsuccessful.

If this year's quota isn't oversubscribed, they know there are grim days ahead.

To some extent, this year's chest

Chest Workers to Hear National Official

The Community Chest Federation hopes to raise $3,900,000—and more if possible—this year to finance operation of 125 Chest agencies during 1948.

The campaign toward this goal opens November 6, and runs to November 25. Already preliminary organization is being completed.

Among activities planned for this week is a meeting tomorrow night when more than 1000 members of boards of directors of Red Feather agencies will hear an address by the president of the national body of Community Chests and Councils of Social Agencies.

Communism Looms

5 Weeks in Europe Convince Legislators Aid Must Be Quick

Members of Congress back from five weeks overseas yesterday urged immediate aid to "prevent a complete downfall" and surrender of Europe to communism.

A nine-member joint Armed Services-Appropriations Committee headed by Representative Short (R., Mo.), reported it had found "a sick and saddened world" on its 18,000-mile survey. It called unanimously for immediate action to put the Marshall Plan for self-help into effect.

The Short committee did not suggest a special session of Congress to speed help to Europe, though assurance that such a session would be called if necessary came from another congressional source.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley, himself just home from a European tour, said President Truman would call a special session if key legislators decided it was necessary. The Kentuckian made this statement after reporting on his findings at length to the President.

He said he told Mr. Truman he had seen "thousands of undernourished people" in the course of his trip to every European country except Russia, Yugoslavia and Albania. He said he found people hard at work everywhere doing for themselves what they could.

In the background of these demands for speed in aiding Europe were private predictions among officials working on the Marshall Plan that its cost may go above the $22,400,000,000 requested. These officials say the 16 countries of Western Europe participating in the plan may well have overestimated their ability to build up their exports in the four years covered by the program. They feel also that the countries may have been too optimistic in basing the buying power of their scant dollar supply on an expected 12½ per cent drop in prices here.

The Short committee reported

Filmdom Red Inquiry Opens Tomorrow

Jack Warner, Mayer Due to Testify Here in 'Biggest Fall Show'

(Related story on Page 1, Sec. IV.)

By The Associated Press

Jack Warner, vice president of the company that filmed "Mission to Moscow," was billed yesterday as Witness No. 1 when the House Committee on Un-American Activities starts hearings tomorrow on communism in Holywood.

The movie stars come along later for what Washington expects to be the biggest show of the fall investigating season. No feminine stars have been tapped to testify. But the witness list has names like Robert Taylor, Gary Cooper, Robert Montgomery, Ronald Reagan, and others.

From the start, the committee plans to begin "naming names" and developing through questions and answers whether the movie capital is infested with Reds.

And the opening day of the inquiry is expected to throw some light on a report from a subcommitte last May that "some of the most flagrant Communist propaganda films were produced as a result of White House pressure."

Wood, Mayer to Follow Waner

Today, the stage was being set in the big, marble-lined caucus room in the Old House Office Building. Movies, radio, television and the press busily moved in equipment for recording the investigation.

Hollywood lawyers were flying into town. Key witnesses were due to arrive throughout the weekend.

To follow Warner on the first day, the committee has picked Sam Wood, independent producer and director, and Louis Mayer, production chief of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which starred Robert Taylor in "Song of Russia."

"Mission to Moscow" and "Song of Russia" figured in testimony taken secretly in Hollywood last spring by a subcommittee headed by Representative J. Parnall Thomas (R. N. J.), chairman of the full committee. While on the Coast, Thomas said Lowell Mellett, administrative assistant to the late President Roosevelt, was responsible on orders from his superiors for Taylor's playing in "Song of Russia" when the star wanted to join the Navy instead.

Mellett Denies Story

Upon returning to Washington, Thomas attributed some Communist propaganda in films to Wihte House pressure. He also said that Warner and Taylor had been "cooperative" witnesses.

Warner Brothers' "Mission to Moscow" was based on a book by Joseph E. Davies, who visited Russia on an assignment from President Roosevelt. Davies is on the list of prospective witnesses for the hearings.

Mellett, now a Washington Star columnist, denied at the time—and again today—that he was responsible for Taylor's role in "Song

Grain Export Load Largely Shifted to U. S.

Argentine Shipments Show Amazing Drop For Postwar Period

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's tremendous response to the appeals of a hungry world since the ending of hostilities is shown in statistics recently prepared by the Office of Foreign Relations of the Department of Agriculture.

The figures also show an equally amazing drop in Argentina's exports. In fact, they indicate that if the Argentine furnished as much as half the grain for export now as it did before the war, the present concentrated drive in this country to conserve food would be unnecessary.

For every 100 bushels of grain exported by this country in the years before the war, we are now exporting almost 1200 bushels.

On the other hand, for every 100 bushels of grain Argentina exported before the war, it is now furnishing only about 37.

In the five years from the crop year ending June 30, 1934 to the year ending June 30, 1938, inclusive, Argentina exported an average of 11,637,200 long tons (2240 pounds) of grain.

Last year it furnished only 4,220,500 tons, or about 37 per cent.

In the similar prewar period the United States exported only 1,316,800 tons a year; last year, ending June 30, it exported 14,903,000.

In the five prewar years, Argentina was the top grain exporter of the world, furnishing 41 per cent of all grain going into foreign commerce. Last year it dropped to third place, and furnished only 14.8 per cent of the world's grain exports.

In the same five-year prewar period the United States was fourth largest exporter of grains; furnish-

Margaret Truman To Sing Dec. 22 at Constitution Hall

Margaret Truman will appear at a recital in Constitution Hall on December 22 at 8:30 p. m., it was announced yesterday. She also will appear at the Lyric Theater in Baltimore December 19.

The Washington engagement will conclude Miss Truman's first Nation-wide tour, which opened Friday night in Pittsburgh, a recital drawing a cool reception from critics.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Fred Lissfelt found her voice "childish," and Ralph Lewando of the Pittsburgh Press, said she had a "likable voice, but its training is very faulty."

The Washington Post's Paul Hume reported that she "should refrain from public appearances for at least two or three years," during which time she should "learn to sing properly."

The editorial, which backed a Loudoun County-wide campaign for traffic safety, was written by 15-year-old Harriette Armstrong Graves, only child of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Graves of Ashburn, Va.

Wheat Tops $3 Again

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Possible abandonment of poultryless and eggless Thursdays as a grain-saving measure will be thrashed out tomorrow.

Charles Luckman, chairman of President Truman's Citizens Food Committee, will meet with representatives of the National Poultry Producers Federation to hear arguments for returning poultry to Thursday menus. The poultrymen's suggestion has been rejected once by Luckman, who later retreated far enough to say he was open to conviction.

The poultryless Thursday angle of the President's program to save grain has been its most criticized feature. First reaction to the announcement was startled realization that Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day, all traditional turkey days, fall this year on Thursdays.

Then poultrymen and politicians from poultry-raising States advanced the argument that fowls must either be sold or remain on the farm and continue eating the very grain the program was designed to save. Luckman's rebuttal has been that lowered demand would result in raising fewer fowl.

The poultrymen's stand was strengthened last week by an Agriculture Department report showing poultry on hand in cold storage plants at a record high for October 1.

Rules for meatless Tuesdays already have been relaxed. The committee moved last week to encourage consumption of meat by-products, including liver, kidneys, brains and other items described as plentiful.

In the face of Administration efforts to increase supplies of grain, bread prices rose in three Eastern cities last week and December wheat again went over $3 a bushel yesterday on the Chicago market. Among measures aimed at cutting wheat consumption, Mr. Truman has asked that everyone save at least one slice of bread a day.

The decision on eliminating poultryless and eggless Thursdays was said to hinge on willingness of poultry raisers and feed manufacturers to cut down on use of wheat and corn in poultry feeds.

Luckman has said in the past that his committee keeps the food program under constant review and is ready to consider any suggestion that might save grain. As one food manager said yesterday: "The committee isn't wedded to the idea of poultryless Thursdays just for the sake of having them."

Tomorrow's meeting will include representatives of feed manufacturers as well as poultrymen. Feed men were called in after a series of meetings with poultry raisers achieved no agreement.

Bakers in Doubt About Food Plan

Pledge Is Given

Clubwomen Back Drive To Save Food

Directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting in the Statler Hotel, yesterday pledged their organization to support the Nationwide campaign to save food for Europe.

The pledge to cooperate followed an unscheduled address by Don Belding, vice chairman of the Citizens' Food Committee, in which he stressed food as a weapon in foreign policy for peace.

Americans eat about 25,000 calories per person per week, Belding said, and by adherence to the President's conservation program would give up only about 400 calories per person per week.

Earlier the group had adopted resolutions urging: Voluntary rationing; a special session of Congress, if necessary, to provide funds for European relief; refusal by women to make unnecessary purchases at present inflationary prices, and "aggressive remedial action" by Congress to halt further spiraling of prices.

Other resolutions urged appropriation increases for the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture and establishment of an education reference section at the Library of Congress to increase its usefulness to persons throughout the country.

"There has been a deliberate conspiracy to run down women in the magazines," Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, 2345 Ashmead pl. nw., former federation chairman of legislation, told the directors. In support of her contention, she quoted articles from a number of magazines.

Some See Difficulty In Achieving Part Of Desired Savings

Washington bakers yesterday publicly expressed a willingness to attempt to cooperate with the 11-point program to conserve wheat in the baking industry.

But privately, some declared they expected difficulty in making some of the savings proposed.

The national program, announced Friday, was agreed upon by the baking industry and the Citizens Food Committee. It features greater sale of small bread loaf sizes, now being made; greater use of non-critical ingredients; reduction of waste in baking and sale methods, less varieties and simpler baked goods.

Several bakers, who refused to be identified by name, expressed the belief that the housewife, pressed by high prices, would not accept less value unless prices were reduced. And reduced prices, said the bakers, are not possible because of rising costs.

Other bakers insisted that wheat savings are compulsory to protect their own interests.

"If we don't save the wheat," said one, "we'll be cutting our own throats, for the Government will get it somewhere for export, and there will be nothing left for us."

Increased bread prices of a cent a loaf have been announced for Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh. Wheat prices were blamed for the increase.

No increases have been announced in this area, although bakers said "we've talked about them recently."

Paul K. Corcoran, general manager of Holmes Bakery, said bread retails here at 12 or 13 cents, and "we're about 3 cents a pound under most of the country—and we think we're making a better loaf of bread."

He said, "We will go along to the best of our ability in the wheat-saving program."

Elimination of consignment selling, whereby the bakery takes back from stores the unsold bread, was termed "the best feature" of the bakery program by Lewis G. Graeves, general manager of the Charles Schneider Baking Co., who participated in drafting the program.

"We've got to get 100 per cent cooperation, though, or it's no good," he said. He suggested that to save wheat, people who cannot use a whole loaf of bread before it spoils should buy rolls instead, "and save wheat and money."

Production of a smaller bread loaf was not recommended, because of difficulty in obtaining special machinery and State weight laws prohibiting it.

Meanwhile, the local Citizens Food Conservation Committee is preparing a list of about 100 organizations to be represented on the general food committee, headed by James E. Colliflower.

In a telegram to the national food committee, the District Commissioners said they had taken $2000 from the District's emergency funds to aid the local committee.

District Milk Price Depends On Virginia's

Authorization of a milk price rise in suburban Virginia will bring an "immediate" price increase in the entire Greater Washington area, a milk producers' spokesman said yesterday.

A decision on the Virginia increase is not expected before two weeks from the Virginia Milk Commission, which conducted a lengthy hearing on the subject Friday. Approval will boost the price of home-delivered milk to 21 cents a quart.

An official of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which requested a one-cent increase, refused comment on the fate of milk prices in Washington and Maryland if the request is refused.

Even opponents of the rise admitted there is little likelihood that the request will be denied. Virginia prices are the only ones under control in this area.

Asked to comment on the Justice Department's study of complaints about milk prices in Greater Washington, revealed by The Washington Post on Friday, the producers' spokesman said:

"All we know about it is what we've read in the papers."

At the conclusion of Friday's hearing, marked by heated consumer opposition, all factions were given five days to file supplementary briefs.

Legislators Ask Immediate Aid

it was convinced that "the Marshall principle or a similar plan . . . must be considered without delay."

"Since communism thrives on chaos, hardship and disorder," the report continued, "the committee believes that in order to prevent a complete downfall of Europe, United States aid must be forthcoming at the earliest possible time.

Some nations already have taken leads along the line of helping themselves. England is showing a greater determination to fight its own battle. Italy has evidenced its desire to go to work for recovery at once.

"France, in spite of tremendous handicaps, is making a valiant struggle to get back on its feet. In Germany, many factors, including the lack of Russian cooperation and absence of local German leadership, continue to hamper efforts toward progress."

Congressional Investigators Return After Flight Ordeal

MAKE A SAFE LANDING IN WASHINGTON—Members of the House Armed Services Committee—whose plane was crippled after leaving the Azores—arrive at Washington National Airport yesterday after safely completing the return trip from Berlin, where they had investigated the American Zone. Leaving at ATC plane are (bottom to top, left side) Dewey Short (R., Mo.), Lansdale Sasscer (D., Md.), John Fogarty (D., R. I.) and Leroy Johnson (R., Calif.), and (right side, botton to top), George J. Bates (R., Mass.), Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) and Leon H. Gavin (R., Pa.), C. W. Bishop (R., Ill.) is in the center, rear. Representative Smith was praised for courage in reassuring fellow passengers and Congressmen during the four hours that their plane—with one motor out—fought its way back to the Azores

'Austerity' Parliament Opens Tuesday

London, Oct. 18 (AP).—With centuries-old pomp, King George VI will open on Tuesday a new session of Parliament that has the unpleasant task of imposing tighter austerity on Britain this winter to combat the economic crisis.

Booming gun salutes, the colorful royal procession and all the gay trappings that mark the traditional state occasion will be in sharp contrast to the "speech from the throne" outlining the labor government's program—almost certain to call for higher taxes, harder work, and a lower standard of living.

Princess Elizabeth, having reached the age of 21, will make her first appearance before Parliament, riding to Westminster in a coach by herself.

Heading the government's program for the parliamentary session—third since the Laborites were voted into power in 1945—are expected to be proposals for the nationalization of the gas industry, independence for Burma (agreed to in a treaty signed yesterday), revision of the penal system with possible abolition of the death penalty, and a new "anti-inflation" budget.

The budget, which treasury sources say probably will not be introduced by Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer, until November, is expected to carry increases in purchase taxes and the distributed profits tax. Some form of compulsory savings, to be deducted from weekly pay envelopes, also may be enacted, the sources said.

Krug Reports U. S. Resources Will Support Aid Program

bility of minimizing those difficulties through the "proper channeling of commodities in short supply," was not made clear in the report. He did not recommend a system of priorities and allocations, such as was in effect during the war.

He may have had such a program in mind, however, or he may have been thinking of some voluntary sort of rationing at the producer level, dependent less on Federal controls than on persuasion and industrial agreement.

The report considered the effects of a foreign-aid program in two ways: The impact on resources and the impact on "supply."

With respect to the first, the problem is not seriously intensified by the export program, the report implied. It points out the need, however, for an expanded conservation program and a stepped-up effort to discover new resources and basic raw materials, Krug and Mr. Truman noted.

The supply impact, the report said, has to do with obtaining adequate amounts of commodities which are not currently being produced in large enough-volume even though the resources are available for development.

It is this sort of problem which is raised by the shortages in wheat, coal, nitrogen, steel and machinery, Krug declared.

Shortages U.S.-Caused

But, he said, these supply difficulties and danger spots are not generally attributable to exports. Rather, they are caused by our own full-employment economy.

"The studies of specific commodities . . . reveal that, in most instances, exports are not a large claimant for the current high levels of production and, indeed, are not relatively as large as before the war," the report asserted.

"They also show that most of the supply problems are short-run problems that will tend to diminish throughout the five years under study both because increases in some of our domestic capacities are being undertaken and because the foreign aid needs for many critical commodities can be expected to taper off sharply as production abroad gets under way.

"The fact is that, with our production and employment, capital investment and personal consumption at the highest levels ever reached in times of peace, we are suffering from the unaccustomed inconveniences of a sudden and unprepared for high-employment economy.

"This condition is owing far more to the pressures of internal demands than to exports."

Krugg concluded that steel was the "most troublesome problem of all." It is the principal European bottleneck, yet it competes most severely with domestic demand. Correction of the shortages present the most difficult headaches.

Present iron and steel capacity is not adequate to meet the demands, if the present high prosperity continues, Krug said. Nevertheless, he did not recommend increasing that capacity. His reasons were that steel would be consumed in that very process, and adequate supplies of scrap are not available to supply larger ingot capacity.

Instead, he recommended that present capacity be utilized 100 per cent (some six million tons less than rated capacity will be turned out this year). He also called for a systematic and intensified scrap collection program, extension of some promising new production techniques, and channeling of supplies through "government-industry cooperation."

The wheat problem, Krug found, was pretty much of a one-year affair. After that, he said, our soil resources are adequate and sufficient production will depend on the weather.

Meantime, he suggested food conservation programs, efforts to limit feeding of wheat to cattle; cutting down supplies to brewers and distillers—in short, much the same program as is now being pushed by the Citizens Food Committee.

The very fact that there is such a high demand for wheat and other food products creates the nitrogen fertilizer problem, the report argued. Farmers in this country want all they can get to obtain quick increases in the volume of their harvests. For the same, and even more urgent reasons, European farmers need it.

Krug suggested it would be more economic to ship more nitrogen fertilizer to Europe than the much greater tonnages of equivalent food. He asked for fuller use of manufacturing plant capacity; the diversion of fertilizers from the domestic to the export market; and every effort—particularly the allocation of coal and industrial machinery—to put European fertilizer plants into higher operation.

The coal problem, the report said, is not one of shortage of the material or the mining facilities. Rather, it is the lack of coal cars. The problem is not expected to continue after the end of 1948, by which time European production should be greatly expanded.

For next year, the report estimated, we should be able to supply Europe with about 48 to 52 million tons. This is close to the operating maximum capacity of our port loading facilities. This would meet "the most essential foreign demands," although Europe would like to get as much as 100 million tons.

Foreign Aid Spending Hits Stride

By The Associated Press

Spending on the new foreign relief program voted by Congress in July is getting into high gear after the usual slow start in initiating such a program.

The quick speed up in expenditures was reflected yesterday in reports to the Treasury showing:

1. Final payment for "post-UNRRA relief to the people of countries devastated by war"—Austria, Italy, Greece, Trieste and China—shot up from $6157 in July and $23,162 in August, to $32,218,698 in September, alone.

2. For the special assistance voted for Greece and Turkey, they jumped from $10,732 in July to $5,161,784 in August and then doubled to $10,372,496 in September.

The September payment rates for "Post-UNRRA relief" was high enough, the Treasury continued, to wipe out the entire 257 million dollars appropriated for this fiscal year a month or two before the fiscal year ends next June 30.

Furthermore, officials pointed out, the final payments lag long behind the real "spending" of the money much like paying a bill on a charge account lags behind actual buying of the goods, except that the delay in final Government payment usually is greater.

(Chairman Taber (R., N. Y.) of the House Appropriations Committee said last week that there was no need of a special session of Congress this year to vote further foreign relief because there is sufficient unspent relief money on hand to carry the countries through this year.)

Final payments in September on Greek-Turkish aid however, were at an annual rate of less than 125 million dollars, whereas Congress provided 320 million dollars for the program this fiscal year.

In contrast, well over half of the 251 million dollars Congress put up to finish paying for UNRRA "spending" last fiscal year was checked out by the Government in the first three months of this fiscal year.

Final payment on the old UNRRA bill was $81,305,821 in July, $52,506,099 in August and $12,617,017 in September, a total of around $146,500,000.

The budget contemplated expenditure of $1,168,000,000 this fiscal year for three "foreign relief" programs alone: $660,000,000 to be spent by the Army in occupied Germany, Japan and Korea besides the $251,000,000 for UNRRA and $257,000,000 for post-UNRRA relief.

Expenditures for the three "foreign relief" programs run higher than the $1,400,000,000 in "fresh money" voted by Congress this year because some previously voted funds were left over from last fiscal year.

Total expenditures on international affairs and finance, not counting possible items to be given under the Marshall Plan—are budgeted at $4,300,000,000. This includes:

One billion seven hundred million dollars for Britain, the balance remaining at the start of this fiscal year from the $3,750,000,000 lent to Britain in July, 1946. The British have now spent all but 400 million dollars of it.

Six hundred eighty-four million dollars, the "net" amount to be loaned by the Export-Import Bank, and the United States Commercial Co., an RFC subsidiary which works on trade with Germany and Japan.

Four hundred twenty-nine million dollars listed in the budget as "other aid," and including 92 million dollars for Philippine war damage, 38 million dollars for Philippine rehabilitation, 71 million dollars for the International Refugee Organization and 228 million dollars to be disbursed by the State Department.

ing only 4.6 per cent of the grain in the world markets. Last year it exported more than all the rest of the world combined, or 52.4 per cent.

American officials last night were reluctant to advance a reason for the remarkable change in Argentina's contribution to the world food situation.

One proffered explanation is in the discouragement of production in the South American grain country through governmental controls. Although the Argentine Government is selling wheat on the world market at from $5 to $5.70 a bushel, it is paying its farmers only about $1.25 for that wheat.

Another influence entering the situation is that Argentina is asking dollars for its wheat, and at the price—far above the world market price—it is asking, food- and dollar-hungry nations cannot afford to buy from that source.

Compared with the price Argentina is asking for wheat, the export price fixed this past week by Canada for all wheat sold to countries other than the United Kingdom was $3.24.

This country is selling its wheat to food-deficit countries for the bare cost of the wheat and transportation.

Dr. Dennis A. FitzGerald, chairman of the International Emergency Food Committee of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, laid the decline in Argentine exports to a "combination of factors."

First, he said, were weather conditions, that have been "below normal" for some time.

Next, he said, "there has been some shift in land utilization. Former wheat land is being sown to sunflower and oil crops." He also blamed shortage of transportation, and some "economic changes affecting loading work hours at the docks."

Another factor he listed is a decline in acreage due to a government policy of encouraging industrial development, thus drawing people off the land. To this he added "disappointment among the farmers at the relatively low price they receive for their crops as compared with the price the government receives."

Fitzgerald declared that in spite of the high prices demanded for Argentine wheat, the need of hungry nations was such that they would buy all they could get.

One reason that more pressure is not being exerted on Buenos Aires to increase exports, and a reason which officials are not mentioning out loud, is that they see in the present trend an opportunity to re-establish this country's position as the world's greatest grain exporter.

The loss of foreign markets for America's great grain crops in pre-war years resulted in building up huge surpluses in this country. These in turn bore heavily on domestic prices, causing great unrest among farmers, and resulting in huge Government expenditures for farm relief.

This country last year also took measures to become independent of Argentina's virtual world monopoly on flaxseed. When world demand for linseed oil, made from flaxseed, became critical, that country raised prices several times above prewar.

To meet this situation this year the Government guaranteed a price of $6 for flaxseed to American farmers—about three times the parity price. This has resulted in a large increase in flax production. Last week that guarantee was renewed for next year's crop.

The following tables, in long tons, eloquently tells the great change in the world export figures in recent years:

	1934-38 average	Per cent	Year ended June 30, '47	Per cent
United States	1,816,800	4.6	14,903,000	52.4
Canada	5,171,500	13.2	6,757,300	23.8
Australia	2,757,900	9.7	1,363,900	4.8
Argentina	11,637,200	41.0	4,220,500	14.8
All others	7,904,400	26.5	1,197,000	4.2
Total	28,387,800		28,443,600

Before the war the "Big Four" nations, Argentina, Canada Australia and the United States, supplied on the average 74 per cent of the all grain exported. Of this, they exported 82 per cent of the wheat. The rest came mostly from the Danube Basin, Russia and North Africa.

The "Big Four" accounted for only 20 per cent of the rye, the remainder coming mainly from Russia, Poland and the Danube Basin.

Of oats, the "Big Four" furnished 65 per cent; the rest came mostly from Russia and Poland; and the "Big Four" provided only 37 per cent of barley exports; the rest coming chiefly from Russia and Germany.

Lord's Acre Yields $30,000 For Needy in U. S. and Abroad

Byron, N. Y., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—The Lord's Acre harvested a $30,000 crop today and residents of this farmin gcommunity said every penny would go for domestic and overseas relief.

This village decided a year ago to do something to relieve world-wide suffering and promote human understanding. Merchandise collected through cooperative community effort and hard work in the fields was sold today at public auction.

The scene was a pleasant 16-acre plot o fland just inside the village limits, called the Lord's Acre. Approximately 7000 descended on this hamlet today for the sale.

Three old black derby hats sold for $18 each. A pony brought $85. Another buyer shelled out $15 for a smal lhigh chair. A St. Bernard puppy went for $85.

Proceeds approximating $30,000 will be given to three charitable institutions and nine needy families in foreign countries. Organizations which will benefit are the National Catholic Welfare Association, Protestant Restoration Fund and the United Jewish Appeal.

The governing committee will select the nine needy families. Through cooperative community effort, they will be guaranteed sufficient food, clothing and money to carry on. Five pure-bred heifers will be sent to a Normandy village which lost its livestock during World War II.

Perhaps the best exhibition of Byron's determination to aid in restoring a confused world to normalcy was evidence in the prize cake which was offered for sale at today's auction. Seven tiers hgih, the cake was sliced into a thousand pieces. Into it went six boxes of flour, 15 pounds of granulated sugar, six pounds of shortening, seven quarts of milk, six boxes of chocolate and more than 100 eggs.

U. S. Girl Describes Escape From Reds

In Fear of Life

Communist Reich Author Flees Russia

Munich, Oct. 18 (AP).—United States agents said today that Theodor Plivier, German left-wing author who lived in Russia several years, where he was decorated for writing the warbook, "Stalingrad," has taken refuge in American-occupied Bavaria and is hiding in fear of his life.

Germans who know Plivier said he fled to Russia in 1933 when Hitler came to power and broadcast Soviet propaganda to Germany for several years, but had been desirous of quitting Moscow since 1936. He was described as still sympathetic to Communist ideology, but opposed the way it was applied in Russia.

German informants said the author obtained permission to visit the American zone recently and held several meetings which apparently were intended to convince the Russians he was carrying out a Communist propaganda mission. He did nothing more, however, than read chapters from his book, "Stalingrad," which extolls the Soviet resistance which turned the tide against the Germans.

These informants said they believed the author was "stalling" until his relatives and secretary were permitted to quit the Russian zone. He then asked American authorities to consider him in modified protective custody and went into hiding.

Cincinnati Native Tells of 3 Years in Soviet Work Camp

By Thomas A. Reedy

Fuerth, Germany, Oct. 18 (AP).—Irma Mohaupt, 22-year-old American-born girl, told a story today of escape after three years in a Russian work camp, how she walked until her feet were swollen, and eventually reached freedom in the American zone of Germany.

Now chubby and healthy, the girl's story began in Yugoslavia where she said her German-born father was killed before her eyes by Partisans, and where she said she saw Soviet troops shoot six German soldiers on a dance floor—then hold a dance on it.

The five-year story was ended by her own efforts, she said, after the U. S. State Department was unable to accomplish her repatriation.

The young woman is waiting to sail from Bremerhaven October 29 for New York. Her passage was arranged by U. S. consular officials acting on behalf of her uncle, Karl Mohaupt, of her native Cincinnati.

Carried Rocks Upstairs

Describing her experiences in the work camp in the Russian Ukraine, she said she carried rocks "up five flights of steps so they could repair a building," and did other hard work such as loading trucks with stone and material.

"We walked six kilometers (3½ miles) to work and six back and there was no time off at all during the day," she said, adding that she saw other men and women waste away and die.

She finally escaped, she said, by bribing the prison commandant and the doctor with 500 rubles which she had earned by sewing at night.

She gave this account of her experiences:

When the war broke out, she was living in Beodra, Yugoslavia, with her father and Hungarian-born mother.

One day Yugoslav Partisans shot and killed her father. Then the Russian army arrived and she was taken to the Ukraine to work on a big factory near Dnepr Dam.

Postcard Helped

Eventually she got hold of a Red Cross prisoner-of-war postcard—she would not say how—and wrote a friend near Coburg in the United States zone of Germany.

He got in touch with consular officials in Munich and they went to work to repatriate her. But nothing happened from the Russian end. And when she finally got away it was by bribing the two officials of the camp.

She "talked her way" into occupied Germany. The Russians picked her up in Saxony, but did not discover her real identity and put her to work on a farm. There she milked four cows every day and "got my share of the milk."

In six weeks her health was restored. So she fled one night with a German girl. They walked by night and hid by day. Finally they boarded a Germain train which got them to Hof on the border between the Russian and American zones. They left the train and sneaked across at another point.

When they reached Coburg, a German official wanted to send them back across the border, but she put up an argument and the German police finally got in touch with the American consul in Munich. Soon she was taken to Munich, her identity was established and her troubles were over.

She since has learned that her mother still lives in Beodra. She has written her several times through "Romanian channels"—she declined to elaborate on the phrase—, but she never has received a reply. Her mother is not a United States citizen.

She said she remembers America "very well" though she was only six years old when she left with her father and mother for Yugoslavia.

"And I am glad I am going back, there is no other place in the world for me ever again," she declared.

Bridges Sees British Zone Costs on U. S.

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said today that the United States has "to step in" and take over dollar costs of the British occupation zone of Germany and estimated the "minimum" initial amount at 500 million dollars for this fiscal year.

Bridges pointed out that Britain can continue to pay her army and military government staffs in pounds but that food and other material that must be purchased for the zone "can be acquired only in the so-called dollar area."

Increased Costs Hike Figure

"There is not much question that we've got to step in and take over these dollar costs," he said. "If we pick up the British dollar burden, it would mean a minimum increase of a half million dollars" in appropriations for occupied Germany for this fiscal year.

He said this sum was larger than the original appropriation because of increased costs in material and transportation.

(Congress last July voted 600 million dollars for all United States occupation costs. Slightly less than 400 million dollars was allocated to Germany. It was estimated in Washington that costs for the Anglo-American zone would be nearly 700 million dollars for this fiscal year.)

Bridges said his committee would study "the manner in which American money has been spent and run down certain leads and complaints we have received about military government here."

Eyes Red Infiltration in AMG

He said his group was "very interested in various reports "that Communist sympathizers had infiltrated into American Military Government."

Bridges and six other committee members arrived from Paris today for a 10-day tour of Germany before they visit Austria, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Switzerland, England, Holland and Belgium.

Bridges said individual members of his committee would visit Poland and Czechoslovakia while a special subcommittee might go to the Near East to study the oil situation.

The Senate Judiciary subcommittee on immigration also arrived here today and will spend two weeks studying the displaced persons problem and other affairs involving immigration.

Laski Says Reds Are 'Terrified' of Attack From U. S.

London, Oct. 18 (INS).—Harold Laski, leftist former chairman of the British Labor Party, declared tonight that Russia "is terrified of an attack" from the United States.

Speaking at Hanley in northeast England, Laski stressed that Russia is not capable of waging war for the next 10 years and said:

"I have talked with (Premier) Stalin and I know the Soviet Union does not want war. It is our business to know that the Soviets are terrified of an attack from the center of capitalist authority."

Laski declared that the "best investment America could make would be to give Russia a full sense of organized security."

able to find a Swiss subscriber to the periodical and regular transmittal of the relevant information to Washington was arranged.

"At the expense of not more than perhaps one working hour and a few dollars a month we were able to pinpoint German oil targets, to establish the sources of supply for many German synthetic oil plants and refineries and to determine the product produced by them.

"The rates were also used to locate new German oil field discoveries. They even indicated the planned push to Russia's Baku oilfields in late 1942 by the publication of special railway rates for Baku crude oil to German refineries some months before the Germans actually started their offensive in southern Russia.

The enemy oil committee, upon the basis of its studies, recommended that the enemy's oil industry be given high priority as a target system, he said, and "the rapid collapse of German resistance was, according to the top American and German military officials, primarily due to our attacks on the enemy's oil supplies.

"Most of our estimates on the enemy's supplies and requirements were obtained by collecting thousands and thousands of published items of information from his newspapers and periodicals.

"I once received a visit from a leader of the Norwegian underground movement who had just escaped with the records of the German Fuel Administration in Norway. We compared his official figures with our estimates, and he remarked, feeling very depressed, that if he had known that we had figures as surprisingly close as that he would not have risked his life to smuggle the figures out.

"The figures we had were obtained exclusively by a continuous study of published information and not based on secret intelligence.

"We also had completed these estimates on Germany and German-occupied countries for presentation to the joint Chiefs of Staff two or three months before the Germans were able to compile their official statistics for themselves.

"In 1941 or 1942, for example, the German Gen. Maj. Schell, who was head of their substitute fuel program, made an extensive speech on the program, its past achievements and future plans.

"I studied this speech and it struck me that it contradicted all the hundreds of little items on the development of substitute fuel in Germany which had been collected from German-published sources, and came to the conclusion that it was misleading and inaccurate.

"We have now found in the records that sometime in 1944 Albert Speer, minister of munitions, complained to Hitler that Gen. Maj. Schell had not only been criminally incompetent, but was misleading everyone on the success of the substitute fuel program.

"His incompetence and deceit, according to Speer, were largely responsible for the catastrophic oil position in which Germany then found herself.

"Schell was accordingly court-martialed."

In Washington, Levy said Schell had been "uncovered" long before Hitler and Speer were able to catch up with him.

Balkan Probe Fund Attacked By Soviet Bloc

By Kenyon Kilbon

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 18 (NYHT).—Russia made a futile attempt today to hamstring the new United Nations Balkan Committee by cutting it out of the U. N. budget on the ground that is not going to settle anything.

In the most controversial budget session so far, the General Assembly's Administrative and Budgetary Committee turned down the Soviet bid by a vote of 31 to 6, with six abstentions, and went on to approve a tentative appropriation of $611,440 for the Balkan group.

The proceedings represented a new line of Soviet attack on the majority-approved Balkan solution, and all of the Slav states took the floor during the argument to repeat that they will have nothing to do with the Balkan group and do not want the U. N. to spend any money on it.

Soviet Delegate Alexei Roschin announced that he would not participate in debate on the estimate and proposed that the budget committee tell the Assembly that no funds are available for the Balkan group. He pointed out that all the Balkan states except Greece had already said they would not cooperate in its work. He was joined in his stand by Yugoslavia, Byelorussia and Poland.

[Meanwhile, agreements linking the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund to the U. N. as specialized agencies were approved over Russian objections by a joint meeting of the Assembly's Economic and Social Committees. The vote on both pacts was 39 to 4, with two abstentions. The committees also approved agreements with the Universal Postal Union and the International Telecommunications Union without a vote.

[The Assembly's Legal Committee, handling Yugoslavia's demand for immediate extradition of war criminals, turned down the Yugoslav resolution and passed instead a British proposal aimed at insuring full study of evidence before any such extradition. The count in both votes was 35 to 7, with the Slav bloc and Ethiopia on the losing side.—Editor's note.]

Brazil Set To Break Off With Soviet

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 18 (AP).—A break in diplomatic relations between Brazil and Russia awaits only an official Brazilian announcement, it appeared today.

Foreign Minister Paul Fernandes held a long conference with President Eurico Gaspar Dutra, giving rise to speculation that announcement of the break is imminent. A high government source said yesterday an official announcement could be expected within 72 hours.

The newspaper Diario Anoite said "relations are already broken."

Brazil is expected to charge Russia with failure to give a satisfactory response to a Brazilian note asking for an explanation of Soviet press attacks on President Dutra, the Brazilian army and the government. The nature of the Soviet reply has not been made public, but it is understood in well-informed circles here that Russia refused to acknowledge Brazil's protest.

The Soviet attacks referred to Dutra as a Fascist and recalled the fact he had received a decoration from Hitler before the war.

An informed political source commented that the attacks were repulsed in a press which is controlled and must be considered the official Soviet opinion.

The informant added: "Russia is in no position to criticize other people's relations with Germany before the war."

Egypt Drafts Doctors As Cholera Toll Jumps

Cairo, Oct. 18 (AP).—The health ministry, reporting a death toll of 1849 from Egypt's 25-day-old cholera epidemic, said tonight all doctors in the infected areas had been drafted for government service. The ministry listed 247 deaths in the 24 hours ended at 8 a. m.

Bucharest Military Tribunal Quizzes Opposition Leaders

Bucharest, Romania, Oct. 18 (AP).—The official army newspaper said today Constantine Bratianu, head of the opposition National Liberal Party, and a group of other party leaders were under questioning by the Bucharest military tribunal.

The newspaper said the group was charged with not returning 100 automatic pistols obtained to fight the Germans immediately after the August, 1944, coup d'etat.

The 1944 coup came after Soviet troops entered Romania in the war with Germany. It overthrew the pro-Axis regime and preceded the coming to power of the present Communist-led government.

The newspaper charged that the pistols were never used against the Germans, but were employed during the rioting in November, 1945, when several people were slain in Bucharest during demonstrations on King Mihai's birthday.

It was the first judicial charge leveled against the liberal opposition party since last year's election. Dr. Juliu Maniu, leader of the opposition National Peasant Party, is awaiting trial on charges of treason and conspiracy.

London Dock Workers Vote Sympathy Strike

London, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Representatives of 3000 London port workers today voted to strike Monday in support of a five-day-old work stoppage by 580 cold storage workers.

The dock workers are employed on the busy Thames docks and their walkout virtually would paralyze the port of London. The stopage workers demand bonus rates equal to those paid by other companies.

Britain Without Single Operational Battleship

London, Oct. 18 (INS).—The admiralty disclosed tonight that due to rapid demobilization the British navy for an indefinite period will not have a single operational battleship in any part of the world.

Active defense of the empire and all British interests abroad will devolve upon 4 small aircraft carand 11 cruisers shared by five widely separated naval forces.

Approximately 500 warships already are laid up in reserve, including 4 battleships, 1 battle cruiser, 4 aircraft carriers, 12 cruisers and 100 destroyers.

Asleep at the Switch

London, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—A southern railway train for Winchester arrived at Alton 26 minutes late during the rush hour today because a signalman fell asleep at the switch. Unable to get a response from the signal box, railway officials sent a policeman to arouse the sleeper.

Marshall Asks Patience With U. N. Progress

Easton, Pa., Oct. 18 (AP).—Secretary of State Marshall pleaded today for world-wide patience as the United Nations struggled to find the path to peace.

Marshall, in a speech at Lafayette College Founder's Day exercises, said the U. N.'s work should be considered "in the light of how human beings proceed," adding:

"Broad perspectives are required, as well as thinking, patience and great determination."

Marshall, U. N. Delegate Warren Austin and Dr. Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, president of the U. N. General Assembly, received honorary degrees of doctors of law at the exercises.

Ignorance of History Hurts

Marshall asserted American high schools and colleges are deficient in teaching history and declared "if there were more knowledge of history in Congress, three-fourths of the speeches there would be eliminated."

"I suffered a great deal where there was lack of knowledge of what happened and as to what may happen," the wartime chief of staff said comparing American Revolutionary days to the current struggles of the U. N.

Austin said "nothing else will be available to keep the peace" if the U. N. fails.

"If we realized what has already been set up in two years to carry out the principles of human rights and fundamental freedom, there is no need to be discouraged," Austin declared.

Calls Outlook Bright

"The outlook is bright that men and women of our times will not flinch at the challenge," Austin said. "We are moving forward all the time to remove the causes. If it cannot be carried out through the Security Council, it will be carried out through the General Assembly."

Lafayette President Dr. Ralph C. Hutchison commended Marshall for his "new campaign for human freedom in the world of political enslavement."

"We honor the consecration of your great abilities to the greatest cause of international history," Dr. Hutchison said of Marshall.

To Austin, the president eulogized: "You are the ambassador of peace in the most warlike and belligerent age the international society has experienced. You have proved able for this mighty mission and have demonstrated the big proportions of your qualities and abilities. Your task has been carried through by sheer integrity of soul and consecration of heart."

The student delegate, Miss Anne Dolores Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank Ford, 2116 Branch ave. se., will speak today on "What the Confraternity Has to Offer Adults." The Richmond meeting is to be held at the Hotel Jefferson.

Sister Mary is scheduled to give a demonstration today on methods of teaching a ninth grade religious class, using as her subject the early beginnings of the Catholic Church.

French Strike Is Prolonged

revision of pay scales in December.

Two other CGT affiliates, the Paris Municipal Workers and the Civil Servants' Unions, planned to ask Monday for more pay. If the government said "no," they would strike.

Some 25,000 merchant seamen, meanwhile, planned to return to their ships tomorrow, with a 15 per cent wage hike. Fast negotiating between union leaders and the government broke up their strike in one day.

The signal for a general strike would probably come from a union leaders' meeting in Paris on Monday, when the bulk of Sunday's election returns are in.

Frightened by Threats

Some 4000 independent unionists had agreed to return to work in the Paris subways.

In the tense pre-election picture, the tall, austere man who symbolized anti-Communism, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, predicted that his new party, the Rally of the French People (RPF), would capture 35 to 45 per cent of the total vote and gain control of the councils of Paris and other large cities.

Most political observers did not expect the new party to fare that well. They said DeGaulle would be lucky to take 25 per cent of the vote.

Ramadier Is Target

It was the general belief that the Communists would poll around 5 million votes as they did in the last municipal elections in May, 1945, but would lose control of many key councils, including Paris and its suburbs.

The Communists, tossed out of the coalition government last May, hoped to show enough strength to oust Ramadier and reenter the cabinet. Sweeping successes by either the Communists on the left or De Gaulle on the right would probably doom the present government.

The Socialists, because they were split, and the moderate Republicans, (MRP) because De Gaulle took many of their members, were expected to lose ground.

'Blow to Recovery'

German Hits Dismantling As False Step

Chicago, Oct. 18 (AP).—Dr. Kurt Schumacher, chairman of the Social Democratic Party in western Germany, said today that a recently announced Allied plan to dismantle 682 industrial plants in the United States and British zones was "a step to defeat the Marshall Plan."

The gaunt, one- armed German political leader who spent more than 10 years in concentration camps, told newsmen he hoped that the voluntary food conservation plan in the United States would be successful because it would have a beneficial psychological effect on the attitude of Germans toward America in addition to meeting the dire food need.

Bevin's Terms Reported For Spain's Entry in U. N.

London, Oct. 18 (AP).—A well-informed Latin-American diplomat said today that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin had advised two Spanish leaders that Britan wants Spain included in the Marshall Plan but with Generalissimo Franco and the Communists excluded from the Spanish government.

The informant said Bevin had so informed Indalecio Prieto, exiled Spanish Socialist leader, and Jose Maria Gil Robles, Spanish monarchist, and that the two anti-Franco leaders were well advanced on plans for formation of a coalition now that Bevin has given them a "go-ahead" signal.

Hockey 'High Priestess,' 74, Runs Area Players Ragged

The 74-year-old teacher out-ran, out-shouted and out-bluffed a group of 88 high school and junior college girls.

She was Miss Constance Applebee, high-priestess of British and American field hockey, who spent two hours on the playfield at Mount Vernon Junior College Friday instructing students of four local schools.

The slim, white haired woman taught hockey as though she believed as did another Englishman that wars are won on playing fields.

It was an overlooked girl who wasn't addressed as "stupid" at least once in a voice that boomed over the field.

"Heaven help Congress if it acts like you," she told a Representative's daughter caught holding her hockey stick incorrectly.

Miss Applebee, dressed in a brown tunic that was gathered in at the middle by a fringed sash and wearing long brown stockings, exhausted eight teams of teen-agers during the two hours. She raced with the ball and players up and down the 100-yard field.

To a girl that missed a shot she said in disgust: "Anyone over eight years old can hit a ball 25 yards." The woman who introduced field hockey in America in 1901 then knocked the ball through the goal posts.

Miss Applebee who lives in England comes to America each fall to conduct a hockey camp for physical education teachers in the Pocono Mountains. She then tours private schools and colleges to see what is being done with her game. Schools participating were the University of Maryland, George Washington Usiversity, National Cathedral School and Mount Vernon Junior College.

New Soviet Bloc Boycott

ing but London fog and smog to cover the Anglo-American policies" of plunging the United Nations into an abyss from which it can never recover," he said.

John Foster Dulles, American delegate, characterized the Soviet arguments as "vituperation" in which "nuggets of real argument are meshed in a good deal of muck."

Of Poland's plea for a return to the cooperation among the big powers displayed at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam, Dulles replied:

"Out of such conferences of great powers comes the possibility of enriching the great powers at the expense of the small. If you don't believe me, just look at the map.

"We will never retreat to Yalta again," he declared.

On Russia's clamor that her big power veto was exercised often to "protect" the small nations, he replied that no proposal has had sufficient thought if it was produced by only a major power.

"We don't believe that any small group of men sitting in the White House or Kremlin have a monopoly of thoughts," he declared.

Gromkyo declared the little assembly was merely an attempt to "bypass and circumvent the Security Council" and the veto.

He defended the vetoes cast by Russia to "protect" the small powers and declared that the Soviet Union was thereby "avoiding the danger that the United States appetite for aggression is endless."

Williamsburg Palace Maze Baffles Many

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 18 (Spl.).—The twentieth century has no monopoly on confusion. The Maze at the Governor's Palace here is evidence that our colonial ancestors enjoyed a little organized confusion—for recreation.

Today the intricate paths of the Maze are popular with visitors to the restored colonial capital. They enjoy the confusion that results when they attack the network of passageways, blind alleys and dead ends formed by holly hedges.

Reward for finding one's way through the tortuous labyrinth is a bench at the center, where the frustrated wanderer may rest before attempting the return journey.

Some tourists tackle the Maze with a plan. Before starting, they climb the nearby Mount, which overlooks the Maze, and map out their course of action. Others just climb the Mount to snicker at the confusion of those who are treading backward and forward through the passageways.

Even the gardeners who clip the 6-foot American holly hedges confess that they sometimes get lost in the baffling confusion of 10 blind alleys, sharp turns, and misleading passages.

The Palace Maze is patterned after the maze in the gardens of Hampton Court Palace, near London, once a favorite residence of King William and Queen Mary.

To keep visitors from getting into a frenzy over their inability to get out of things, a gate has been installed to shorten the way out. Bewildered wartime visitors who tried to find a quick escape broke down so many of the hedges that gardeners have spent two years repairing the damage.

Incidentally, strategic ability won't help you much in this case. When the British High Command with Gen. George C. Marshall visited the Maze, they had to be rescued by an attendant.

Philippines Ask 5 Million For 3 Bases

Manila, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—A five-million-dollar annual grant from the United States probably would be sufficient to keep three strategically important bases ready for instant wartime use by United States and Philippines forces, government officials said today.

Philippine President Manual Roxas suggested to a visiting United States congressional delegation earlier this week that the United States provide the money and the Philippines the labor necessary to maintain military bases, which otherwise would become useless within six months.

Of the five million dollars annually from the United States which Roxas believes would cover the cost, two million dollars would be used to maintain the 100-million-dollar naval base at Gujuan on Samar Island. The remaining three million dollars would be devoted to maintaining two key airfields—at Peurto Princesa on Palawan Island in the southwestern Philippines and at Laoa in Ilocos Norte Province at the north tip of Luzon.

The officials pointed out that these three bases form a triangle protecting the heart of the Philippine archipelago, with the United States air base at Clark Field in its center.

Sidney Zlotnick Files Counter Suit for Divorce

Sidney Somers Zlotnick, 34, manager of Zlotnick the Furrier, yesterday filed suit for divorce from his wife, Rebecca Schoenberg Zlotnick, charging desertion.

Mrs. Zlotnick, now living in New York with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Schoenberg, already had filed suit for divorce in February, 1946, charging cruelty. According to her attorney, Roger Robb, trial is scheduled in District Court October 27.

Zlotnick, son of Samuel D. Zlotnick, owner of the furrier firm, charged his brunette wife, 36, deserted him approximately two years ago.

Robb said temporary alimony of $291 monthly was granted in July, 1946.

4 Area Schools Are Honored in Yearbook Contest

Four Washington area schools were winners in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association's thirteenth annual yearbook contest, it was announced yesterday.

Second place awards went to Eastern High School here for "Punch and Judy" and to George Washington High School in Alexandria for "The Compass." Both schools are in the 1501 to 2500 pupil class.

In the 301- to 600-pupil class, Greenbelt High School in Greenbelt, Md., won third place for "Pylon," and Gonzaga High School won with its "Aetonian."

The association compared 456 publications to arrive at the winners.

U. S. Building Up Military Stockpile

Big Accumulation of Rubber Reported As Relations With Russia Deteriorate

Behind a curtain of secrecy rivaling that cloaking the atomic bomb, the United States is accumulating a stockpile of strategic materials adequate for any military need.

Officials will not disclose what materials are being stockpiled. But reports persist that, because of worsening relations with the Soviet Union, the United States has recently upped its purchases of rubber.

These reports say the present stockpile is about 200,000 tons and that this will be boosted to 600,000—a three-year supply in wartime—over the next 20 to 24 months. It is reported further that the Federal Government is actively buying in the New York rubber market and that this is the principal reason for recent advances in rubber prices.

Such an extensive buying program would be a reversal of the Government's policy on rubber as announced March 31 of this year.

Supply Bureau Won't Tell

Officials of the Bureau of Federal Supply, a little-known Treasury Department division which does the buying of strategic material, and the Munitions Board, which directs the program, will say only "no comment."

All officials denied their secrecy was caused by the state of Soviet-American relations. They said stockpiling operations have been secret ever since the postwar stockpile program was established by the Seventy-ninth Congress in public law 520, enacted July 23, 1946.

The last session of Congress authorized for the current 1948 fiscal year 100 million dollars in appropriations and 75 million dollars in contractual authority. This was slightly higher than the previous fiscal year.

2 Billion Eventual Cost

The War Department said on August 3, in one of its rare statements on the subject, that the stockpiling program would cost $2,100,000,000 over a five or six year period. The stockpiling plan is part of an industrial preparedness program which also includes retention in stand-by condition of 60 Government war factories which cost $2,301,000,000, construction this year of an underground pilot plant for aircraft parts manufacture, and retention of 350 million dollars in machine tools and other industrial items.

Sixty-one articles are on the most recent stockpile purchase list.

They include such things as opium, used in medicines; jewel bearings, magnesium ingot, platinum, wool, talc, cork, optical glass kapol, chalk, graphite, leather, mahogany, etc.

Uranium—source of atomic energy—is listed last in the class of materials which the report said "are not now recommended for permanent stockpiling because . . . difficulties of storage are sufficient to outweigh the advantages to be gained by this means of insuring adequate future supply."

The Atomic Energy Commission announced on Friday, however, the establishment of a new division, concerned with the exploration, development and procurement of raw materials required in the commission's program.

Three Head List as Successor to Nimitz

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman's top naval advisors have laid before him their nominations for his selection of a successor to Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz as chief of naval operations — with the list narrowed to three names.

Denfeld

Nimitz himself was understood to have recommended a first choice and two alternatives to the President, while Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan and Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Mr. Truman's chief of staff also have been consulted.

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, now commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, is believed by ranking naval officers to be Nimitz's first choice and the most likely candidate.

No one would be surprised, however, to see the job go to Admiral William H. P. Blandy, commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet. The third man is Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, vice chief of naval operations.

The choice is considered a "hard" one. Secretary Sullivan told a top-ranking official only a few days ago that he was having great difficulty in choosing between the three.

Denfeld, 56, is a top-notch administrator and sea commander who is highly regarded among the leaders of both parties on Capitol Hill. An ability to get along with Congress is a must for a chief of naval operations.

"Spike" Blandy, 57, is an ordnance expert and had command of the Bikini A-bomb tests. His special knowledge of new weapons is considered an important asset in his favor.

Ramsey An Aviator

"Duke" Ramsey, 59, is an aviator— a factor in his favor—and has been Nimitz's chief deputy.

Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, deputy chief of naval operations for operations, is regarded as almost certain to be assigned to command of either the Atlantic or Pacific Fleets. He is considered a likely choice for chief of naval operations at a latter date.

In the past, appointments as "CNO" have been for four years. Admiral Nimitz, however, asked that his term be set at two years only. His appointment expires December 15, and the wartime Pacific commander has asked for retirement at that time.

Whoever is chosen for the post will not be advanced to five-star rank. No more appointments will be made to that grade in peacetime, officials say.

'Scum' Helped To Enter U. S., M'Dowell Says

Detroit, Oct. 18 (INS).—A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee charged today that members of Congress and public officials have aided the "scum of the world" to enter the United States.

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) told the Detroit Times that the committee will reveal that at least 100 Communists and Nazis are living in this country through manipulation of immigration laws with the help of Federal officials.

At least that number, he said, were permitted to cros sthe border at Detroit despite refusal of the American consul at Windsor, Ontario, to grant them visas.

McDowell said that the consul, John Bankhead, has since been transferred from the visa department.

McDowell said he has information that 125 Communist Party members or Communist sympathizers were permitted to cross the border at Detroit to attend a recent Croatian convention at Pittsburgh.

of Russia." He asked for an immediate hearing to tell his side of the story, but didn't get one.

The committee said two weks ago that Melelit was one of those for whom it had issued subpenas. The columnist said yesterday he had not been subpenaed and released a statement he had planned to make to the committee.

Mellett said he did not ask Taylor to appear in the picture "or suggest in any way that he should."

But he did say that while he was head of the motion-picture branch of the Office of War Information in 1943, M-G-M Director Gregory Ratoff came to him and wanted to know whether it would be possible for Taylor, who was getting a Navy commission, to woork on the picture until time to begin training.

Mellett Releases Letter

Mellett said he called the Navy to ask, was informed this might be possible and "was asked" to send the Navy a note explaining the movie company's request.

So, Mellett said, he got off this letter to Capt. Leland P. Lovette, Director of Navy Public Relations:

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have asked for a delay in the induction of Robert Taylor as a naval aviation cadet to permit the completion of a picture now under production with Taylor as a star. Much of the picture already has been shot, but there remains several weeks further shooting.

"This picture has Russia for its scene and the Office of War Information believes that, based on the script, which he have read, it will serve a useful purpose in the war effort. It has no political implications, being designed primarily to acquaint the American people with the people of one of our allied nations."

The National Lawyers Guild is getting ready to run a little competition with the House hearings, using some of the committee witnesses.

The Guild said yesterday in an invitation to the public to attend an "open meeting" in the National Press Building auditorium tomorrow night:

"The Un-American Activities Committee . . . has sought to prescribe what is orthodox in matters of politics, patriotism, social organization, opinion, art, education and science. It has branded all those who depart from its prescribed orthodoxy as 'un-American' . . . without fair hearing to its victims.

"By this process it has created a condition of hysteria and intimidation in which freedom of speech is stifled and liberty of all Americans is imperiled."

Committee witnesses the Guild said it has lined up for speakers include Larry Parks, who had the lead in "The Jolson Story"; Ring Lardner, jr., author and screen writer; Produced-Director Lewis Milestone, Director Edward Dmytryk, and Producer Adrian Scott.

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that S.S.S. Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the S.S.S. Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, S.S.S. Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on S.S.S. Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. S.S.S. Tonic helps build sturdy health.

At Bridge Where Maryland Meets Virginia

"WELCOME TO VIRGINIA, GUV'NAH"—T. H. Clatterbuck (left), 70-year-old Loudon County farmer and unofficial representative of the State of Virginia at the opening of the Sandy Hood Bridge across the Potomac yesterday, warmly greets Gov. Preston Lane, Maryland's chief executive, still holding the shears with which he cut the bridge's ribbon, had just crossed the new span from Sandy Hook and stepped on Old Dominion soil

Frederick, Md., Oct. 18 (Spl.).—Before an estimated 1500 residents of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, Gov. William Preston Lane of the Free State today formally opened the $1,146,000 Potomac River Bridge at Sandy Hook, Md.

He declared the 2246-foot steel and concrete span was the forerunner of a vast highway and bridge program for Maryland, and described it as a symbol of the unity of the three States it will serve.

Silk ribbons bearing the colors of Maryland and Virginia were severed by Lane. The Governors of Virginia and West Virginia were unable to be present.

Presiding at the opening was Russell H. McCain, a member of the Maryland State Roads Commission. Others present included Maj. Gen. Milton A. Record, adjutant general of Maryland; William F. Childs, jr., chief engineer of the commission, and Walter C. Hopkins, designer of the structure.

After Governor Lane had cut the ribbons, he and the spectators walked to the Virginia approach, where the chief executive was greeted by T. H. Clatterbuck, 70-year-old Virginia farmer, who said he had waited for more than half a century to see the Potomac spanned at that point.

The bridge connects U. S. Route 340 in Maryland with Route 9 in Loudoun County, Va., bypassing the Harpers Ferry, W. Va., approach to the old Potomac River span.

Censors Kill Paper's Advice That Hirohito Give Up Throne

Tokyo, Oct. 18 (AP).—Occupation headquarters censors today killed a news story reporting a New York Times editorial suggestion that Emperor Hirohito abdicate.

No reason was given, but it is doubtful if any major paper in Japan would have printed it. Most officials consider the abdication issue dead.

Occupation authorities say perpetuation of the emperor system is guaranteed by the surrender terms as long as the Japanese want it and that any change in the occupancy of the throne also is up to the Japanese.

General MacArthur had authority a tthe outset to remove Hirohito the individual, however, and possibly would have done so except for the emperor's ready cooperation with the occupation.

The Times editorial on October 15 said Hirohito should abdicate and "thereby permit his country to wipe the slate clean and start afresh under a new emperor."

It was based on war crimes trial testimony of Marquis Koichi Kido, which it said "now makes plain what has already been known in informed quarters—namely that Emperor Hirohito was by no means the 'bumbling, ineffectual ruler,' or the ignorant and innocent puppet that he has sometimes been represented, but rather a knowing and active, if weak and timid, participant in Japan's military adventures."

Control of Clouds May Ease Winter

General Electric Scientists See Success in Silver Iodide Experiment

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Schnectady, N. Y., Oct. 18 (AP).—The General Electric Co.'s rainmakers today announced new cloud controls which they said could modify the winter weather in the northern United States.

They also announced an easy way for a plane to make a hole in a cloud in order to descend or ascend through what otherwise would be a dangerous icing conditions.

The cloud holes already have been made. Not yet done, but predicted by Dr. Irving Langmuir as possible, were preventing hail in thunderstorms and stopping all ice storms, freezing rain and also the cloud icing that endangers flying.

Dr. Langmuir said it seems possible, by rainmaking methods, to decrease winter cloudiness over parts of the United States. More sunshine would get through, modifying winter climate.

How Cloud Was Cut

The cloud cutting was done last April 7. It was done in a cloud filled with unfrozen moisture that had been chilled to below freezing.

This is the kind of cloud that puts ice on plane wings. It is also the kind of cloud that turns into snow, and sometimes rain, whenever it is seeded with dry ice.

The plane flew an L-shaped course, each leg of the "L" being about 5½ miles long. Twenty-five pounds of dry ice particles were dropped.

The color of the "L" changed in a few minutes. Its moisture turned into snow, some of which at first boiled upward. This snow would not ice a plane. Soon the snow fell and the "L" changed into a canyon in the cloud. In 30 minutes this canyon was 1000 feet deep. This canyon widened and lengthened rapidly. It cut completely down through the cloud and was about three miles wide and lengthened to 15 miles.

Modifying of Winter

If a plane wants to rise through a dongerous icing cloud overhead it can cut a hole upward by seeding the clear air directly below the cloud. This air, for some distance below, is filled with liquid moisture below freezing. When seeded, this water creates an upsush that turns the cloud above to snow.

Further experiments promise to alter winter weather considerably.

This weather control is to be done by smoke generators on the ground, which instead of smoke, send floating aloft tiny particles of silder iodide. The silver floats as lightly as smoke. These particles act exactly the same as dry ice, forming nuclei on which the subfreezing water solidifies into snowflakes.

But the silver is more efficient than dry ice. It does not evaporate or melt. From generators great areas of the heavens can be seeded, and the particles will wait for the supercooled water to come to them.

Cost Would Be Small

"The amount of silver required," said Dr. Langmuir, "is entirely negligible, so the cost of the silver iodide would not be appreciable."

"If," said Dr. Langmuir, "it thus becomes possible to use generators on the ground, it might be possible to alter the general cloud formations over the northern part of the United States during the winter [illegible] would anticipate that it would decrease the cloudiness, it would prevent all ice storms, all storms of freezing rain, and icing conditions in clouds. By changing the cloudiness, it would change the albedo (the power of clouds to reflect light) and thus change the amount of heat absorbed from sunlight.

"It should be possible to change the average temperature of some regions during the winter months."

He added that dry ice dropped over incipient thunderstorms should make the storms less severe. The thunderstorms will last longer, he said, but hail will be avoided.

AFL Musicians Ban Recordings

Anticipating Move, Record Makers Have 'Canned' Enough Music to Last Years

Chicago, Oct. 18 (AP).—James C. Petrillo announced today that union musicians would be barred from making any records or radio transcriptions after December 31, but recording industry sources said they anticipated the move and had enough unissued records to last from one to two years.

The boss of the AFL Federation of Musicians said his 225,000 members were "destroying themselves" by making records and transcriptions and added, "there will never be any more phonograph records or transcriptions made by members of the musicians union.

The ban, which Petrillo said was voted unanimously by the union's executive board in a closed session, brought a quick reaction from trade sources in the industry.

"Big Three" Have Two-Year Store

"The big three—Columbia, RCA-Victor and Decca—have been making records so rapidly in recent months, both here and abroad, that they can continue to issue records for at least two years," said one man in New York long associated with the industry.

Another spokesman pointed out that the major producers have had access to music for Hollywood musical productions which will not be released until next year, and that master recordings of the music already have been made for future record sales.

Andrew Wiswell, vice president in charge of records for Muzak Corp. in New York, said the firm had a backlog of "new transcribed music to last for at least one year" and a library of 5000 selections which might be drawn upon for "an indefinite period."

However, Petrillo said the ban also wuld end "canned" shows being turned out by the networks and this posed a different problem. These so-called 'canned" programs are produced expressly for radio broadcasts and are not for sale to the public.

Petrillo said:

"Unless a program has live music to offer, there won't be any music."

The musicians' union chief said the ban on transcriptions and recordings dated from a cenvention of his union last June, but did not elaborate.

However, Petrillo hinted last summer that such a step might be in the cards. He conceded before a House Labor Subcommittee in Washington that the "big reason" for his threat to ban recordings was to make 603 radio stations "more susceptible to employing musicians."

The ban, Petrillo said, will become effective when present recording contracts expire after December 31.

The action was the second of its kind taken by the union. Petrillo forbade members to make records or electrical transcriptions on August 1, 1942. Twenty-seven months later the dispute ended in a victory for the union when the recording companies accepted terms to pay the union fees ranging from 1 to 2 cents a record.

Indifferent on Royalties

Asked today whether he believed the banning of future recordings—estimated to net the union four million dollars a year—was more advantageous to the musicians than the royalty income, Petrillo said:

"We don't care about the royalties."

Petrillo said the federation had considered making its own records and transcriptions, but that its lawyers had advised the AFM might be liable to prosecution under the antitrust laws.

In Hollywood, the ban was greeted by a mixed chorus from record interests with a refrain resembling, "He can't do this to us."

Larry Crosby, brother-manager of Singer Bing, who is Decca's kingpin, said wryly: "Maybe we'd better turn the country over to Petrillo—and let him handle everything."

Would Hurt Bing Crosby

The ban would affect Bing's radio show, which is transcribed, and his record business, too, Larry acknowledged, adding:

"Frankly, we're looking to our Government for assistance."

One spokesman identified with a top recording company said "we've been expecting this—the whole industry has been recording like crazy for several months. We'll probably keep right on until New Year Eve."

Major companies could record across the border in Mexico, then ship master records back here for pressing, said this same source, who asked his name be withheld.

He said most of the major record companies have an accumulation of master records "sufficient to keep them going for years."

Internal Dispute

2 Trustees Of Trainmen Are Removed

Cleveland, Oct. 18 (AP).—An internal dispute over methods of spending a $100,000 fund to combat "anti-labor bills" led to the removal of two members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen's three-man board of trustees, one of the removed officials said today.

The union's executive board announced last night that P. J. Baumberger of Miami, Fla., secretary of the trustees, and D. C. Bassett of Mobile, Ala., had been removed "for interfering and obstructing efforts of the president of the brotherhood (A. F. Whitney) in the matter of public relations and with the efforts of the president to cooperate with bona fide labor organizations and other organizations on matters of mutual interest."

Bassett declared there was "not one scintilla of evidence to support the charges." He asserted he would appeal to the next general convention in 1950.

Baumberger could not be reached immediately for comment.

Last February, when Whitney directed a $1000 contribution to the Progressive Citizens of America, and proposed a similar contribution to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Bassett withdrew his approval for use of the fund and Baumberger sided with him, said Bassett.

Whitney also "put a couple of people on the payroll who were not members of the Brotherhood and were not suitable," Bassett said.

Hurricane Turns, Promises to Skip Continental U. S.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 18 (AP).—A severe hurricane with winds of 115 miles an hour and mounting in size and fury took a northeast turn in the Atlantic late today without offering an immediate threat to continental United States.

A Weather Bureau spokesman said the southeastern part of the country was "well out of the path" of the storm, which was about 650 miles east southeast of Miami.

If it continues on its present course, the Weather Bureau said, it will "pass well east of Cape Hatteras, N. C.

Meanwhile, the bureau reported that the September 17 to 19 hurricane which crossed Florida and passed inland over the southeast Louisiana coast took 50 lives and damaged property and crops about $110,000,000. He said tentative reports from the gulf coast listed 34 deaths and $80,000,000 in damage. The Florida report showed 17 killed, 186 injured, 22 seriously, and property damage of $31,800,000.

Canada Declared Facing an Early Dollar Famine

Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Canada is being drained of American dollars at a rate faster than Britain, and if the present artes are maintained the "dollar famine," will hit Canada first, Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Peel, said tonight.

Graydon, speaking in support of the Progressive Conservative candidate in the York-Sunbury by-election October 20, said that the circumstances leading to this dollar "impasse" arose mainly out of the fact that "the Canadian government appears to have gambled on the Marshall Plan to solve Canada's problem."

Graydon said that there was a strong possibility that the Marshall Plan would not materially aid this country.

"The American leaders had no thought that it should," he said. "It is designed primarily for Europe."

Plasterers' Agent Denies Slowdown

At Pittsburgh

Police Fire Gas Guns in Picket Row

Pittsburgh, Kans., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Police fired bursts of tear gas today to break up picket line violence at the foundry of the McNally Manufacturing Corporation after pickets turned over three cars whose drivers were seeking to enter the plant.

Police Chief Tom Stowers said that two men he described as leaders of the striking union had been jailed and would be charged with atempt to incite a riot. He identified them as Hack Cleichan of the West Coast and Linus Wampler of Joplin, Mo.

The strike started Thursday morning over the question of recognition of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (CIO) as bargaining agent for the 90 persons employed at the foundry.

The management offered to utilize the provisions of the Taft-Hartley law for election under the NLRB but the union declined. It seeks a check-off of members against the payroll, with the alternatives of marching the members through the company office for count or taking a secret vote.

Striking Pilots Return Pending Negotiations

New York, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Trans-Atlantic flight service was resumed by American Overseas Airlines today when 173 striking pilots agreed to return to work while their dispute with the company is being negotiated.

The first AOA plane to fly since the strike started 19 days ago took off from LaGuardia field at 10:37 a. m. EST fort Frnakfurt, Germany, with 7827 pounds of mail and cargo, but no passengers.

The airline said that "it may be a day or two before operations can be restored to a regularly scheduled time-table basis."

Netherlands Gain Political Point in Java

Batavia, Java, Oct. 18 (AP).—The Netherlands won what appeared to be an important political victory today when 50 Indonesian political, religious and commercial leaders voted to cooperate in organizing a west Java government in the rich agricultural area occupied by Dutch forces.

The Indonesian Republic has threatened punishment for Indonesians who "collaborate" in organizing such separatist governments.

The round-table resolution of the 50 leaders, who claimed to represent 10 million natives in west Java, asked the Netherlands East Indies government to summon a general conference of delegates of all groups of the population of West Java, to organize a preliminary governing body along democratic lines.

West Java is populated largely by the Sundanese, a people who speak a langauge different from the Javanese and adhere more strictly to the Mohammedan religion.

Too Much Inflation

New York (U.P.). — A pledge to keep the price of a glass of draft beer down to 10 cents despite an increase of $1.24 a barrel at the brewery was made by 1400 members of the United Restaurant Liquor Dealers of Manhattan. They said they believed "inflation has gone far enough."

Workers Too Proud, He Says in Reply to Soldiering Charge

By The Associated Press

A union leader declared yesterday that construction workers are too proud of their skills to deliberately slow down home building.

Milton R. Stevens, business agent for the Washington Plasterers' Union, so told a House Labor Subcommittee after three members of the editorial staff of the Wall Street Journal testified a survey of major cities indicates worker production in the building trades has fallen off gretaly in many instances from prewar rates.

Will F. Kirby, executive editor of the business journal, expressed belief that "wastages" by both industry and labor are causing at least one out of every five building dollars "to go down the drain."

Stevens told the committe men in the building trades take enormous pride in their finished products, adding:

"No one can convince me that any qualified, intelligent building tradesman will lay down on the job."

Joseph M. Guilfoyle, a Wall Street Journal reporter who helped conduct the housing survey for his paper, said lowered output was found to be true where workers are paid on an hourly basis.

Guilfoyle testified that he was informed "contract" bricklayers in Seattle have been paid from $70 to $80 per 1000 bricks, and that on the piecework basis they lay as many as 800 to 1000 bricks a day.

In comparison, Guilfoyle said, the survey showed bricklayers who work on an hourly basis lay only from 300 to 500 bricks a day. Reports to the Journal showed the hourly rate for bricklaying at Seattle to be $2.32½, he said.

Lakes Coal Shipping Up

Duluth, Minn. (U.P.).—Total coal tonnage received at Duluth-Superior docks in the 1946 Great Lakes shipping season was 10,105,703 tons, compared to 8,912,147 tons during 1945.

All Going Well In the Lovenest

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (AP).—Juan, the lovesick llama, was feeling chipper today. He and Jezebel were practically on speaking terms.

Juan has been mooning around Griffith Park Zoo of late in a mood which his keepers attribute to approach of mating time. So yesterday they brought Jezebel South from the William Randolph Hearst ranch at San Simeon.

Jezebel acknowledged Juan's overtures in old llama custom—by spitting in his eye. The keepers explained that spitting out the cud is a common defensive move by members of the camel family.

But today all was peace and contentment. They munched breakfast from the trough side by side.

Short-Snorter Dollar Tax Collector Salvages

He lost his short-snorter dollar bill bearing the signatures of 40 former Air Corps buddies who flew with him over the Equator.

N. Y. Police Facing Brutality Charges

Thorough Investigation Ordered After Veteran and Others File Complaints

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Oct. 18.—New York police officials have ordered a thorough investigation into four recent cases of alleged police brutality.

The latest complaint came from a veteran, Peter Trian, who said he was kicked and beaten without cause in a police station by a detective, who, Trian said, apparently had been drinking.

Trian, wounded while fighting with the 29th Division in Germany, said he and his wife had been taken to the station after a family argument in their home.

The investigation of Trian's charges was launched by Deputy Inspector Thomas A. Neilson, who is in charge of New York's Third Detective District. He said he will file a detailed report with Police Commissioner Arthur Wallander.

On Woman's Charges

In other recent cases of alleged police brutality, Plainsclothesman Edwin Morton was suspended when Miss Mary C. Sullivan, superintendent of nurses at Harbor Hospital in Brooklyn, charged he grabbed her shoulder and scratched her when she tried to eject him from the hospital.

Patrolman Russell C. Wolf was suspended when he allegedly beat a civilian, and Murray Becker, an Associated Press photographer, has accused Patrolman James P. Harrington of beating him during an argument over a traffic violation.

In the Trian case, the veteran said he and his wife were talking to Desk Lieut. Michael Connolly who was trying to patch up their differences when Detective John O'Connor entered the station just in time to hear Trian say he wanted to be arrested.

"Oh, you want to be locked up, hey?" the detective was quoted. "Well, here."

Struck in Face

With that, the Trians charged, O'Connor struck Trian in the face, opening an inch-long wound over the eye. Trian said another blow to the right cheek raised a welt and cut the inside of his cheek. He said he was then punched in the stomach and, when he doubled up, the detective aimed a kick at his groin.

Trian said he turned and caught the kick on his leg where he had been wounded overseas. The veteran said the detective took him to a back room where he was held for an hour before being allowed to return home with his wife. No charge was made against him. The Trians said there was a strong odor of liquor on the detective's breath. Later O'Connor was suspended, pending a hearing Monday.

Mayor Ordered Inquiry

The alleged beating of Becker, the Associated Press photographer, took place October 6. Mayor William O'Dwyer ordered Police Commissioner Wallander to make an investigation and asked the district attorney's office to look into the matter with a view toward a possible indictment.

The district attorney called 12 witnesses in one day, including Mr. and Mrs. Becker and the policeman. If testimony warrants, it is expected the case will go before the grand jury. Becker is to appear in court October 30 on a disorderly conduct charge.

According to Becker he was stopped by Patrolman Harrington for a traffic violation and when he produced his wallet the officer saw his press card.

"Oh, you're one of those newspaper guys who has passes for everything," Harrington was quoted. Becker said he was pulled from his car, placed in a police radio car and beaten up in front of the station house.

Posthumous Safety Plea

struck a culvert, then a cement bridge railing before overturning."

Cause Not Determined

Yesterday, the Leesburg police reported they had been unable to determine the cause of the accident. The car was fairly new and apparently in good mechanical condition before the tragedy. The highway at that point is fairly straight and the car was not exceeding the 50-mile speed limit, according to the injured passengers. There is no high shoulder at the spot that would drag a vehicle off the road. There were no skid marks visible after the accident.

Harriette and her six high-school girl companions had been to a drugstore in Round Hill for sodas and were on their way to a skating rink in Purcellville, when the crash occurred at about 2:30 p. m.

Three of the girls are still in hospitals, a fourth is in a wheel chair at home.

Harriette's posthumous editorial will be published in the school paper this week. Her parents hope many people will read it and take it to heart.

Maryland Veteran Urged to Register

Maryland veterans were called upon yesterday by Charles Buscher, commander of the Maryland Department, VFW, to register on or before November 1.

Buscher yesterday appointed James R. Miller, Bethesda (Md.) attorney, and Ward C. Caddington, clerk to the Montgomery County Board of Election Supervisors, as national aides-de-camp to Ray H. Brenanman, commanding chief.

Investigation of Arlington Police Asked

A "detailed investigation" of charges that Arlington police have failed to crack down on illegal gambling operations was demanded yesterday by Daniel A. Dugan, county board member.

He said "very serious charges" had been made to him in connection with what he termed the "failure or refusal" of police officials to locate and arrest gamblers.

Dugan's demand was contained in a letter sent yesterday to Arlington Circut Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy. The letter asked McCarthy to conduct an impartial, nonpolitical investigation.

Judge McCarthy told The Washington Post he could not take a stand on the investigation until he sees Dugan's letter. He added, however, that if the alleged abuses exist, "I will make the investigation."

The police issue arose after arrest Friday night of Russell Scheele, 47, on a numbers charge. Officers reported they seized $2000 in cash and a quantity of numbers and horse racing slips at Scheele's home, 2716 N. 19th st., Arlington.

Attorney Leads Raid

The raid was conducted by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas, Police Chief Harry Woodyard, Detective Chief Capt. Hugh Jones and two detectives. The warrant was sworn out before Douglas by William B. Smith, 5701 N. 11th st., Arlington, a former Arlington policeman.

Yesterday Douglas explained his accompanying the raiding party with the comment: "Chief Woodyard asked me to come." Chief Woodyard, however, said he had no comment when asked why he had asked the Commonwealth attorney to go along on the raid. Detective Chif Jones also had no comment.

Scheele appeared in Arlington County Court yesterday with his attorny, Homer Thomas, son of Acting Trial Justice Harry Thomas. The initial trial was continued until next Friday. Judge Thomas, who normally would hear the case, disqualified himself in favor of Trial Justice Hugh Reid.

Dugan said Friday's raid "was not originated by police officials," but by Smith in his complaint to Commonwealth Attorney Douglas. Such a situation, he added, "requires immediate and detailed investigation."

He said it was "unfair" that the entire police department "become a laughing stock of a community because of the failure of some to search out and arrest lawbreakers."

Threats Reported

Complaints of Scheele's alleged gambling activities had twice come before the County Board, once during a meeting in 1945 and the second during another meeting last August. Both complaints were made by a private citizen, Manuel Lanzo. At the August meeting, Dugan had promised: "I won't forget these charges."

William R. Smith, who initiated the complaint against Scheele, said that, when he attended an October 11 meeting of the County Board in which the need for a police trial board was discussed, his wife had received a call at her home, demanding: "Get your husband away from that meeting." She declined, Smith added.

Dugan said an anonymous caller had phoned him at his home yesterday morning, demanding: "Lay off this case or you'll be sorry." Dugan said he hung up the phone without answering.

Lane Refuses to Commute Sutton's Sentence

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Governor Lane today refused a commutation of sentence to Albert S. Sutton, 48, Washingtonian convicted of murder of a Washington Times-Herald route agent, Allen B. Wilson.

The Governor said he had reviewed the file and the recommendation of F. Murray Benson, director of parole and probation, and concurred in Benson's reasoning and conclusion that Sutton should not be released.

Sutton was convicted of first-degree murder in Allegany County Court and sentenced to the Maryland Penitentiary for life. He entered the institution on May 11, 1936. He was imprisoned at Leavenworth from 1911 to 1921 for such offenses as larceny, housebreaking, robbery, breaking and entering and assault with a deadly weapon.

In his report, Benson said, in part:

"It has been difficult to maintain clear perspective in considering this case for the reason that during the course of its investigation the Times Herald of Washington, D. C., has continued to bombard southern Maryland with suggestions that there were definite improprieties in the method in which the application was submitted, and the method employed in the investigation of the case.

"The assumption has been on all occasions that because of the pressure brought to bear upon State officials by wealthy gamblers in the District of Columbia and powerful politicians in southern Maryland, the State itself was attempting to find a way to release this man.

"I took particular pains at the hearing to attempt to find the basis for these published insinuations and declarations and found no basis, except a claim on the part of some people that the person who offered the employment program (job to Sutton) was known to the police of Washington to be a bookmaker and a gambler and that the newstand at which he proposed to employ the subject was used for these nefarious purposes . . .

"I think I have resisted the temptation either to bend to the threats or to be pressed toward favorable recommendation out of resentment to the unfair and unwarranted statements."

Smoke Drink Sellers Face $1000 Fine

A Municipal Court judge and prosecutor yesterday warned sellers of "smoke," a drink made out of denatured alcohol, that they would face the maximum penalty of a $1000 fine or a year in jail, or both.

Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott sentenced James T. Smith, 44, 1834 West Court nw., to six months in jail and warned that in the future the penalty would be more severe.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Kneipp asked the judge not to be too harsh on Smith because past sentences had been much lighter. He said he would request the maximum sentence in the future.

Smith was arrested Thursday afternoon for selling "smoke on the street for 5 cents a shot. When he pleaded guilty to the charge, the judge asked:

"Are you in partners with the undertaker? Don't you know this stuff kills people?"

District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald reported that there had been 25 deaths from the drinking of denatured alcohol so far this year. Taken in large quantities it kills and produces blindness in smaller doses, he said.

PONTIAC

A fine car made finer

A Product of General Motors

Too Good to be Overlooked!

Naturally, when you select a motor car, you can't look at all the cars that are built. But you really should look at Pontiac—because it is too good a car, and too great a value, to be overlooked.

You should look at Pontiac because it is exactly the right car for so many people. It is big and fine and beautiful—and it rides and drives like a million dollars! It is dependable, too—built to last a long, long time with the minimum of attention. Yet it is amazingly economical. In fact, if you can afford any new car, you can afford a Pontiac.

When a car offers so much to make you happy and satisfied—and requires no penalty whatever in the way of cost—you surely don't want to overlook it. It's one car you ought to see.

DUE TO OUR UNFILLED ORDERS ON HAND, you may experience some delay in getting a new Pontiac. Place your order now to avoid further delay. In the meantime, let us keep your present car operating at top efficiency.

Split Imperils Ga. Democrats

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 18 (AP).—Disputing factions of Georgia's Democratic Party were warned today that Georgia could be carried by the Republican Party in 1948 for the first time in history unless they cease their bickering.

The warning was sounded by a qualified Democratic state official, Secretary of State Ben Fortson, jr.

Fortson earlier this week called on both factions to resolve their differences by compromise, and avoid possibility of rival Democratic primaries in 1948. Leaders of both groups promptly rejected the suggestion, each insisting theirs was the legal party.

Today, Fortson told reporters he foresaw grave consequences in continuation of the split, which began with the death of Gov. Elect Eugene Talmadge, and which was fanned by Georgia's dual governorship dispute last spring.

Woman Aide For 30 Years Leaves VA

MISS WINIFRED GREGG
"I counted the years . . ."

Retirement poses something of a problem for Miss Winifred Gregg, but she isn't really worried.

After 30 years with the Veterans Administration, Miss Gregg, who lives at Tudor Hall, 10th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., retired Friday.

"I don't know what it will be like to do nothing," she said yesterday, "but I did my job, and I figure I've earned my freedom."

"I've been looking forward to retiring for three years," she said. "I counted the years, and then the months and the weeks, and finally the days. Now I can't believe that it has happened!"

"When you work for so many years, you kind of get tired of it. Now I won't have to get up and go to work when it's damp and wet and slippery."

She came to Washington from Belkfontaine, Ohio, in October, 1917, to work as a stenographer with the Bureau of War Risks, now the Veterans Administration.

"It was a new bureau just getting started," she recalled," and had places all around town to house its employes. We had to get things organized—all the work was new.

"I didn't think I'd stay here so long. Washington kind of grows on you—it really is the loveliest city!"

In 1919, she became a correspondent in the Medical Division, where she spent more than 20 years. At the time of her retirement, she was a member of the committee on extra hazards of war service, where she had been since 1943.

In this work she acted as a legal examiner, deciding whether death or disability of a serviceman was due to the extra hazards of war service. Work in this division has now passed its peak, she explained, "though we have had claims in enormous quantities."

Miss Gregg's plans for the future are a little indefinite. For the winter she says she will stay here and enjoy her new freedom, though she says she'll miss the crowd at work.

"My office gave me two lovely suitcases," she smiled, "so I'll just have to go some place . . . maybe in the spring."

Montgomery Boys Win 4-H Contest

Two youths from Montgomery County and one from Frederick County will represent Maryland at the National Junior Vegetable Growers' judging contest December 30 to take place at Jackson, Miss.

The three youths yesterday won the 4-H Club vegetable judging contest at University of Maryland, in which 34 boys and 1 girl, Jo Anne Duckett, of Anne Arundel County, participated.

The winners were Douglas King, 17, of Clarksburg, with a score of 278 out of a possible 300, first place, and James Arnold, 14, Monrovia, and Ivan Rosencratz, 15, of Frederick, both with 276, tying for second place. King and Arnold are from Montgomery County.

Julian King, 15, Germantown, Montgomery Countq, with 274, and Richard Dove, 20, Gambrills, Anne Arundel County, with 270, were runners-up in third and fourth places.

Merrill Culver, 17, Hebron, and Drexel Bradley, 17, Salisbury, both of Wicomico County, won the demonstration contest and will make up the team to represent Maryland in the demonstration contests at Jackson.

Conversion To Natural Gas Cuts Suicides

The conversion of Greater Washington's three million gas burners and pilot lights to natural gas has already drastically reduced the local suicide rate.

Conversion from manufactured to natural gas was begun in the District on April 1. The job was about completed yesterday.

Figures reported yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, show the complete absence of reported suicides by gas since July 1, and 12 since the first of the year.

According to police records, death claimed 46 persons here by gas apsphyxiation in 1945, 30 through suicides and 16 accidentally. In 1946, 28 took their own lives, and nine died accidentally.

There have been six reports of attempted suicide by natural gas since January 1, all proving unsuccessful. Natural gas lacks carbon monoxide which makes up 10.8 per cent of manufactured gas and is its death-dealing element.

Nausea Changes Minds

It is "theoretically possible" to commit suicide by natural gas, but improbable, McDonald said. Death comes by suffocationfi rather than poisoning.

Instead, acute nauseau will appear, and few will have what a local medical officer called "the will power to stick it out."

Yesterday's conversion operations in the area north of the Naval Gun Factory, between M and D sts. se., and 2d and 7th sts. se., together with final touches in a few homes today, marks the end of the Gas Light Co.'s "operation conversion" begun August 15, 1946.

A New York firm, Conversions and Surveys, Inc., first tackled Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax County, Va. It completed this phase by October 1 with 500 men who worked, according to H. B. Noyes, general superintendent of the Gas Light Co., "six days a week, 60 hours a week."

Major portions of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties (Md.) were converted by the end of November. Chevy Chase and Takoma Park, Md., waited until conversion in the District began April 1, 1947.

240,000 Meters Altered

Noyes said taht 240,000 meters have been altered in the entire program. About three million individual appliances have been adapted.

Yesterday's activities in the last of 164 districts show how the job was done. While the 500 mechanics tackled separate units a portable repair truck at 2d and M sts. ne., handled jobs which could not be done on the spot.

Foremen, each in charge of some 10 mechanics, shuttled back and forth betwen the truck and assigned block areas. Short-wave radios connected the repair truck with Gas Light Co. installations in the District.

To prevent a repetition of the February 22, 1947, emergency when a break in the natural gas line from West Virginia and Kentucky temporarily shut off supplies here, a supplementary "high B. T. U." gas can be quickli produced at the East Station generating plant at 12th and N sts. se.

In addition, gas will continue to be stored in nine local tanks, two at Chillum, Md., two at West Station, 26th and G sts. nw., two at K St. Station, 1st and K sts. sw., and three at East Station. Their total capacity is 33 million cubic feet.

Washington Gas Light Co. officials are planning a "tie-in" with the "Big Inch" pipeline from Texas at Coatesville, Pa., 50 miles north of Washington. In an emergency this will supplement gas now bought from the Atlantic Seaboard Corp. at Rockville, Md.

Buses Won't Replace All Streetcars

James H. Flanagan, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, yesterday denied that substitution of buses for streetcars on the eastern Benning line would open the door to general elimination of streetcars here.

"Every instance of that kind will have to bejudged on its own merits," he declared. "This decision is not in any sense a wedge for the general use of buses."

Flanagan made the statement while commenting on the PUC order issued Thursday, granting Capital Transit Co. permission to use buses instead of streetcars on the section of Rosslyn-Benning line, east of 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

E. D. Merrill, Capital Transit Co. president, agreed "this does not mean that in Washington buses will replace streetcars on other lines in the near future."

"But," he added, in a prepared statement, "it does mean that in the case of this particular line, buses can be given better service with lesser investment."

Changeover from streetcar to bus service "in its entirety and at one time" will be made "early next year," Merrill predicted.

"In the meantime," he added, "we will prepare the schedules, which is a long job, and await the arrival of the new buses needed to supplement our fleet." (CTC Vice President E. C. Giddings said the new buses werek due for delivery in Decmber.)

"The changeover will also enable us to retire more of our old streetcars and thus increase the proportion of new streamlined cars on other lines," Merrill said.

Cannery Makes Record

Berryville, Va., Oct. 18.—A record total of 29,363 cans of fruits, vegetablesc and meats have been processed by 428 persons at the community cannery here during the last four months. Top day was August 12, when 62 persons processed 1764 cans.

5 Juveniles Admit Thefts, Police Claim

Charge Attempt On Safe; Leader Fled Reform School

Five boys, led by a 12-year-old escapee from reform school, were arrested yesterday for an attempted safecracking in a church and for two burglaries of a grocery store here.

The children, according to police, admitted the crimes and have been held for Juvenile Court action.

Members of the juvenile gang ranged from 10 to 17 years old.

According to police, the gang began its criminal activities by breaking into the Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, 11th and H sts. ne., September 28. Inside, the boys applied an alcohol blow torch to the hinges of a safe in a futile attempt to open it.

Got Cash and Medals

The boys managed to steal $25 in change and 8 to 10 religious medals from the church, it was reported.

The grocery burglaries were perpetrated on October 1 and 3. Entry to the store of Joseph Natoli, 624 7th st. ne., was gained by prying a loosened board off an opening in a roof. On the first entry, 12 fountain pens and two cartons of cigarettes were taken. On the second, 300 pennies in a canvas bag were stolen.

The gang leader, termed an "incorrigible" by police, escaped from the Industrial Home School.

Meanwhile, police said they had an admission from a 20-year-old man arrested as Washington's "laundry-a-day" holdup man. He is held without charge for a lineup at noon today.

Police say he is the man at whom Detective Sergt. Otto P. Fuss fired two ineffective shots shortly after the holdup Thursday of the Aristo Cleaners and Launderers, 2509 Benning rd. ne.

Questioned About 16 Others

The suspect is also being questioned about 16 other laundry holdups here in a period of about a month.

Credited with the man's arrest was Pvt. Charles W. Yeatman of the Tenth Precinct. Yeatman noticed the man Friday at 14th and Irving sts. nw., and saw that he matched a description sent out earlier for the laundry bandit. He was arrested as he attempted to push ahead of other passengers to board a streetcar.

Reported to police was the theft of $930 in whisky from an interstate truck in Washington late Friday. The whisky was brought here from Eureka, Ill. The truck which contained $22,000 in whisky was parked outside the Foreman Bros. ware house, 1460 Okie st. ne.

Burglars broke the window of the Romax Co., 807 Mount Vernon pl. nw., early Saturday and looted the place of 31 items, including radios, electric fans and clocks valued at a total of $524.45, police reported.

$365 Stolen at Bakery

Also, Buell Herchenroder, 23, official of the Pittle's Bakery 5037 Connecticut ave. nw., reported that during the night a burglar opened their safe by using the combination and stole $365.31.

A wrong-way holdup was reported by Edward W. Coker, 33, 227 Mississippi ave. se. He said that a man in an automobile pointed a gun at him and ordered him to get into the automobile. After a few blocks, the man gave Coker $1.51 and ordered Coker to buy him a case of beer. Instead, Coker called police.

Police arrived to arrest the driver, a 32-year-old carpenter who was wearing white pants and a hospital shirt. The suspect is being detained at Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Government Lot Closing Is Explained

The riddle of the closing of the Coast Guard parking lot at 13th and D sts. nw. nights and over the weekend last week has been solved, but not without confusion.

The answer is that parking there was free.

The lot, controlled by Public Buildings Administration, holds 143 cars, and is entered from 13½ and D sts., adjacent to the entrance of the Great Plaza parking lot, leased from PBA by Dominic F. Antonelli, jr., and F. Warren Brokaw.

In practice, the lot has been reserved during daytime working hours for cars with Coast Guard, Commerce, or Post Office Department passes. Nights and weekends the lot has been open to ordinary citizens.

Last week, a cable stretched at night across the entrance to the Government lot. Once an hour, from 6 to 9:30 p. m. a special policeman of the Coast Guard checked to see that the cable was still there. Between times, an employe of the Great Plaza lot kept drivers from taking down the cable.

The Government lot was deserted, the Great Plaza lot packed.

Nuisances Charged in Cars

R. H. Owen, manager of the Triangle District for the Public Buildings Administration, issued an order dated October 16, saying that the lot was to be kept closed from 6:30 p. m. to 7 a. m., and all day Saturday, Sunday and holidays. The following day, Friday, he issued a new order saying the guard at Coast Guard building was to check the cable only from 6 to 9:30 p. m., and on weekends and holidays.

Ferdinand Kaufholz, chief engineer in the Office of Buildings Management, said that the order had been put into effect for moral reasons. He stated that too many people from various night clubs around the area were going into the lot and "creating nuisances." Kaufholz stated that his office had tried using spotlights in the lot, but that they had proved ineffective.

When asked whether no moral question arose in the daytime on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, Kaufholz admitted, "You've got me there. I don't know. I guess it's just easier to keep the lot closed."

Antonelli Offers Version

Fred R. Brant, operations officer for the Office of Buildings Management, added that indiscriminate parking created a fire hazard, since fire trucks could not get through.

A completely different viewpoint was obtained from Antonelli, leaser of the lot. "I asked Owen to close the lot, and he did," he stated. He said that he paid $11,300 a month rent for the lot, and 143 cars per day parking in the Government lot made a big difference. It was estimated that the difference was about $1000 a month.

Owen acknowledged that Antonelli had asked him to close the lot, and close it he did. "It was the only equitable thing to do," he said.

Owen added that indiscriminate parking in the lot created a fire hazard, since fire trucks could not get through.

LyndonHill School To Serve Moose Meat Tomorrow

Moose meat will be on the menu of the Lyndon Hill Junior High School, Seat Pleasant, Md., tomorrow.

William H. Limerick, 5020 Benning rd. se., operator of a gasoline station and a real estate firm and president of the Prince Georges County YMCA, has donated to the school his share of a 750-pound moose killed in Canada by a party of eight Seat Pleasant residents.

The moose meat will be served as a regular luncheon feature at 20 cents by the school cafeteria.

Other members of the party which killed four moose and four bears in the Lake Separation area, Ontario, Canada, were: Norman Binger, William H. McGrath, L. A. Payne, William Stembler, William Dunbaugh, George Curtis, Irwin Main and B. W. Etty.

500 Will Take Part In Va. Roads Meeting

Richmond, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Four Virginians who have been in the forefront of development of the present State highway system will be among the 500 or so persons who will take part in the first annual Virginia Highway Conference at Virginia Military Institute October 31 and November 1.

The list of featured speakers at this State-wide road session will include the names of Senators Harry F. Byrd and A. Willis Robertson, Gov. William M. Tuck and former Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr.—four men whose contributions, among the many, have been significant.

Ex-Chaplain to Speak

The Mount Vernon Elementary School P-TA will meet in the school auditorium at 8 p. m. Tuesday. Gordon Crosby, former Army chaplain, will speak on "Foundations for a Better Family Life."

Socialist Is Speaker

Dallas Reynolds, national organizer for the Socialist Labor Party, will speak on "Can Depression Be Averted?" at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at Friendship House, 619 D st. se.

Washington's List Of His Negroes Brings $1400

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—A list of "Negroes belonging to George Washington" today brought $1400 in an auction sale of Washingtonia which netted $25,959.

The item, one of 242 private letters and papers of the Edward Ambler Armstrong collection auctioned here, was purchased by the Mount Vernon Ladies Society of the Union, Mount Vernon, Va. The sale was held in the Kende galleries.

Miss Emily Driscoll of New York paid the second highest price—$1300—for a group of letters from the first President to a regimental cavalry commander in Virginia, George Baylor.

A letter from Washington "advising an English friend where to settle" in the United States sold for $700 to Miss Driscoll. The letter gives a general description of the New England States.

Ex-Senator Davis Weaker; Watson Better

Two former Republican Senators, James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, and James E. Watson of Indiana, continued to fight for their lives in local hospitals last night.

Davis, 73, who also served as Secretary of Labor, was reported "weaker" at Washington Sanitarium. Watson, 83, Republican leader of the Senate during President Hoover's term, was reported "better" but "still a very sick man." He is at Garfield Hospital.

Four Corners Citizens Will Discuss Park

Discussion of a proposed public park in the Four Corners area and plans for the annual community Christmas party will be on the agenda at tomorrow night's meeting of the Northwood Park-Four Corners Citizens Association. The group will meet at 8 p. m. in the North Four Corners School, Montgomery County.

Power Studied

Law Change On Air Rifle Sales Urged

District regulations governing the sale of air rifles to children should be revamped, Lieut. William T. Murphy, head of the police juvenile bureau, said yesterday.

Murphy said air rifles are now on the market that are powerful enough to send a pellet through a one-inch board.

"We have been singularly fortunate," said Murphy, "that so far there have been no fatalities here because of these rifles."

Slight personal injuries and property damage have been the toll to date, he added.

The big question seems to be whether an air rifle is a toy or a dangerous weapon.

A test case is now awaiting decision in Municipal Court which may settle the matter. The proprietors of the Hillcrest Hardware Store, 3810 Alabama ave. se., were brought before Judge Armond Scott last week charged with selling an air rifle to a 14-year-old boy without a license.

Judge Scott continued the case until Friday and asked Inspector John H. Fowler, police ballistics expert, to investigate and determine just how dangerous air rifles are.

There are two District regulations covering the sale and possession of dangerous weapons by minors. One make it illegal for any person under 18 to possess a dangerous weapon. The other makes it illegal for any person to sell or give to a person under 18 a firearm or missile or dangerous weapon.

U. S. Chamber Demands Tax, Budget Cuts

A substantial reduction in the Federal budget with "easing" of taxes was demanded yesterday by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, while Representative Knutsen (R., Minn.) predicted taxes would be cut by the next Congress.

The chamber declared in an analysis of the budget situation for fiscal 1949 that "the combined burden of Federal, State and local taxation offers an ominous threat to future prosperity." It concluded that a "substantial reduction" in the 1949 budget could be made in spite of uncertainty of demands for foreign aid and financing the Marshall Plan.

"Substantial reduction in the 37-billion-dollar estimated cost of the Federal Government in the current 1948 fiscal year," the report said, "should be feasible for fiscal 1949, despite possible new undertakings to meet international emergencies."

One of Major Uncertainties

The chamber observed that the extent of "continued aid to foreign nations forms one of the greatest uncertainties with respect to the 1948 budget situation," and said:

"Aside from any desire to be helpful to other nations, some assistance in promoting world recovery is essential if foreign markets are to be maintained for American products and if conditions favorable to a permanent peace are to be established."

It pointed out that national defense, veterans and international matters accounted for some two thirds of the 1948 budget and declared:

"As the facts relating to these three classes of expenditures are subjected to critical examination, reductions of the present level of spending, notwithstanding claims of continuing emergencies, should be possible.

"Under favorable conditions, cuts of billions in the budget could be made."

Formidable Obstacle

As for taxes, the chamber said: "The absorption by taxes of savings which otherwise would be invested in job-creating enterprises offers a formidable obstacle to continuance of production and employment at high level.

"Lower taxes will lessen handicaps to business and by encouraging greater production will provide the most effective antidote to inflation."

Knutson, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, unconsciously revealed one deterrent to calling a special session of Congress in his prediction of certain tax reductions.

"Immediately after Congress convenes," he said, "in special or in regular session in January, we will introduce and pass a tax-reduction bill applicable to personal income taxes for the calendar year 1948."

Knutson's statement was interpreted as a direct warning to the Truman Administration that the Republican majority in Congress will insist upon immediate income tax reduction as a condition to approving any plan for stopgap aid to Europe.

While Knutson himself would not attempt to describe the sort of tax bill he believed would be passed, observers thought it would closely resemble that passed and twice vetoed last session. It was expected a community property provision permitting husbands and wives to divide their income for tax purposes would be added.

Last year's bill proposed to cut income taxes about four billion dollars a year, with reductions scaled from 10 per cent on high incomes to 30 per cent in the lowest brackets.

Administration supporters on the Hill said it was unlikely support could be mustered again to sustain a veto of a new tax cut bill should President Truman decline to sign it.

Nursery Has Vacancies

There are still vacancies in the four-year-old group at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Cooperative Nursery, Mrs. William Radner, chairman of registration, said yesterday. Mothers interested may obtain information by calling Wisconsin 2962.

Marine Held As Suspect In Rape Case

A 21-year-old Marine staff sergeant was held in Alexandria last night, charged with raping a 31-year-old Charlotte, N. C., woman early yesterday in a parked car.

He was booked by U. S. Park Police, who made the arrest, as Robert W. Des Jardines of Quantico, Va. The alleged rape was said by police to have taken place about a tenth of a mile south of Little Hunting Creek on Mount Vernon pkwy.

Meantime, Floyd C. Davis, 30, of 1132 Colonial ave., Alexandria, a salesman for the Heurich Brewing Co., awaited Grand Jury action in Alexandria on charges he raped and molested an eight-year-old girl over a period of several days early this month.

Davis, in Alexandria police court Friday, was released under $2000 bond. Acording to police, the complaint against Davis was made by the girl's mother.

Marine Sergt. Des Jardines, park police said, drove the 31-year-old complainant along Mount Vernon pkwy. after an evening of drinking at her sister's Alexandria home. The woman was bruised and had some of her clothes torn off, police said.

She told police she ran from the car and hitch-hiked to Alexandria, where she told her story to Alexandria police, who then notified the Park Police.

A Park Police patrol car found the marine asleep in his car at the location related by the woman and arrested him. Unable to make the $1000 bond set yesterday, he is being held for preliminary hearing tomorrow before U. S. Commissioner Stanley King.

Zionist Group To Hear Granados

Senor Don Jorge Garcia Granados, Guatemalan Ambassador to the United States, will address the annual installation dinner of the Louis D. Brandeis Zionist District at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday in Hotel Mayflower.

Joseph Cherner, newly elected president of the Louis D. Brandeis Zionist District, will be formally installed during the evening, along with other officers of the organization.

Clan Gregor Group Tours Southern Md.

The American Clan Gregor Society concluded its two-day gathering here yesterday with a tour of southern Maryland where the first clan members settled in America.

The gathering opened Friday with meetings in St. Paul's Parish House, Rock Creek Church.

A motorcade of 49 descendants of the migrating Magruders (one of the many derivations of the Clan Gregor) made the tour.

Taft P-TA to Meet

The first fall meeting of the Taft Junior High School Parent Teachers Association will be held at 8 p. m. Tuesday in the school auditorium, 18th and Perry sts. ne. Parents will visit the home rooms for an explanation of the school schedule. Mrs. Margaret Merritt, school principal, will speak.

Midshipman, Girl Hurt by Train on Span

A midshipman at the U. S. Naval Academy and his girl friend were seriously injured last night, police said, when "apparently" struck by a train while sitting on a railroad bridge near Annapolis, Md.

Midshipman 2/c William B. Anderson of West Branch, Iowa, received scalp injuries, "condition undetermined," the academy hospital said.

Miss Betty Ann Neal, Arlington Farms, Va., was in "serious" condition, Emergency Hospital in Annapolis reported.

Patrolman J. R. Moreland of Annapolis, said the couple had been sitting on the Annapolis end of a wooden span across College Creek, on or near the railroad ties, and at least one was hit by a Baltimore and Annapolis train.

Both were hurled down an embankment along the creek, Moreland said.

In Fairfax County, Va., two brothers were hurt when their car left the road.

John D. Dellinger, 20, and R. V. Dellinger, 16, Fairfax Station, Va., were injured when the auto driven by the former plunged off County Route 647, ten miles from Fairfax Court House, and hit a tree.

Arlington Hospital listed their injuries as possible fractures and lacerations of head and body.

In Washington, Herbert T. Mosely, 6, of 1225 8th st. nw., received head injuries when struck by a cab driven by William R. Burruss as he darted from between parked cars in front of his home. He was taken to Freedman's Hospital.

Donald Harvey, 7, of 1234 G st. ne., was struck by a car driven by Robert B. Collins, 36, of 4212 Grant st. ne., in front of his home. He was treated for a possible fractured ankle at Casualty Hospital.

Thomas Cunningham, 6, of 5706 Georgia ave. nw., suffered face abrasions when struck by a car driven by William B. Hubbs, 55, of 1220 Euclid st. nw., under similar conditions. He was treated at his home.

Larry Winfield, 27, of 2022 E st. ne., received possible head injuries when his car was struck from the rear by another operated by J. M. Davis, jr., 21, Shadydale, Md., in the unit block of H st. nw. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Meeting to Hear Hollywood Star

Larry Parks and other Hollywood personalities summoned to testify before the House Committee on Un-American Activities will speak at an open meeting scheduled for 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the auditorium of the National Press Building.

The National Lawyers Guild, sponsor of the meeting, announced that other speakers would include Robert W. Kenny, president of the Lawyers Guild; Bartley C. Crum, San Francisco author; Ring Lardner, jr., author and screen writer; Lewis Milestone, screen producer-director; Edward Dmytryk, director, and Adrian Scott, production man.

The guild announcement said the House committee that brought the Hollywood group to Washington "has acted as a combined censor, prosecutor and propaganda agency."

$500 Miniature Planetarium Acquired by Mennonite School

The Washington Post

INVENTOR AND INVENTION—Armand Spitz examines his miniature planetarium, which he says is as efficient as larger ones for practical purposes

A miniature planetarium, said by its inventor to be "as efficient as the large ones for all practical purposes," was delivered Friday to Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, Va.

Its inventor, Armand Spitz, director of education at the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia and a lecturer in Fels Planetarium there, paused long enough between trains here to exhibit his 25-pound, 3-foot invention before proceeding to the college in Virginia.

With a price tag of only $500—cost of any of the country's five large planetariums before the war was estimated at $250,000—Spitz says his device will project as many as 1500 stars on any surface, a ceiling, for instance.

The device, made of aluminum and vinolite, consists of two projectors. One, a 12-sided, round-shaped affair, projects a panorama of whatever stars are to be studied; the other, a drum-like mechanism, permits the sun, moon and planets to be shown by hand-setting it.

He said the invention's greatest merit lies in the fact that because of its small size it can readily be used for educational purposes. "So few people," he said, "ever get to visit any of the five large planetariums in the United States. This will enable them to find out just what is in the sky."

Spitz has spent the last 10 years perfecting the planetarium, which is designed especially for schools. It can project stars in any part of the universe except the South Pole, and all the planets, he said.

Spitz showed it to Harvard University astronomers recently. He said they "expressed pleasure in it." He hopes to produce it on a large scale, and has several orders already.

Astronomer Spitz terms his invention "a modern teaching device to make education more dramatic." It can be used, he said, to teach geography, history, mathematics, navigation—even the classics.

Mid-Summer Weather Due Again Today

Tennis players and picknickers may take cheer, Washington's midsummer weather will continue today and tomorrow, according to the Weather Bureau.

Cloudy in the morning, sunny, warm and humid with an afternoon high of about 82 degrees and gently south to southwesterly winds, is the forecast for today.

Monday is expected to be mostly sunny and less humid.

Terming the weather "unseasonable but not unusual," the Weather Bureau recorded temperatures varying from a low of 68 degrees at 6 a. m. to 79 degrees at 3:40 p. m. yesterday.

Highest ever recorded for the day was 85 degrees in 1881 and 1938, and lowest 34 degrees in 1876.

Most of the country was sharing the fair and mild weather, though showers dampened parts of the Midwest and a flash flood caused damage estimated at more than a million dollars at Galax, Va. Residents of the valley town were forced to evacuate their homes and expensive lumber piled high in Galax furniture factories was ruined.

Damages Asked For Injuries in Strawride Wreck

Mrs. Cora Tilton, known as "Ma" to hundreds of servicemen whom she entertained at the USO club in Annapolis, Md., filed suit yesterday for $25,000 damages arising from injuries received in a strawride accident August 8.

Her attorney, Albert J. Godman of Annapolis, said last night that the suit filed in Anne Arundel County, Md., Court is against George E. Terrell, Valley Vista apartments, 2023 Belmont rd. nw., and Charles Bowie, Barole, Md., near Annapolis.

Mrs. Tilton charged that Terrell was the driver of a car which collided with a wagon operated by Bowie on which she and several servicemen were riding.

Berge to Speak

Wendell Berge, former Assistant Attorney General, will discuss "The Marshall Plan and American Business" over Stations WINX and WINX-FM at 12:15 p. m. today. He will appear on Ed Hart's forum, "Is Congress Doing the Job?"

Atom Talk Scheduled

Dr. Lawrence Heilorin, physicist, will speak on "Unharnessing the Atom" at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday. The meeting is the first in a series to be held at the center by the National Committee on Atomic Information.

Meeting Set Tomorrow on Armory Fuss

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox announced last night he has made a definite date to confer with the Commissioners "sometime Monday" to discuss armory control.

The arrangement was made during a telephone conversation with Commissioner Guy Mason shortly after 7 p. m. yesterday, he said.

At the meeting, the Commissioners will be seeking a "cure" for a major headache: How to get General Cox to fork over funds taken in by District of Columbia National Guard when the District's new $2,700,000 armory is used for nonmilitary purposes.

Interested in $8500

Although the problem is one of general policy, the Commissioners are specifically interested in $8500 paid to National Guard representative by the Home Builders Association, which concludes an exposition at the armory today.

General Cox, who has already received the money, said he hadn't spent any of it. But no promise has been given, he said not to spend it before the problem is thrashed out.

The city heads warned Thursday, that if the money isn't delivered to the District, steps to recover it, will be taken.

General Cox, meanwhile, announced he has no intention of "reporting" to the Commissioners about armory activities. "In matters of armory control, I report directly to the President," he asserted.

This was his reply to a question concerning his failure to inform the Commissioners that the Guard wouldn't need the armory for military purposes last week.

Sought Lease in June

An official of the Home Builders Association revealed that the Commissioners wrote the Association "sometime in June," advising them that an armory lease could not be prepared because General Cox had given no definite information concerning drill commitments.

The Commissioners said they had authority to lease the building on nights when it wasn't being used by the Guard, the official said.

"We had to sign with someone," the association spokesman said. The Commissioners' letter left the association no alternative to making arrangements with General Cox, he explained.

The "occupancy agreement" was signed with Guard representatives October 6, Lawrence Hanson, executive director of the Home Builders Association, said.

General Cox insists he and the Commissioners "are not fighting one another." Says he: "It's just a difference of opinion."

First Reunion Set

First reunion of the Ninth Battalion, Maryland State Guard, will be held at 1 p. m. next Sunday at Chapel Point, Md. The battalion was formed from companies organized in Prince Georges, Anne Arundel, Calvert, St. Marys and Charles counties during World War II. Capt. Thomas P. McDonagh, La Plata, is chairman of the committee.

D. C. Has 45% More Doctors Than in 1945

There were 1324 private physicians practicing in the District of Columbia in June of this year—one for every 637 persons. This represents an increase of 45 per cent since 1945, the last war year.

In the entire Greater Washington area, there are 1648 doctors in practice as of June—a ratio of 762 versons per physician.

Each white male general practitioner saw an average of 78 different patients during the week of June 22-28, as compared with an average patient load of 133 in February, 1945, and 115 in September, 1942. The figures include home, office and hospital visits.

Survey by USPHS

These are the principal findings of a survey conducted by members of the United States Public Health Service, with the cooperation of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and assistance of the Medico-Chirurgical Society and the War Manpower Commission in previous surveys used for comparison.

An article on the results of the survey, written by Antonio Ciocco and Isidore Altman of the division of public health methods, USPHS, will be published in the Annals of the Medical Society next week.

As the Annals will point out editorially, no attempt was made in the survey to determine whether the present number of physicians is adequate or otherwise for the District's population.

The reason for this lack of conclusion to the survey, according to Theodore Wiprud, Medical Society secretary, who wrote the editorial comment, is that "there is no basis for determining the proper ratio of physicians to population. Dr. Ciocco pointed out that no one has yet defined adequate medical care.

Until this is done, the number of physicians needed for a given population cannot be definitely ascertained. At the present time those who seek the answer to this question must be satisfied to base their conclusions on the demand for the services of physicians.

34% Are Under 45

The Medical Society editorial declares that studies should immediately be undertaken to determine what constitutes adequate medical care.

The medical survey found that 81 per cent of the District's doctors were white male physicians. Of these, 54 per cent are under 45 years of age and 14 per cent under 35. Only 9 per cent are 65 or more.

Of the 1324 physicians in practice, 35 per cent are general practitioners, while the other 854 are specialists in 16 branches of medicine, internal medicine leading with 217 devoted to that specialty.

A far greater increase in the relative number of physicians has occurred in comparison with previous sudveys made in 1942, 1943 and 1945, in the suburban communities, than in the District itself. In Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md., Arlington County and Alexandria, Va., the number of physicians has more than doubled, from 138 to 324, since 1945.

Back to Prewar Level

Basing their conclusion on estimates for the prewar year 1941, the surveyors indicate that, two years after the end of the war, the number of persons per physician is already at the prewar level, or perhaps even smaller.

By far the sharpest decline in patient load, the survey report states, has been reported by the general practitioners as a group, and also among the younger and newly established physicians. Among the white male general practitioners under 45 years, for example, the average patient load of the new physicians is 49 as compared with 101 for physicians already established in practice in February, 1945.

In the specialist group, however, the men of 45 years and over are seeing more patients than the younger doctors, a fact which the report states may be a result of the war, when civilian specialists—on the whole, the older physicians—acquired many new patients whom they still retain.

The patient load of Negro physicians shows a marked decrease from 107 in 1942 to 64 at present and a shift in the load to the older age groups.

Police Alerted For Suspect Who Gave Marshal Slip

Police continued yesterday to search for a 36-year-old suspected housebreaker who escaped from a United States marshal in Municipal Court Friday.

Police along the Eastern Seaboard have been alerted for the fugitive. Police gave his name as Bennie Melvin, 441 Lamont st. nw. and described him as a Negro, 140 pounds, 5 feet 8 inches in height.

Melvin escaped from Deputy Elmer Graves as he was being led from the court room of Judge Walter J. Casey to the clerk's office. Graves was leading the fugitive and two other prisoners out of the leevator when Melvin fled in hte crowd.

Melvin was arrested at his home Wednesday by Detective Francis Gaver of the Ninth Precinct. Gaver said that fingerprints found at the scene of a housebreaking at 212 10 st. ne. corresponded with those of Melvin.

Church to Honor St. Jude in Novena

A solemn novena in honor of St. Jude the Apostle will be held in the Church of the Immiculate Conception, 8th and N sts. nw., from tomorrow through Tuesday, October 28. Services will be held each evening at 7:45. Sermons will be preached by the Rev. Lee G. Monoghee, S. J., of Georgetown University.

campaign is a test of whether the idea of a federation of private welfare agencies is successful. If the federation loses the support of homemakers and wage earners, it would have to abandon its work. The Greater Washington area would return to the days when individual agencies made separate appeals for contributions and the average citizen was besieged with requests to support one agency's work even at the expense of another.

Chest Advantages Cited

Federation officials believe the single campaign—the federated idea—has three major advantages:

1. It greatly lowers costs of fund raising (campaign expenses were four per cent of the total raised for 1946, compared to the 18 to 25 per cent paid by individual agencies for their own campaigns).

2. Through the federation, health and welfare work for the entire area around the city of Washington can be coordinated.

3. Public understanding of the whole theory of social welfare work is made easier.

The welfare picture in Washington is complicated by Congressional action in cutting public welfare funds to the point where cases normally paid for out of taxpayers' money must go to private agencies for support. Local private welfare agencies have in some cases reported doubling of their relief loads from this single factor, and without Congressional action, the situation will get no better.

Living Cost Complicates

It is complicated also by the cost-of-living increases which cannot be compensated for without oversubscription of this year's chest budget. An example of what may happen on the cost-of-living front is found in the report of one agency:

"There are nine workers on our staff who expected an increment to their salaries in 1947 but who are not going to get it. These workers are remaining with us, but it is impossible for me to suppose that, if we again fail in 1948 to give them the promised increases, they will feel they can continue with the agency . . . If any or all of these . . . workers leave us, and the salaries that we can offer to case workers and stenographers are not substantially increased, we shall not be able to fill these vacant positions."

The inter-relation of public and private welfare, thrown out of focus at the present time, is pointed up in another report to the federation:

"We are getting many referrals from the Board of Public Welfare which unfortunately result from the drastic cut in the board's appropriation made by the Eightieth Congress. These referrals, because of their nature, are time-consuming, and frequently little can be done because of our inability to give financial assistance. As you well know, the relief funds of the private agencies are rapidly being exhausted."

Case Loads Increase

Another agency official reports: "The Washington assistance picture is very grim, with the public agency cutting right and left and the private agencies severely overtaxed financially. Needless to say, the case loads are continuing the sharp rise which was so evident at the beginning of this year. The number of persons needing financial and other help from community agencies, both public and private, are increasing and will continue to increase substantially before showing any signs of decreasing. Economic and social conditions point unmistakably to these facts."

"A decrease in Chest appropriation to a community house would certainly have a disastrous effect on our program. At present we are so very limited as to staff and minimum supplies, in addition to totally inadequate and undesirable working facilities, that any idea of reduction is appalling."

Membership of agencies in the Chest is voluntary upon application by private welfare agencies. However, admission to membership is contingent upon meeting certain standards, among them a demonstration of usefulness to the community as a whole, acceptable standards of social work, a responsible board of directors, and adequate financial records and yearly audit.

The functions of agencies now members of the Community Chest Federation include aid to the aged, the blind, the deaf and hard of hearing and unmarried mothers; organizations for constructive use of leisure time of boys and girls; child care, including convalescent care and dental and general hospital care, legal aid, general health services, and nursing schools and nursing care.

Area News in Brief

Foundry Storage Barn Burns in Arlington

Heavy evening traffic was rerouted for nearly an hour last night by a two-alarm fire that partially destroyed an iron foundry storage barn east of Route 1 and S. 15th st., in Arlington.

The one-story frame shed, on the grounds of the Bingham & Taylor Corp., 1401 Jefferson Davis hwy. (Route 1), was burning strongly when Arlington County firemen responded at 7:26 o'clock. Police summoned three other companies, and the blaze was under control at 8:16.

Washington police shunted Virginia-bound traffic away from the 14th Street Bridge and onto Memorial Bridge. Arlington police routed northbound traffic on Route 1 onto Glebe rd. at the Potomac Yards.

No estimate of damage was available.

The companies at the scene were from Jefferson, Arlington, Clarendon and Fairlington.

Truckman Accused

Two truckmen employed by Safeway Stores, Inc., were arrested yesterday charged with six counts of petty larceny in connection with thefts of food from Safeway trucks.

Police believe the pair, Charles A. Perry, 34, 1422 S st. nw., and Herbert R. Henry, 34, 210 T st. nw., have a taste for highly seasoned food.

The loot included two cases of canned tuna fish, three cases of vegetable soup, three cans of boned chicken—and two cases of pepper. Total value was placed at $69.61. Police said the men admitted the thefts.

Construction Nears Record

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Private construction in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area seems certain of reaching a record volume for the year, if the pace of the first nine months continues.

Permits covering $17,192,994 in private construction were issued through September in Norfolk, Portsmouth and Norfolk County, according to a report compiled by George L. Wadsworth, secretary of the Builder and Contractors Exchange.

Wadsworth said he was quite certain this nine-month total exceeded any previous volume of private construction here. During the same period in 1946, $7,268,299 worth of building was authorized.

Government contracts, however, remained far below figures for last year. Such construction this year has totaled $1,576,505, or $3,672,260 below the 1946 figure.

They will be guests at the annual alumni luncheon to be held November 1, at the Mayflower. Homecoming activities begin October 30.

The six are:

Roger M. Choisser, professor of pathology, who organized the Civilian Defense Plasma Bank in 1941.

Benjamin C. Cruickshanks, professor of mechanical engineering, who during the war directed research in the school laboratories for the War Production Board.

Alan T. Deibert, associate professor of romance languages and university adviser to foreign students.

Preston A. McLendon, professor of pediatrics and contributor of articles to medical journals on the diseases of children.

John Minor, clinical associate in medicine and fellow of the American Medical Association.

W. Reed West, professor of political science and dean of the division of special students.

The luncheon speaker will be Dr. Edward C. Acheson, associate professor of finance, who will talk on "America's Role in Europe—Must Pennywise Mean Dollar Foolish?"

5 Candidates Pledge Spring School Tours

Five Arlington School Board candidates yesterday promised to make annual spring inspection tours to study plant and equipment in the county's 31 schools if elected November 4.

The five, Colin MacPherson, Curtis Tuthill, Mrs. Edmund Campbell, O. Glenn Stahl and Barnard Joy, were nominated at the recent School Board nominating convention.

Joy, spokesman for the five, said the tours would determine school needs in time to rectify them for the opening of schools in the fall. He said, as far as he knew, the incumbent school board "has not made a systematic tour of county schools for 15 years."

The five candidates yesterday completed the fifth of a series of Saturday inspection tours, during which they have visited 26 of the 31 schools.

Walter O'Loughlin

Walter M. O'Loughlin, 63, former electrical engineer for the Interstate Commerce Commission and for more than 25 years a resident of Takoma Park, Md., died Friday at his home in Terre Haute, Ind.

A native of Terre Haute, Mr. O'Loughlin retired from the ICC about five years ago to his native city, spending his winters in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

He joined the ICC's bureau of valuation shortly after it was established in Chicago in 1914. Moving to Washington with the Commission in 1922, he became head of the signal branch, engineering section of the valuation bureau. He retired from that position because of ill health.

A graduate of Rose Polytechnic Institute in Terre Haute, Mr. O'Loughlin was a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Elks. For more than 20 years his home in Takoma Park was at 21 Sherman ave. A communicant of Our Lady of the Flowers Church there, he was well known in the town.

A requiem mass will be said Tuesday in Terre Haute, and burial will be in that city.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rose O'Loughlin, Terre Haute; three sons, Walter and Robert, of Terre Haute; Richard of Philadelphia; two brothers of Terre Haute and Seattle, Wash., and five grandchildren.

Morris Heft

Funeral services for Morris Heft, 84, former District grocer, will be held at GoldBerg's funeral home, 4217 9th st. nw., today at 1 p. m. The procession will leave there for further services at B'nai Israel Cemetery, Oxon Hill.

Mr. Heft died at his home, 922 Emerson st. nw., Friday afternoon. He was born in Russia, and came to the United States in 1906. He had lived in the District since 1933.

From 1936 to 1941 he was owner of a grocery store in the 1600 block of 7th st. nw. He was founder of Agudas Achim Synagogue in Baltimore, and a charter member of the Hebrew Butchers Association of Baltimore.

Mr. Heft is survived by his wife Bessie, four children, Mrs. Ida Bass and Hyman Heft of Washington, and Mrs. Eva Quitt of Baltimore, and Miss Fan Heft of New York City; 11 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Mourning will be observed all week at his home.

Young Wherry Wed in Simple Chapel Rites

In the simplest of ceremonies, David C. Wherry, 20, only son of Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) was wed here yesterday to his high school sweetheart, Miss Phyllis Morehead.

The small Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was barren of guests—save for Senator and Mrs. Wherry and four other close relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Burr Latta, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, attended the couple.

Young Wherry, who resigned from the Naval Academy recently to tackle two new careers—marriage and medicine—appeared to be taking the first hurdle in his stride. But he looked lovingly and often at his pretty blonde bride also 20, who was dressed in a beige twill suit and a small brown cloche.

The Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, officiating, warned the young pair that "marriage . . . is more than moonlight and roses" but later, he said:

"Love is the only force we know that can unite two hearts and make them one . . ."

The bridegroom was so excited he forgot to kiss the bride—just then.

G. H. Peters, Photographer For Navy, Dies

George H. Peters, 84, who served as official photographer for the U. S. Naval Observatory for 30 years, died yesterday in the Parkview Rest Home here.

A native of Hartford, Conn., Mr. Peters came to Washington in 1898. As observatory photographer, he specialized in photographing the sun during total solar eclipse. He participated in eclipse expeditions to Georgia in 1900, to Sumatra in 1901, to Spain in 1905, to Oregon in 1918, on the airship Los Angeles in 1925, and to Sumatra in 1926.

Mr. Peters made daily photographs of sun spots and made photographic observations of the asteroids for minor planets. In the course of this work, he discovered several new planets.

The photographer was retired in 1930. He formerly lived at the Burlington Hotel here. He leaves a niece, Mrs. T. W. Isfeld, of Taunton, Minn. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. Interment will be in Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. Graham H. Kemper

Orange, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Mrs. Graham Hawes Kemper, wife of the former consul general at Rome, Italy, died today at her home here after a short illness.

Mrs. Kemper was bor nin New Orleans, La., November 11, 1886, and spent most of her childhood in Greenville, Miss. She resided in Washington and Virginia before her marriage in 1913.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemper spent more than 30 years at various posts in South America, Asia and Europe before his retirement in 1941, when they came here to reside.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church here, with burial in Graham Cemetery.

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 17 (AP).—Dr. Joseph Grice, 72, prominent Portsmouth physician, is in a critical condition in King Daughters Hospital today as the result of a bullet wound in the head.

Police reported they found the physicia nwounded at his home today after they answered a call from his niece.

Lonergan, Ex-Senator, Is Dead at 73

Augustine Lonergan, four-time Democratic Congressman and one-term Senator from Connecticut, succumbed to a heart ailment yesterday at his residence, Cordova Apartments, Florida ave. and 20th st. nw. He was 73.

Requiem high mass will be sung at St. Joseph's Cathedral, Hartford, Conn., Wednesday morning. Burial will follow in Mount St. Benedict's Cemetery, Hartford.

Defeated for reelection as Senator in 1939, Mr. Lonergan entered law practice here with an office in the Transportation Building. He had been ill for a week with heart trouble, according to members of the family.

Among other posts, while a member of Congress, Mr. Lonergan served with the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission and was active in the choice of the present shrine at the Tidal Basin.

Mr. Lonergan generally favored legislation on behalf of veterans and labor and the New Deal. He opposed President Roosevelt, however, on his move to reorganize the United States Supreme Court. The Connecticut legislator worked for the free mail privilege for servicemen in World War I, and urged the appointment of chaplains of all denominations to the armed forces.

In the Senate, Mr. Lonergan served on the Banking and Currency, Interstate Commerce, Finance, and Steering Committees. He regularly attended both Senate and committee meetings.

It was during the Bull Moose upsurge of 1912, that Mr. Lonergan, a Democrat, was elected to Congress from the stanchly Republican Hartford County. Defeated in 1914, he was reelected in 1916 and 1918. Out of the Washington limelight for 10 years, Mr. Lonergan returned to Congress in 1930, and was elected to the Senate in 1932.

A native of Thompson, Conn., Mr. Lonergan attended Yale Law School and because associated with the law firm of Perkins & Perkins of Hartford.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lucy Waters Lonergan; four daughters, Mrs. Ruth Ellen Lockhart, Miss Lucy Waters Longergan, Miss Ann Yates Lonergan, and Miss Mary Lee Lonergan, of Washington; a brother, Edward, of Hartford; and a 4-year-old granddaughter, Lucy Ellen Lockhart.

In Memoriam

GOSNELL, LYDIA D. In loving remembrance of our dear mother who passed away ten years ago, October 22, 1941.
Long days and months you bore your pain
To wait for cure, but all in vain.
God above knew what was best,
And took you home to give you rest.
God is good, He gave us strength
To bear our heavy loss.
DEVOTED CHILDREN.

Democrats Tops After Great Comeback

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

ON October 16, 1946, one year ago last week, Democratic Party strength was reported by the Institute at the lowest point in 16 years. Three weeks later, on November 5, that analysis proved accurate when the Democratic Party lost control of both houses of Congress in the Congressional elections.

The situation today, a year later, shows one of the most dramatic reversals of political sentiment in recent history. The Democrats are enjoying a comeback of phenomenal proportions.

Mr. Truman's popularity is 'way up as compared with last October. Independent voters who were drifting away from the Democrats a year ago are now back in the fold. People have increased faith in the ability of the Democrats to handle issues that face the country. In general the evidence today from Institute surveys is that the Democratic Party, a year after its disastrous setback at the polls, is again the dominant party nationally.

In fact, 56 per cent of the nation's voters say they would favor the Democratic Party if a presidential election were being held today, and 44 per cent the GOP.

Ahead on Five Counts

FIVE different aspects of the political situation must be taken into account in appraising the basic strength of the opposing parties. On each aspect the trend of public sentiment today is distinctly favorable to the Democrats. The five aspects are:

1. What party would people favor if a Presidential election were being held now?

2. Which side are the independent voters favoring this year?

3. How good a job do voters think Mr. Truman is doing? How well would he run against various possible Republican candidates?

4. Which party do people think can best handle the problems which they themselves consider important today?

5. Which party do voters think is the best champion and defender of their own particular economic and social interests?

Here is what Institute surveys show on these five aspects:

Party Index

1—For many years the Institute has kept a running index of party strength in terms of a Presidential election, asking what party people would favor if they were voting for President. This index has proved highly accurate as a measure of voting intentions.

A year ago only 47 per cent voted Democratic in this index, while 53 per cent expressed a Republican preference. Today Democratic strength is up nine points to 56 per cent, which is slightly more than what the party received in the presidential election of 1944.

The trend follows:

"If a presidential election were being held today, which party would you vote for—the Democratic or Republican?"

	Dem.	Rep.
1944 election	54%	46%
Oct., 1946	47	53
TODAY	56	44

Balance of Power

2—The balance of political power in this country is held by the so-called independent voters, who are not regular Democrats or regular Republicans but who swing from one party to the other according to their own independent convictions. Throughout the years of the New Deal, the independent vote sided with the Democratic Party.

In last year's Congressional elections, however, independents shifted to the Republican side.

Now they are back again in the Democratic camp.

The trend is shown in the following table giving the independent vote on the question of which party would be favored in a Presidential election.

	% Dem.	% Rep.
1944 election	62%	38%
Oct., 1946	38	62
TODAY	57	43

Truman's Popularity

3—A year ago the percentage of voters who approved the way Mr. Truman was handling his job stood at only 32—or the equivalent of the freezing point on a thermometer. While enthusiasm for the President today has not reached any boiling point, there has been a very substantial increase over the chilly attitude of a year ago.

Today 55 per cent say they approved of the job he is doing. The trend follows:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Truman is handling his job as President?"

	Approve	Disapprove	No opin.
July, 1945	87%	3%	10%
Oct., 1946	32	53	15
TODAY	55	29	16

Attitudes on Issues

4—Basic political trends can often be charted by the vote of the people on major public issues. How voters feel about those issues, and how they size up the ability of each party to handle the problems, bears a close relation to how they will likely vote at election time.

As in October of last year, the Institute this year asked each voter what he considers the most important problem today and what party he thinks can best handle that particular problem.

The majority who believe that one party can solve that problem better than another choose the Democratic Party.

This represents a marked change of political attitude from a year ago. At that time the Republican Party came off with the honors in this same type of poll. Today approximately 60 per cent of those who name any party as more capable of handling major problems than another party pick the Democrats.

There has also been an interesting shift in the type of issue which people name as foremost. Last year the three problems named most often by the voters were: (1) shortages of food, clothing, etc.; (2) labor troubles and strikes; (3) foreign policy and dealing with Russia.

Today the leading issues named are:

1. High prices, inflation, high cost of living	37%
2. Foreign policy, Russia, danger of war	30
3. The food problem	12
4. Strikes and labor troubles	5
5. Housing	5
Other	14
No opinion	4
	107%

(Totals more than 100 per cent because some named more than one item.)

Economic Welfare of Voters

5—The fifth aspect of the political situation is this: What party do the various major occupation groups believe to be the best defender of their economic well-being?

When that whole subject was probed by Institute polling it was found that the Democratic Party holds a marked advantage in three out of five major occupational groupings—farmers, skilled labor, unskilled labor. In the remaining two groups the Republicans lead by a decisive margin among business and professional people, and by a narrow margin among white collar workers.

Those who classify themselves as:	Preference Dem.	Rep.	No diff.	No opin.
Unskilled	63%	10%	11%	16%
Skilled	61	16	14	9
Farmers	52	20	16	12
White collar	28	37	23	12
Business and prof.	16	66	9	9

Inflation's Fattening the Majority, Squeezing the Few

By Clarke Beach

GOVERNMENT statistics indicate that inflation has been a fine thing—up to now—for the majority of Americans despite the damage it has done to certain groups.

People in general have never had so much to spend, have never bought so much and such high quality goods, have seldom been able to save so much money.

Farmers and factory workers are among those who are enjoying the greatest increase in their standard of living. On the other hand, widows with annuities, persons living on the interest from Government bonds and others with fixed incomes have been injured seriously, perhaps irreparably. Moreover, millions of white collar workers whose salaries have not caught up with rising living costs have suffered hardships.

The best measure of current prices, in the opinion of the average Government economist, is the Bureau of Labor Statistics' "Consumer Price Index." This is a measure of the change in retail prices of goods bought by moderate income families, the rent they pay and services they buy. The figures are "weighted" according to the amount spent on each item. For instance, the index assumes the average family now is spending 43.1 per cent of its budget on food and only 13 per cent on rent.

Food Tops Spiral

THE index indicates that rents rose only 10 per cent between 1935-39 and July 15, 1947. Food took the highest jump, 93 per cent. Clothing and house furnishings were up about 84 per cent each.

Against this average 88 per cent rise in the cost of living, balance these figures:

1. Disposable income (what you have left after personal taxes and other payments to the Government) rose from $70,167,000,000 in 1939 to $158,428,000,000 in 1946—about 125 per cent.

2. Personal consumption expenditures rose from $67,466,000,000 in 1939 to $143,670,000,000 in 1946—113 per cent.

3. In 1939 people saved out of current income $2,701,000,000. In 1946 they saved $14,758,000,000. Accumulated savings, called "liquid asset holdings" by the Federal Reserve Board, rose from $65,100,000,000 in 1939 to $223,200,000,000 in 1946.

President Truman, in his July economic report, citing the large increase in per capita disposable income, said it indicates that "American consumers are, on the average, better off than before the war."

"They live in a richer and more productive economy," he said, "and they are sharing its benefits."

Farm Income Tripled

AS TO who is making all this money, you get a broad clew from the Commerce Department's analysis of business incomes.

However, total figures on business incomes—like those on incomes in any other group—are not necessarily the full story. In each group, the wages or incomes of some persons have risen far more than those of other persons in the same group.

The Commerce Department analysis shows that:

1. Income from farms more than tripled between 1939 and 1946, rising from $4,506,000,000 to $15,213,000,000. (The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated last week that farm income would total 18 billion dollars in 1947.)

2. Business and professional incomes finished close to farmers'. They rose from $6,776,000,000 in 1939 to $19,738,000,000 in 1946.

3. A rather poor third in this group is corporate profits, which rose from $5,005,000,000 to $12,539,000,000.

4. The lowest income rise listed is that received from rentals, which gained 100 per cent, rising from $3,465,000,000 in 1939 to $6,865,000,000 in 1946.

That's the story for business incomes—a 100 to 300 per cent rise in eight years.

86 Per Cent Average

AMONG wage earners, the income rise has not been that great in any large category, but the pay of workers in manufacturing industries rose 106 per cent from 1939 to last July.

The only complete survey of average annual wages is compiled by the Commerce Department, and its statistics do not go past 1946.

Here are department figures which show the general trend, although they do not reflect the large raises which have occurred this year, particularly in the steel, automobile and electrical machinery industries:

1. Wages in all industries rose an average of 86 per cent.

2. Farm labor's wages rose 212 per cent.

3. Miners' wages increased 96 per cent.

4. Textile mill workers' wages rose 112 per cent.

From the same table, you learn whose salaries have not kept up with the cost of living:

5. Wage earners in finance, insurance and real estate got raises between 1939 and 1946 amounting to 45 per cent.

6. Medical and health service employes, up 56 per cent.

7. Employes of the legal profession, up 50 per cent.

8. Religious organizations, up 18 per cent.

9. Educational services, up 44 per cent.

10. Public education, up 53 per cent.

Among the more fortunate of the white collar workers were Government employes, whose salaries increased 74 per cent. Federal workers gained somewhat more than those in State and local governments.

'Everybody' Earning

THE increased earnings of each worker, however, do not tell the whole story. One of the biggest factors in the prosperity is that there are so many more workers than ever before.

The 60 million employed persons are an unprecedented total, and two million unemployed is considered well below "normal" by the experts. With jobs so easy to get, with pay so good and with the need for money so great, just about everybody who can handle a shovel or a pencil is drawing a salary.

You get that general picture from the national total of wages and salaries. In 1939 it amounted to $45,745,000,000. In 1946 it was $111,113,000,000.

You find it reflected, too, in figures cited by the Congressional Joint Committee on the Economic Report. These show there are more families in the higher income brackets than in prewar years.

In 1941 there were only 1,564,000 "spending units" (that is, families or individuals living alone) with incomes of more than $5000 a year. In 1946 there were 3,680,000.

The logical question is: Where is all this money coming from?

The reply of the economists is that to some extent the gain has been at the expense of the fixed income group. But the chief source, these men say, is the creation of new wealth—the volume of goods and services has been increased.

It's all velvet as long as people have the money to buy the goods created. But if our gigantic economic machine, now running at full speed, is badly jarred either on the supply or demand side, the economic wizards shudder to contemplate the results.

This was the Big Three at Yalta, where Stalin won Roosevelt's agreement to extra votes for Byelorussia and the Ukraine over Byrnes' objections. But with Harry Hopkins' help, the author of "Speaking Frankly" persuaded the President to obtain a commitment from the Marshal for an equal number of votes for the United States. This was never exercised. Seated, left to right, in the photo: Prime Minister Churchill, the late President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin. Byrnes Wanted Showdown on Russia's Three Votes

By James F. Byrnes

This is the fifth installment in a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—6 of 15 chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers. Copyright, 1947, by James F. Byrnes Foundation (a charitable trust).

IMMEDIATELY after announcing the Soviet Union's acceptance of the President's proposal on voting procedure in the Security Council, Mr. Molotov expressed the hope that Byelorussia, the Ukraine and Lithuania would be admitted to the United Nations. In any event, he said, he hoped the first two would be admitted. Marshal Stalin made a forceful plea in support of the suggestion.

Prime Minister Churchill supported the Soviet request, stating: "My heart goes out to White Russia, bleeding from her wounds while beating down the tyrants."

Not wishing to agree, and yet not wanting to oppose Churchill and Stalin directly while the issue of international organization was in the balance, the President made this statement: "The British Empire has great populations in its dominions, like Australia, Canada and South Africa. The Soviet government has great masses of population like the three dominions mentioned. The United States has no colonies but has a large population. Brazil is smaller than the Soviet Union but larger in area than the United States. There are many countries with small populations, like Honduras and Liberia. We must study the question of whether any country should be given more than one vote. I do not want to break down the principle of one vote to each nation. Therefore, we can decide on the general plan of a meeting to organize the association and then before the meeting, through the Foreign Secretaries, or at that meeting, we can decide these questions and I will be glad to take them up."

There was no dissent. Because I was strongly opposed to granting the Soviet request, I thought the President had done a good job and that we might hear no more of the proposal. But at the conference table the next afternoon the President began reading a report of the meeting of the Foreign Ministers which had just been handed him and said:

"Paragraph 2 is that it will be for the conference to determine the list of the original members of the organization. At that stage the delegates of the United Kingdom and the United States will support the proposal to admit to original membership two Soviet Social republics."

Votes to Byelorussia, Ukraine, Held Unwise

"I was surprised at the agreement (to give votes to the Ukraine and Byelorussia) which, in my opinion, was very unwise." . . . From today's installment.

The report was agreed to.

'Unwise' Agreement

I LEARNED later that at the Foreign Ministers' meeting, Mr. Eden, who wanted to be certain of the admission of all members of the British Commonwealth including India, which was not an independent state, agreed with Mr. Molotov on the votes for Byelorussia and the Ukraine. Mr. Stettinius then also agreed to the arrangement. As the meeting opened, the Secretary advised the President of the action which the President later announced, and the heads of government approved.

I was surprised at the agreement which, in my opinion, was very unwise. After the meeting I urged my view upon the President. I reminded him that before we left Washington he had told a group of Senators that if Stalin proposed granting membership to Byelorussia and the Ukraine, he would insist upon membership for each of our 48 States. The truth is the Soviet republics are no more independent than the States of our Union.

I recalled to him how effectively the opponents of the League of Nations had argued that the British, because of their dominions, would have five votes in the Assembly while we would have but one. Our people had come to realize that the dominions were independent states and frequently held views different from the United Kingdom, but that was not true of the Soviet Republics. I feared the opponents of the United Nations might use the allotment of three votes to the Soviet Union as effectively as the foes of the League had used the argument against the British votes 26 years earlier. I urged the President at least to ask that the United States be granted a number of votes equal to those of the Soviet Union. The President feared it was too late but said he would consider it.

Hopkins Helpful

I CONVINCED Hopkins that, at the very least, we should secure such an agreement from Stalin and Churchill whether or not we afterward exercised the right. He then joined me in urging the President to withdraw his agreement regarding the two Soviet republics unless Russia agreed the United States also should have three votes. The President finally told us he would present it to Marshal Stalin. On the last day I spent at Yalta, February 10, the President wrote him a letter which stated:

"I am somewhat concerned lest it be pointed out that the United States will have only one vote in the Assembly. It may be necessary for me, therefore, if I am to insure wholehearted acceptance by the Congress and people of the United States of our participation in the world organization, to ask for additional votes in the Assembly in order to give parity to the United States.

"I would like to know, before I face this problem, that you perceive no objection and would support a proposal along this line if it is necessary for me to make it at the forthcoming conference."

The following day Marshal Stalin advised the President that he entirely agreed with him that "since the number of votes for the Soviet Union is increased to three in connection with the inclusion of the Soviet Ukraine and Soviet White Russia among the members of the Assembly, the number of votes for the United States of America should also be increased.

"The number of votes for the United States of America might be increased to three as in the case of the Soviet Union and its two basic republics," he said. "If it is necessary I am prepared officially to support this proposal."

President Roosevelt also asked Churchill for his views, and Churchill stated he would support the President in any proposal he made to achieve American equality with other nations.

Accent on Secrecy

WHEN I arrived in Washington there was waiting for me in the White House Map Room the following cable:

"For Justice Byrnes from Mr. Hopkins:

Right on Russia, Wrong on Allies

Byrnes Gets Star for Stuttgart But He Lacked Marshall's Vision

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

WHEN Secretary Byrnes was off on a trip to Paris or London or Moscow, one of his frustrated officials at home remarked: "The State Department just fiddles while Byrnes roams."

It was a good quip in spite of its unfairness to Undersecretary Dean Acheson, who did his manful best to run the Department while his chief was away. In all the history of American foreign relations, no Secretary of State spent so much of his term away from Washington.

He estimates that he traveled 77,000 miles during his term and in the months just preceding it. He spent 350 of his 562 days as Secretary out of the country.

It was Byrnes' excruciating fate to be pitched into a struggle with V. M. Molotov of Russia which took up most of his thought and his physical and spiritual endurance. Byrnes did not win it, but he did not let his shoulders be pinned to the mat at any time.

Forced by 'System'

WAS IT necessary? Couldn't he have left it to subordinates? Wouldn't he have been a better Secretary of State if he had stayed in Washington and applied himself to working out a postwar policy for the United States?

Byrnes' book, "Speaking Frankly," does not answer the question directly, but it makes a fairly convincing case for his part in these dreary proceedings. Given the Soviet system, with its steep pyramid of authority, it would have been hopeless to deal with any lesser light than Molotov.

It was certain that if Byrnes had not attended these meetings, Molotov would have sent Andrei Vishinsky or Fedor Gusev or Andrei Gromyko instead. And that would not have produced any more progress, as events in the many futile subcommittees showed.

Wouldn't it have been better to deal with Germany first, rather than waste time on the Italian and satellite treaties? Byrnes answers that one, too, by proving that Russia deliberatedly sought to delay the peacemaking with Germany. A start had to be made somewhere, he argues, and it helped to some extent to get treaties completed so that Italy, the Balkans and Finland could begin leading normal lives once more.

Instinct of Suspicion

ONE other question: Weren't Byrnes' tactics wrong? Wouldn't it have produced agreement more quickly if he and President Truman had not destroyed Russian confidence in the United States? This is a favorite argument of Henry A. Wallace and his supporters; the Byrnes book does a good deal to demolish it.

After all, the Russians had so little confidence in the United States at the height of the war that Stalin charged President Roosevelt with double-crossing him and with making a separate armistice with Germany behind his back. This happened just before the surrender of the Germans in Italy in April, 1945; President Roosevelt could hardly conceal his fury at what he called the "vile misrepresentations" of Stalin's informers.

If Russia showed so little confidence in President Roosevelt, who had demonstrated his good faith on such a stupendous scale, how could she have shown more in Truman and Byrnes? As a matter of fact, the Byrnes book tells again and again of the "instinctive suspicion" of the Russians from Stalin down. They have no confidence in anyone in the capitalist world except in those who do their bidding.

American interests needed a stubborn, resourceful and alert defender in these dealings with Molotov. Probably it was fortunate for the United States, and for much of the non-Soviet world, that it had such a defender in Byrnes.

Deflating a Myth

MOREOVER, these conferences, chronicled in such detail in the Byrnes book, had one added justification, although Byrnes did not know it when he began them. They were essential for the education of Byrnes, of his successor, of President Truman, of Congress and of the American people.

Without them, there would always have been the belief in this country that all you needed to do to get agreement with the Russians was to sit down at the same table with them. Of all the myths punctured by Byrnes in his book, this is the biggest and most mythical.

After a year of sitting down at the table with Russia at Potsdam, London, Moscow and Paris, it dawned upon Byrnes and his advisers that the United States and its other Allies would have to go ahead without her in making peace.

The first fruit of this realization came when Byrnes decided to go ahead and merge the economies of the American and British zones in Germany. What Byrnes did was to decide that one nation could not be allowed to paralyze the process of peacemaking. This was something very different from the wholly negative policy, wrongly ascribed to him, of "getting tough with Russia."

Secretary Marshall followed it later in suggesting that 11 leading Pacific powers start work on the Japanese peace treaty—with the clear implication that the conference would be held anyway, even if Russia refused to join it.

Marshall followed it again in his historic speech at Harvard, when he invited the European nations, or just some of them, to draw up a reconstruction program for themselves. Russia and her satellites refused to join, but the 16 non-Soviet nations went ahead without her. And the Marshall Plan will go ahead without her, not because anyone slammed the door on her but because she slammed the door on herself.

To Verge of War

IN one of the most startling passages of his book, Byrnes proposes that the same process be followed in making the German peace treaty. He suggests that if the coming Council of Foreign Ministers fails to agree on a peace conference for Germany, invitations to such a conference should go out anyway. Each of the major powers willing to do so would be asked to submit a draft of its ideas.

This would not be a separate peace, he argues; it would be a collective peace by those countries ready to make peace. If Russia refused to take part in the conference or observe the treaty that would emerge, then, says Byrnes, the signers should ask the Security Council to compel the evacuation of Soviet occupation troops from eastern Germany.

A Soviet veto in this connection does not terrify him. If all else fails, he says, it is always open under the Charter for the other nations to combine and force Russia out of Germany. This would, of course, mean war, but he believes Russia would agree long before such a course became necessary.

Clearly he is suggesting an extreme course, but at least it is in keeping with the policy he started as Secretary. The merger of the two zones in Germany seemed an extreme course at the time. At any rate, the policy of going ahead without Russia, if necessary, is now accepted by American leadership and American opinion, thanks to the painful education Byrnes provided.

Deferred Judgment

IN the light of his book, what kind of Secretary of State was Byrnes? Most political autobiographies are too unreliable to give a clear answer without being checked by the future testimony of others, and especially of the official documents. "Speaking Frankly" is no better a guide than the official portrait of Byrnes which will some day hang with the other portraits in the State Department. It will take the skill of a future historian to judge his contributions, and his character, just as it needs perceptive talent in a portrait painter to catch his personality.

He was an unconventional type to be Secretary of State. One cannot picture Cordell Hull, or Charles Evans Hughes, or most others among his predecessors, leading the singing of Irish songs at the end of a formal dinner at St. James's Palace in London.

He liked people, and in his book he is charitable in his judgments. Any man who could regard Burton K. Wheeler as "an astute and able legislator" in spite of his record on foreign affairs, or who could respect the "sincerity" of Gerald P. Nye, could also write of Representatives John Taber and Clarence Cannon that "I have always found them sympathetic to a deserving cause."

He liked Ernest Bevin's "fine mind, his forthrightness, his candor and his scrupulous regard for a promise." He thought Georges Bidault "quite a remarkable man," with a "constructive mind and engaging personality."

He found Stalin "a very likable person," and described Andrei Vishinsky as "an able and aggressive lawyer." As for Molotov, his impressions require almost a chapter of their own, but more in terms of wonder than in anger.

A Crushing Narrative

"I HAVE HAD quite a broad experience in dealing with men," writes Byrnes, recalling his practice as a trial lawyer and his service in three branches of the American Government. "But through all these years I had no experience that prepared me for negotiating with Mr. Molotov."

Always the politician, Byrnes tries to say the nice thing about Molotov. He describes him as one of the lineal descendants of Job. "He has unlimited patience as well as a fine mind and tremendous energy," he writes. "He will win your reluctant admiration by the resourcefulness he exhibits in his delaying tactics."

But his cumulative judgments on Molotov and on Soviet policy are crushing. He delivers them just by telling the story, in sometimes tiresome detail, of what went on at the meetings. And he buttresses them by disclosing the secret records of the Molotov-Hitler conversation in 1940, when Russia asked not only for control of the Balkans, which are in her grip now, but for military control of the Dardanelles, of the Turkish provinces of Kars and Ardahan and of northern Persia. What Russia wants today, says Byrnes, is what she wanted then, and what her czars tried to get for generations and centuries.

Many Hits, 1 Error

LOOKING back over Byrnes' record in the light of his book, one can see some inconsistencies, one immense and glaring failure and a number of contributions for which the American people should be grateful.

The inconsistencies came from his own habits as a bargainer and compromiser in Congress. He complained often of the Soviet tactics of lumping unrelated issues together and then calling for an "all or none" agreement. Yet at Potsdam Byrnes did not hesitate to lump together three subjects: Reparations, Polish territorial claims and the admission of former enemy states to the United Nations, and use them as bargaining counters with Molotov.

"I told him," Byrnes writes, "that we would agree to all three or none, and that the President and I would leave for the United States the next day." The Russians gave way, but they disliked Byrnes' tactics as much as he disliked theirs.

Later, in a discussion of the satisfactory replies from the Prime Minister and Marshal Stalin on additional votes to achieve parity for the United States, if necessary. In view of the fact that nothing on this whole subject appears in the communique, the President is extremely anxious no aspect of this question be discussed even privately."

I assumed he had some very good reason for not wishing this matter to be discussed, and I complied with the request.

The President and his advisers concluded not to ask at San Francisco for compliance with the agreement that we have as many votes as were given to Russia. He did not again discuss the subject with me, and I did not know he had changed his mind. I admit that the public opposition to Russia's three votes as against our one was not so great as I had expected. But nevertheless I think we should have insisted at San Francisco on the agreement made at Yalta. I felt then and feel now that the smaller states would have opposed the request of the Soviets and the United States. This course would have been just and it would have resulted in both governments having only one vote. That would have been the best solution.

5 Satellite Nations Not Ripe for Quick Plucking by Soviet

The following article is another in the series prepared by four New York Herald Tribune correspondents after a survey of political and economic conditions in eight Soviet satellite countries behind the "iron curtain."

By Walter Kerr, Ned Russel, Russell Hill and William Attwood

WE FOUND absolute Communist control in Romania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. But what about the other five countries east of the so-called "iron curtain"?

Everywhere the Communists have more power than their popular support warrants. They are strongest in Poland and Hungary, strong in Czechoslovakia and weakest in Finland and Austria. But everywhere there is opposition.

As a test, we applied to these countries the seven conditions that Communist leaders had to satisfy in Romania and Bulgaria before they were ready for the final seizure of power.

1. A Communist Minister of the Interior, controlling police forces. Such was the case everywhere except in Austria.

2. A Communist Minister of Justice, controlling the courts. None of the countries has satisfied this condition.

3. A Communist or obedient soldier as Minister of War or chief of the general staff, running the armed forces. This has been achieved in Poland and Czechoslovakia. In Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary there has been a purge of "unfriendly" officers, but this was to have been expected in armies allied with Germany during the war.

4. A Cabinet composed of Communists and others willing or forced to do what they are told. The situation exists in Poland. There has been progress from the Communists' point of view in Czechoslovakia and Hungary. But men like Jan Masaryk, the Czech Foreign Minister, and Stephen Reis, the Hungarian Minister of Justice, who is a Social Democrat, still wield a great deal of influence.

5. A Parliament with a Communist - controlled majority. Achieved in Poland and Czechoslovakia, though in the latter country control is not absolute on all issues. Partial control in Hungary.

6. Non-Communist parties so intimidated that they dare not hold public meetings. This is not the case in any of the five countries.

7. A press censor under Communist orders. Achieved in Poland. Unattained in Finland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria, except for the ban on criticism of the Soviet Union, Soviet policies and Soviet methods.

Hated Status Quo

WE CONCLUDED, therefore, that none of these countries was ready for quick Communist seizure of power, as Romania and Bulgaria were early this year. But the Communists are strong enough to poll 25 per cent of the votes of Finland, perhaps 15 per cent in a fair election in Poland, 35 per cent in Czechoslovakia, 20 per cent in Hungary and 5 per cent in Austria. We went on to find out why, with these minorities, Communist leaders are able to exercise such influence. One explanation, of course, was the fanaticism of party chiefs. Another was their training in the Soviet Union—but there is more to the story.

Except for Finland and Czechoslovakia, these countries were run before the war by generally corrupt and reactionary regimes. Poland and Hungary never put their land reform measures into effect, and between the wars landless peasants tilled the soil of huge estates much as they had in feudal times.

Nor is the secret police a Communist innovation in eastern Europe. In Finland, for instance, the Communists have given new directions to an organization which existed before the war. Civil liberties were curtailed in many parts of eastern Europe and antilabor measures were common.

There was, therefore, a general dissatisfaction with conditions as they existed—and many people turned eagerly to Communists, who claimed a monopoly on reform.

Communist social and economic programs inevitably made converts in areas where poverty and hunger were normal.

Bow to a Giant

IN MORE enlightened countries like Finland and Czechoslovakia, the proximity of Russia has helped local Communist parties. Many people voted Communist partly to placate their big eastern neighbor. The Czechs were also motivated by gratitude for the Soviet army, which helped liberate their country, and by admiration for the Communist partisans, who spearheaded resistance against the Nazis.

Everywhere, militant slogans and singleness of purpose appealed to war-toughened youths who felt let down by the divided and uncertain tactics of the democratic opposition.

Thanks to all these factors, the Communists got off to a flying start in the early months after the war. Where the opposition was not crushed, it was often too confused, frightened or in some cases discredited to offer effective resistance.

Frequently, Communists have profited from a divided opposition. In Poland, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk refused to heed appeals of Polish Socialists to join the coalition government, where together they would have outnumbered the Communists. In Hungary the opposition was so splintered that Communists emerged from last month's election as the strongest party, though they polled only a fifth of the total vote.

To the extent that free institutions have survived in eastern Europe, opposition groups still represent an obstacle to Communist domination. United, they could even be a challenge.

Difference in Marxism

IN THE headquarters of the Social Democratic Party in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, a young man explained why he was a Socialist and not a Communist and why this distinction was important to him.

"I know that our party programs look a lot alike on paper," he said, "and that we are both supposed to be Marxist parties. But I could never be a Communist; I'd feel I was working for another country and not in the best interests of my own people."

We heard this argument from Socialists and Social Democrats in Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria—everywhere except in Yugoslavia, where no opposition to the Communist Party is allowed in any form.

They were men who believe in state ownership of the means of production—men who agree with the Communists on most economic matters but who will not acknowledge the leadership of the Soviet Union.

Because of this difference, Communists and Socialists are political rivals throughout eastern Europe. Because of the similarity of their economic views they cooperate in many countries in uneasy coalition governments.

Agrarian Eclipse

THE ONLY other large political group that challenged Communist domination was formed by the mass peasant movements represented by Stanislaw Mikolajczyk's Polish Peasant Party, Juliu Maniu's National Peasant Party in Romania and Nikola Petkov's Agrarian Party in Bulgaria. But the last two have been destroyed and the first is being subjected to powerful pressure.

The Roman Catholic Church is still a force in Poland, eastern Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Yugoslavia. Politically, however, its influence is limited.

The Socialists, on the other hand, are still strong in Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria and Hungary. There are Communist attempts to split them and absorb them. They are divided into right and left wings. But they hang together somehow and survive. Not so in Romania and Bulgaria, where they barely breathe.

In Finland they are the most active opponents the Communists have. They can count on 25 per cent of the popular vote. In Poland they might get 40 per cent in any free election. In western Czechoslovakia they polled 16 per cent of the vote. In Austria, more than half the people are with them, and in Hungary, if they were not split wide open, they might poll a third of the votes.

Hard to Straddle

THEIR basic trouble is a mixed desire to cooperate with the Communists for economic reconstruction and to remain an independent party. When they are too independent they are accused by Communists of attempting "to disrupt the unity of the working class." When they cooperate completely Communists work to absorb them.

Communist tactics against the Catholic Church are more subtle. In countries like Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria, where more than half the population looks to the Vatican for spiritual leadership, every effort is made to avoid a showdown fight. The line in all countries is to compromise with the church when necessary, to destroy its political influence and to tolerate or appear to approve religious worship.

Communists believe that Catholic opposition is essentially negative, grounded as it is on the devotion of peasants to their parish priests. Given control of the schools, they told us, they could handle the situation within a generation.

Stick to Religion

IN ORTHODOX countries—Romania and Bulgaria—the plan is to bring national churches under the wing of the Patriarch of the Russian Orthodox Church. Orthodox churches are reasonably cooperative with Communist forces. They stick to religious affairs, avoiding politics.

Consequently, American officials in some countries are beginning to recognize Socialists as allies in the political conflict with the Communists. In Austria, American military government policy is to give greater support to them than to the Catholic People's Party of center and right wing tendencies.

How much encouragement they will get will depend on the understanding in the United States of the difference between socialism and communism.

Germans Wreck Vital Corinth Canal

Greeks Rushing Ship Short-Cut

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

CORINTH, Greece (By airmail)—Reconstruction of the Corinth Canal will begin shortly under contracts signed by the Griswold Mission and Greek authorities. Removal of the two huge landslides caused by German destruction will have an important effect on solution of Greece's shipping shortage, for the short cut will save 1½ to 2 days now spent in rounding the Peloponnesos.

Before the war, a fast passenger steamer could reach Piraeus (the port of Athens) from Brindisi in southern Italy in 24 hours. Now it takes more than two days. It was formerly a 15 to 20-hour run from Corfu to Athens. Now the 450-mile detour takes at least three days.

The canal is less than 4 miles long.

Greece recovered most of her merchant marine strength in tonnage through gifts of Liberty and Victory ships from the United States. These are all 10,000 tons or larger, however, and cannot be used in "cabotage" (coastwise shipping). Most of the smaller harbors cannot accommodate ships larger than 5000 tons.

These smaller ships carry produce from Epiros and Peloponnessos to Piraeus, or olive oil from Corfu, and on the return trip carry machinery, industrial products and relief goods to the hinterland. Loss of the Corinth Canal reduces the effective value of this coastal shipping two thirds.

Huge Booby-Trap

THE destruction of the canal was done with German thoroughness. At the isthmian end the Germans sank a munitions ship, booby-trapped and mined. This has been removed by the Greeks in the past few months. Mines were placed all along the canal and the breakwater at the isthmian end was damaged. Finally the Germans produced the landslides by blasting the walls of the canal with 100,000 dynamite charges.

This canal is a formidable creation. A French company began work in 1890, but ran out of money. A Greek company took over and the canal was completed in 1893. It was a difficult job, because large hills had to be broken through to gain entry from the Gulf of Corinth into the Saronic Gulf. The canal is still privately owned.

Dredging will begin at the eastern end of the canal, which has been cleared of mines. A total of one million cubic yards of earth will have to be removed at the two slides.

New Bridges Needed

THE railroad and highway bridges were originally blasted by the British when they retreated from Greece in May, 1941. The Italians built a temporary bridge and the Greeks have constructed a temporary railroad bridge from the Italian material. A Bailey bridge now carries highway traffic across the canal, but both bridges give very low clearance and would impede navigation. Two new bridges will be erected.

Repair of the canal is expected to be completed by February 1. The highway bridge is expected to be ready by April 1 and the railroad bridge by the end of May.

Abdullah Opposed on All Sides

A King Dreams of 'Greater Syria'

By Carter L. Davidson

AMMAN, Transjordan, Oct. 18 (AP).—King Abdullah of Transjordan is persisting in his dream of Greater Syria, the unification of Transjordan, Syria, Lebanon and Arabic Palestine under a single government.

The poetry-loving monarch has called the 400,000 Arab villagers and Bedouin tribesmen he rules to vote Monday in the first parliamentary election in Transjordan's history.

Middle East observers see this as Abdullah's first concrete bid for popular support of his unification program. His present government was appointed by the throne.

Father to Son

GREATER Syria first was envisioned by his father, the late King Hussein of Hedjaz, founder of the Hashemite dynasty which now rules in both Iraq and Transjordan.

"There is nothing destructive or subversive about Syrian unity," Abdullah said in an interview. "The world press seems bent on tearing me to pieces. They accuse me of destructive ambition. The form of government, to my mind, is irrelevant. I am not concerned with whether united Syria should be a monarchy or a republic."

The 66-year-old Abdullah, who became King in April, 1946, on termination of the British rule which had been in effect since Lord Allenby's troops freed the Middle East from the Turks in World War I, said his aim is the "natural unity of Syria for obvious economic, political and cultural reasons."

Asked about published reports of possible armed action to unify the countries, Abdullah said: "I shall not use force. I shall not march on Syria."

Britain Suspected

REFERRING to bitter opposition by Lebanese leaders, Abdullah said: "We have frequently said that Lebanon is free to join the Syrian union should it desire to do so, or else remain out of it."

The President of Syria, Shukri Bey Kowatley, also recently assailed Abdullah's plan, charging the King with being "a tool of British imperialism" and declaring that the Greater Syria project violated the charter of the Arab League.

Abdullah denied that the British had a secret hand in his plan. He said Britain's official attitude is one of neutrality, "but I should not be surprised if Britain, in fact, is opposed to it. If for the sake of argument, I should decide to march on Syria, it would not surprise me to find the British army standing in my path."

Egypt and Saudi Arabia also have opposed Syrian unification principally because of the danger of a "northern Arabian bloc." Transjordan already is linked to Iraq, both by treaty and by the fact that the throne in Baghdad is held by Abdullah's nephew, 13-year-old King Feisel II.

Humiliating Memory

OPPOSITION to Abdullah is strongest in Saudi Arabia and Abdullah has sour memories of the war in which King Ibn Saud's fanatical fighters defeated his father four decades ago in a battle for control of the Arabian Peninsula, forcing the young Abdullah to flee from the capital in his nightshirt on a donkey.

At 66, Abdullah holds little hope that a Greater Syria will be realized in his lifetime, but he looks to Crown Prince Talal to carry on.

California Students Pierce 'Curtain' With Atomic Control Pleas

By John Norris
Post Reporter

WHEN and if an effective international control of atomic energy is achieved—and the threat of world destruction averted—a Nobel peace prize may be in order for a youthful University of California student.

For with U. N. councils apparently hopelessly deadlocked on the vital issue, the only apparent progress seems being made by a group known as the "Committee on Foreign Correspondence."

The committee comprises 25 to 30 volunteer workers on the California campus at Berkeley. Its founder, chairman and sparkplug is a graduate student named Amasa S. Bishop.

Bishop's is the only known agency to have penetrated the Iron Curtain with some rational ideas about doing something about the bomb.

The little known group has been sending thousands of pamphlets to foreign scientists urging that they think deeply about this Frankenstein monster and attempt to win over their national leaders and public opinion to international action.

Whether it will work is anybody's guess, but their stuff is being read by scholars in Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia and other parts where the words of American statesmen never penetrate.

Critical of Bikini

THEIR appeal is not United States propaganda. It is internationalist. In fact, many supernationalists would take violent issue with passages criticizing the Bikini demonstration and continued American manufacture of A-bombs.

But if America's stand on atomic control is sound—and our scientists generally are in agreement—it should stand critical consideration by world scholars.

Most of the material sent abroad, as a matter of fact, does not originate with the Committee on Foreign Correspondence. It consists of public documents, articles by Government officials and scientists, etc.

The committee grew out of some talks among technicians and scientists working in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology laboratory—central point for radar research—just after the war. Prof. Victor F. Weisskopf, a German Jewish refugee and one of the world's top physicists, is credited with the idea.

One of the group was a man in his mid-twenties, son of a Cleveland surgeon. Amasa Bishop shortly afterward enrolled at the University of California to work for his doctor's degree in physics. He took the idea generated at MIT and made it work.

Out of Own Pocket

THE Committee on Foreign Correspondence got under way as a member organization of the Federation of American Scientists. All of the work was volunteer and Bishop personally cashed $1000 in war bonds to pay expenses.

The work came to the attention of the bigwigs of American science, and the committee transferred to an affiliated organization with some money to spare. Its letterhead now reads like a Who's Who of American science, with names like Einstein, Compton, Langmuir, Oppenheimer, Urey and Shapley among the sponsors.

This is how the committee works:

American men of science were asked to write personal letters to friends and acquaintances in their field abroad. Many, of course, had studied in Europe.

Bishop and his aides inclose with these notes a printed letter from the committee and a packet of literature, including "One World or None," a collection of articles by such authorities as Gen. H. H. Arnold, Walter Lippmann and Albert Einstein; the Acheson-Lilienthal report; "Hiroshima" by John Hersey; "I'm a Frightened Man" by Dr. Harold C. Urey; the State Department's "International Control of Atomic Energy," and the "Bulletin of Atomic Scientists."

The letter admits that many difficulties stand in the way of international control, and adds:

"The people of other nations surely find much in the atomic energy policy of the United States which is disturbing them, particularly in view of the recent military demonstration by our Government of the power of the atomic bomb, and in view of our stockpile of such bombs."

Many steps have been taken by the committee to consolidate gains. They include contacts with scientific organizations abroad, talks with foreign scientists visiting this country and efforts to establish direct relationships between American and foreign scientists now unknown to each other.

'Thanks' From Russia

VERY special efforts have been made to reach Russian scientists. Few of them were known here, so the committee concentrated on getting names of Soviet scholars, institutions and libraries.

Replies have been few. One barely expressed polite thanks for the material and said that Gromyko spoke for Red scientists on atomic control. Another replied to a personal friend here, but carefully spoke only about family matters.

But there was evidence that the packets were getting through without censorship. And one American scientist who visited Russia reported that they were read and reread.

Three parcels were returned with the notation that the scientists could not be found.

But from elsewhere behind the "curtain" there was more of a response. Some replies were received from Poland, expressing interest, and in Czechoslovakia, scientists from all over the country met at Prague to discuss the matter. Greatest success to date is in Holland, where Dutch scientists have formed teams to go about the country arousing public interest.

'Policy of Abundance'

Days of 40-Cent Butter Are Gone for Good

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

THE AMERICAN consumer can make up his mind that what he sometimes refers to as "the good old days" of low living costs are gone to stay as far as food is concerned.

That doesn't mean that food prices may not go down, but the days of 40-cent butter and 30-cent eggs and 25-cent corn are not coming back.

This is the first thought that comes with study of the Agriculture Department's "Long Range Policy of Abundance" as recently presented to the Senate and House Agriculture Committees.

Buttressing the program is the attitude of the members of the two committees and the demands of the Nation's big farm organizations.

Of chief interest to the consumer in this program is parity of prices and income for the farm worker as compared with the rest of the population. To attain this the farmer must have a guaranteed market. To get that, the program calls for a continuation of Government price suports based upon parity. To safely provide such a guaranteed market the program ties to price supports a provision for Government-fixed crop quotas.

In other words, the Government would say to the farmer:

"If you agree not to plant more of any given crop than the Government directs, then the Government will guarantee you an equitable price for what you produce."

Killing the Goose

THIS formula is an attempt to bring controls into farm production similar to the controls that industry can maintain by itself.

The individual farmer has gone his merry way, raising what he thought would pay him the most without regard for what his neighbors were raising. The way this "rugged individualism" worked out was that after a season of high prices in one commodity, say corn, an overwhelming number of farmers would plant corn. The result would be whopping surplus of corn and heartbreakingly low prices the next year.

Let us look at the objectives in the "policy of abundance":

First is parity. The farmer is guaranteed at least 90 per cent of parity on many of his products until the end of 1948. This was a wartime warranty to encourage production. The new program calls for supports at about 75 per cent of parity when farm labor is included, and at about 80 per cent under the present formula.

The program offers a new method of determining parity. It would include hired farm labor, not included in the present formula, and would also include a 10-year moving average instead of the present fixed base for comparison.

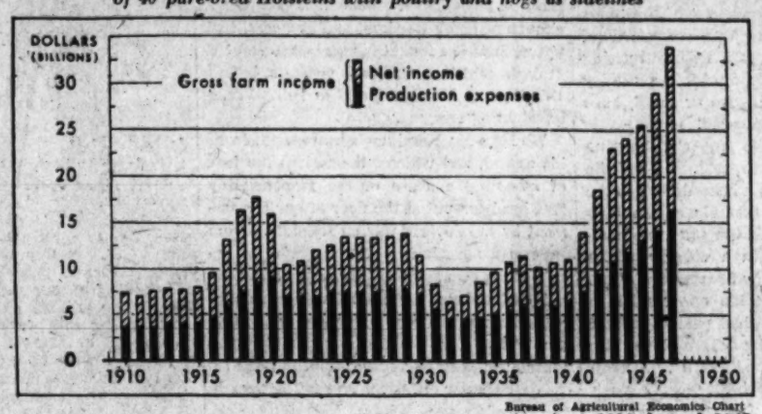
Parity is now based, in most instances, upon comparison of farm prices and other commodities from 1909 to 1914. The new proposal would change the base to a moving average, designed to provide for changes in production methods and costs, and changes in demand.

The department also asks for much broader power in fixing support levels above the 75 per cent floor and in choice of support methods.

The second point in the new policy is a "strong program of production goals, aided by adjustable price supports, so that agricultural production can be adjusted to changing demands as rapidly as possible." The mechanics it seeks are acreage allotments and marketing quotas "to meet emergencies for individual commodities."

Next is conservation payments, a much-fought over issue in the last session of Congress. The department suggested that Congress give consideration to "tying conservation performance and conservation payments to price supports or other Government assistance programs."

This fine dairy farm in Hunterdon County, N. J., typifies the goal of the Agriculture Department and farm organizations. Mainstay of this particular operator is a herd of 40 pure-bred Holsteins with poultry and hogs as sidelines



Bureau of Agricultural Economics Chart

Production expenses and net income of U. S. farm operators from 1910 through 1947, including Government payments beginning in 1933. 1947 is partially estimated

In addition to putting a floor under prices and pdoduction, the department's "policy of abundance" would put a floor under consumption—to keep the diet of the country at a "satisfactory and nutritional" level. Three points make up this floor:

1. School Lunch. This would enlarge the present program to provide a wider market for milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

2. Food Stamp Plan. The program recommends a plan similar to that operated before the war under which relief and low-income groups could buy food at a discount, with the Government making up the difference.

3. Nutrition: The department advocates increased research to give consumers a better diet and farmers an increased market.

Next on the department's program is rural rehabilitation. There was a row in the hearings over this point.

In comparing a "typical urban family" with a "typical farm family," the department described the latter this way:

"They live in an old house, either in serious disrepair or perhaps unrepairable. They are without running water, telephone, central heating or a bathtub. If they have electricity, it is still new enough to seem an innovation. The windows and doors are poorly screened. Flies attend every meal, spring and summer. There are mice in the kitchen and rats around the barn.

Though the family grows most of its own food, the children are not as well-nourished as typical city children.

"They don't read much. Their education has not been such as to instill a love of literature.

"There are no libraries. The rural church is quite a drive away, and services are not often attended. Organized recreation is a rare event."

Even with present high prices for farm products, the farmer's income is far below that of his city brother, the department pointed out.

"Last year farm people netted only $620 per capita; the comparable figure for nonfarm people is $1326," Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan told the committee.

Sharecropper Assist

TO IMPROVE farm conditions, the program offers eight goals:

1. Better rural health, sanitation and safety measures, with Federal health insurance.
2. Federal appropriations to foster rural industries.
3. More opportunities for tenants, sharecroppers and farm laborers to become farm owners.
4. Improved educational opportunities for rural youth.
5. Authority for the department to make loans for farm homes and buildings.
6. Extension of the rural electrification and telephone programs.
7. Extension of Social Security to farmers and farm workers.
8. Encouragement of farm cooperatives.

Agriculture Secretary Anderson also urged greater coordination of agricultural functions at State and county levels.

Both congressional committees have now gone to the country to learn at first-hand the wishes of the man behind the plow.

Truman Messages Expected

Sweeping Overhauling Of Civil Rights Law Likely Next Session

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

EARLY next year President Truman is expected to ask Congress for the most sweeping changes in the laws guaranteeing the civil rights of citizens of this Republic which have been made since the days of the Reconstruction.

The requested action will anticipate a reorganization of the Justice Department to provide for an additional Assistant Attorney General and an adequate staff to devote full time to the difficult problem.

Washington believes that the Administration's civil rights program will probably be the subject of two presidential messages to Congress. They will be based on the recommendations of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, a 15-member group headed by Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric.

The committee, after nearly a year's work, has virtually completed its report, which one member describes as "a cubic foot of dynamite."

When President Truman named the committee last December, he warned that this country had seen periods "when organized groups fanned hatred and intolerance, until, at times, mob action struck fear into the hearts of men and women because of their racial origin and religious beliefs."

Under 'Color of Law'

THE committee's membership is a cross section of the Nation, with labor, management, and various racial and religious groups represented.

It has been aided by a staff headed by Dr. Robert Carr, chief of the political science department of Dartmouth College.

It was just about a year ago that Attorney General Clark suggested to President Truman that he create a special committee on civil rights. The tenacious, 6-foot Texas lawyer had long been insisting, in school and out, that Federal civil rights statutes were inadequate.

For example, under present Federal laws the maximum sentence for those who deprive a citizen of his civil rights "under color of law" is one year in prison and a fine of $1000. Only last spring, the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida found Tom Crews, town marshall of Branford, guilty of having deprived Sam McFadden, a Negro, of his civil rights, "under color of law."

Crews received the maximum sentence. The Circuit Court upheld the sentence on appeal and Crews is now serving time.

But what Crews actually had done was to go after McFadden, father of 11 children, charge him with being drunk (there is evidence that charge was not true) and beat him mercilessly with a bull whip.

Then Crews forced McFadden to jump from a high bridge into the deep, swift current of the Suwannee River, according to testimony. Crews had taken pains to learn the Negro could not swim.

The body of the victim was discovered about a month later. A year in jail is the maximum the Federal Government could secure.

Prosecution for murder is a local matter, and in this case a local grand jury refused even to indict Crews. Indeed, the Federal Government could enter this case only because Crews was a police officer who had the victim in his custody.

'Friend of Court'

THE President's committee also has recommended that the Justice Department intervene more frequently simply as a "friend of the court" in civil rights cases, even where the State and local authorities have jurisdiction.

In other words, the Government would file a brief setting forth its position and the facts in the case for the information of the court. Obviously, where local officials themselves are prejudiced, this would be of value.

It is apparent in this recommendation that the President's committee recognizes at one and the same time the interest of the Federal Government and the danger of invading fields which should properly be left in the hands of the State.

Two years ago the Supreme Court, in a ruling on a Georgia case involving one Sheriff Claude Screws, made it even tougher for the Government to get action on civil rights.

The Civil Rights Unit had obtained conviction of Screws and two deputies who had killed a prisoner. The Negro prisoner was charged—falsely—with theft. He was dragged behind a speeding automobile, clubbed and beaten, and he died.

The Supreme Court reversed the conviction, which would have meant a $1000 fine and a year in jail, on the ground that the judge made no specific reference to the "willful intent" of the defendants to deprive the victim of a specific civil right—in this case, the right to a trial on the theft charge.

In effect, that means the Government has to show that any police officer indulging in brutality against a prisoner has the civil rights statutes firmly in mind and is determined to violate

Minnesotan Is 'Coming Up'

Taft-Stassen Entente Is a 'Stop Dewey' Plan

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

IN the presidential campaign of 1940, a political reporter looked on, eyes wide, at the whirlwind that was Wendell Willkie and wrote: "He may not be the Indispensable Man, but he certainly is the Indefatigable Man."

The same thing could be written today about Harold E. Stassen, and with even more truth.

The big fellow from Minnesota, so far the only candidate for the Presidency who has up and said he's a candidate, maintains a terrific pace. Yet he seems to do it in easy stride.

Stassen formally threw his hat in the ring at a press conference here at the Mayflower last December 17, saying he wanted to be "frank and direct about it." Since then he has criss-crossed the United States in his quest of the great prize. He has been to Soviet Russia and 15 other European countries; he has written a book, "Where I Stand," which will be released next month, and he is now on an October-November tour that will take him to the West Coast, the Middle West, the Mountain States, and the Deep South.

Merely a 'Phase'

RECENTLY an admirer commented on the intensity of his drive.

"We haven't even started yet," Stassen said, grinning.

He regards his present activities as merely a phase in his campaign. The climax to this phase will come in Milwaukee, Wis., on the night of November 24, when he broadcasts a half-hour speech at a "major rally" of the Stassen-for-President Volunteers. This will be the kick-off, the beginning of Stassen's drive for delegates.

Presumably, he will then go all out until the Republican Party meets at Philadelphia next June.

An observer pauses to wonder, with some awe, about the kind of campaign Stassen would wage if he actually got the GOP nomination. With President Truman as the Democratic nominee, it would be a case of a 41-year-old candidate running against a 64-year-old candidate.

He's Coming Up

WHAT are Stassen's chances of becoming the Republican standard bearer? A poll of Washington political reporters probably would indicate that he is coming up. The same poll, however, probably would show Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York still appraised as the No. 1 contender, and list Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the biggest threat to the whole GOP field.

The most that can be said for Stassen, then, is that he has an uphill fight and is making progress.

The reaction to Stassen's early bird candidacy last December took two forms. On the one hand, there was surprise that he should take the risk of announcing so early and opening a Washington headquarters. On the other hand, there was open admiration for his frankness and honesty—which he himself conceded was "unorthodox." Since then the admiration has swelled, helped along by Stassen's courage in speaking out on the issues of the day.

Certain Ego Required

TO RUN openly for the Presidency, a man has to think pretty well of himself. He is saying, in effect, that among 142 million Americans he is best fitted to head the Government of the greatest country in the history of the world.

It is well that some men do think so, because although the honors are great, and the niche in history alluring, the job is a killing one.

Still, there are many Americans who think that the office ought to seek the man, and not vice versa.

Stassen, obviously, doesn't subscribe to that notion. He made up his mind long ago that a faint heart would never get him into the White House, one reason being that politicians are not in the habit of looking to Minnesota for a presidential nominee.

Those who know Stassen well say that he is supremely confident of his ability, but not conceited. His record, certainly, gives him reason to be confident. A farm boy, of mixed German and Scandanavian parents, he became Governor of Minnesota at 32.

There was Stassen-for-President talk even then, although he was shy by three years of the constitutional age requirement.

District Armory

The District Commissioners have our wholehearted sympathy in their struggle to regain control over the District Armory. Unquestionably the building belongs to the District, which supplied the $2,700,000 for its construction. In addition, the District is paying $209,000 a year for upkeep of the building. Yet Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, has entered into an agreement for use of the Armory by the Home Builders Association in return for $8500 to be paid to a hastily formed Guard benefit group, the Headquarters Detachment Association. This seems to us an utterly unwarranted diversion of funds that ought to be flowing into the Treasury for account of the District government.

Of course, the basic difficulty traces back to the anomalous position of the National Guard in the District. In the States the National Guard units serve an important local function in addition to supplementing our national armed forces in time of war. In the District the Guard is wholly divorced from the local government, and doubtless always will be, for the Federal Government assumes responsibility for the preservation of law and order here whenever the police force is inadequate. Indeed, one of the chief purposes in establishing a Capital outside of the jurisdiction of any State was to assure Federal military protection when and if necessary.

In view of this situation, we think it would be entirely reasonable to shift to the Department of Defense all the cost of maintaining National Guard facilities in Washington. And that ought to include reimbursement for the cost of the Armory which absorbed local funds that should have gone into schools, health centers and welfare institutions. Until a satisfactory arrangement of this sort can be worked out, however, it is outrageous to have funds collected as rental for the Armory diverted to private organizations, or, for that matter, to any other governmental agency than its proper owner, the District of Columbia. The Commissioners will be fully justified, in our opinion, in fighting the case through the courts if that becomes necessary.

He Didn't Say No

In reading General Eisenhower's repudiation of the Draft-Eisenhower-for-President League, it is necessary to take careful note of both its positive and negative aspects. On the positive side the general says, through Gen. Floyd Parks of the Army's Public Information Division, that he "deprecates the formation of clubs or other organizations that seek to place his name before the public in connection with political purposes and urges that individuals do not spend their time or money in their support." He has not consented to the organization of these clubs, and if he had been consulted his consent would have been "emphatically withheld."

With careful reading this will be seen to be a straight-forward statement. It means that the Chief of Staff has been embarrassed by reports that a presidential boom in his behalf had been launched with his knowledge and approval. As Chief of Staff General Eisenhower cannot properly take an active part in politics. So long as he remains head of the Army he could not reasonably do less than he has done to discourage political organization and campaigning in his behalf. Obviously General Eisenhower is not going to become an active candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency while he remains in uniform.

We do not think, however, that the statement goes any further than this. To be sure, it says that General Eisenhower "neither seeks nor desires political office and anyone who purports to represent him differently is mistaken." But this is a formula that dozens of potential nominees have used in the past. They do not wish to beat any political drums unless there is a substantial public demand for their nomination. If such a demand arises, men who take this position can nearly always be drafted by their parties. Indeed, their reluctance to scramble for the nomination usually counts in their favor. The only way for a man to stop such a movement as has now gotten under way in behalf of General Eisenhower's nomination is for him to say flatly, as did Sherman, that he would not run if nominated. General "Ike" has not said that; apparently he has no intention of saying it. Consequently, he has left the door wide open. His name remains a formidable political factor that will have to be reckoned with in the months ahead.

Mr. Truman: Tradesman

President Truman, speaking the other day to members of the Small Business Advisory Committee of the House of Representatives, took occasion to remark that he had once been a small businessman himself. This of course was an allusion to his unhappy adventure as a haberdasher in Kansas City soon after his return from France as a captain of artillery. Mr. Truman's haberdashery, after a brief prosperity, fell upon hard times, and he and his partners were bankrupted. This episode of his early life has been pounced on by Mr. Truman's political enemies as somehow proving his ineptitude for public business, and it has been made the subject of cheap and ill-bred cloyning by Mr. Eddie Cantor and others. Some, including Comrade Boris Gorbatov of the Moscow Literary Gazette, have attempted to exploit the snobbish and anachronistic prejudice against retail trade. This, however, is a European—certainly not an American—prejudice, deriving from the days when the ruling class was comprised of great landowners. It is a little surprising to observe a recrudescence of it in a country where all landowners, large or small, have been ruthlessly exterminated.

But Mr. Truman, quite properly, shows no disposition to be embarrassed. Instead, he cited his experience as a haberdasher to the committeemen as an example of the difficulties and dangers that the small businessman must encounter in a country whose economy is dominated by finance capitalism. Mr. Truman also took the opportunity to make it known that he had paid in full all the debts incurred by the failure of his little business, although it had taken him more than 20 years. On this point it seems enough to observe that if Mr. Truman can do half as well with the problem of the public debt as he has done with his private debts, the country will have reason to be grateful for his experience.

There is an important school of political theory, pretty much in eclipse throughout the greater part of the New Deal, which holds that the preservation of what we call liberty and democracy depends entirely upon the possibility of a revival of small business and of small ownership generally. This doctrine was of course explicit in the arguments of Jefferson and the other agrarian democrats of the early 1800s, who regarded the growth of industrialism and finance with the greatest hostility and suspicion. This doctrine has been called rather loosely distributism.

The distributists hold that socialistic remedies for the evils of monopoly capitalism, such as social insurance and guaranteed employment and other governmental experiments in "mixed economy," merely accelerate the evolution toward the totalitarian state and the exchange of wage-slavery for state-slavery. The argument here follows the one advanced a generation ago in England by Hilaire Belloc and Cecil Chesterton and recently revised and elaborated in the light of German experience by the Viennese economists, Hayek and Mises. The weakness of the distributists was not in their analytical logic, but in the difficulty of discovering any way to reverse the collectivist tendencies inherent in the new technologies and in methods of mass production.

Recently, however, several Americans, who believe they have found answers to this problem, have advanced concrete proposals for reversing this economic trend and for recreating an economy of small proprietorships. One of these Americans is Mr. Fred I. Raymond, himself a businessman, whose plan is developed in a book called The Limitist; another is Mr. Thomas Hewes, a well-known Washington attorney, at one time special assistant to Secretary Cordell Hull. Mr. Hewes' plan is set forth in his recently revised work called Decentralize for Liberty. But although the thought of Messrs. Raymond and Hewes is directed toward the same end, their proposals differ considerably in detail. Both proposals, in our opinion, deserve careful study and we commend them to the members of the Small Business Advisory Committee.

Harriman's Appeal

In these perilous days the limits of operation of our Government system, along with the existence of an extraordinary division of responsibility between the political parties, put a premium on private effort in protecting the national security. This was apparently in Secretary Harriman's mind as he spoke to the Inland Daily Press Association in Chicago. He might have adopted as his text a variant of the new CARE slogan: "Everybody his own Marshall Plan." At any rate, speaking as he was to editors and publishers, he asked not only for newspaper cooperation in the contest with the new Cominform, but also for newspaper initiative and enterprise. The distinction is important. It is almost as if Mr. Harriman were asking every man to be his own Secretary of State, taking, as it were, a bit of the burden off Mr. Marshall's shoulders.

Specifically Secretary Harriman said that the Government must depend to a large extent upon the "enterprise of our free press," and added the concrete suggestion that "the outlets abroad of our newspapers might be expanded with great benefit in spreading accurate information." It was a call that might well be heeded by the newspaper business as a whole. For, though we may now expect a strengthening and development of our overseas information program (of which Mr. Harriman has been an ardent champion since he came back from Moscow) nothing that is likely to be done in this respect will be enough to cope with the propaganda task that Soviet organization and vituperation have imposed upon us.

Calling for immediate consideration is one piece of enterprise that came to our mind on reading Mr. Harriman's speech. It requires "enterprise" on the part of both Government and the publishing business. The countries of Europe, East and West, are starved for reading matter about America. It takes six weeks, for instance, for Prague to receive our newspapers and our magazines, though the Moscow and London dailies are delivered to Prague on the day of publication. Is it not possible for the Administration to allot air transport and in cooperation with the publishers set up agencies in the European capitals for the distribution of American periodicals?

It is much too comforting a thought that economic aid to the Communist-threatened countries owing allegiance to our civilization will retrieve them. Communism, like Soviet imperialism, is taking advantage of a vacuum—in the case of communism, a spiritual vacuum. Into this vacuum the materialist concept of history is pouring in accelerated volume and power, and, in our view, with increasing success. For a time economic help may arrest communism, but it will not kill it, for an idea can be conquered only by a better idea. That is where the free press, coupled with our official information service, can be of assistance in the new struggle for freedom. Peace is not enough without freedom, and freedom, like peace, has to be fought for, and continuously. Holmes said that all life is struggle, but in this Age of No Quarter it is going to be unrelenting struggle.

We hope Mr. Harriman's hearers pondered his appeal, and will set themselves the task of assuming a share of the responsibility that has been put at the door of our Government by the Soviet's war on freedom. From each man nowadays is due a service in behalf of his own freedom, for, when a Petkov is killed because he stood for the voice of opposition, every man's freedom is in danger. That was the sound principle that caused the body of Congressmen in Sofia to dare all secular authority and put a wreath on Petkov's grave.

"Trap For Fools"

Premier Stalin has a good deal of aptitude, if he happens to be in the right mood, for giving his interviewers "a soft answer that turneth away wrath." Apparently he was in such a mood when eight Labor members of the British Parliament visited him recently at his villa in Sochi, on the Black Sea. He spoke of being very patient, said he had no thought of making war and expressed a desire to settle political and economic issues with the United States. But the fact that he spoke of waiting for agreement until the United States and Great Britain "regain their reason" should be ample indication that what he said did not in any degree change the relationship between the Kremlin and the Western world.

The settled technique of dictators who are bent on a warlike course is to pursue it in the name of peace. Hitler's employment of this technique is so fresh in memory that Marshal Stalin could scarcely expect words of harmony and cooperation to cloak the aggressive policies he is following. It is not necessary, however, to measure the value of Stalin's words against Hitler's. The poker-faced master of Russia has told us in his own words how much his professions of friendly intentions are worth. He is quoted in this week's Time as saying:

> Words must have no relation to actions—otherwise what kind of diplomacy is it? Words are one thing, actions another. Good words are a mask for concealment of bad deeds. Sincere diplomacy is no more possible than dry water or wooden iron.

It may well be that Marshal Stalin's semi-conciliatory talk is designed to offset the sharp world reactions against the mad-bull tactics of his subordinates dealing with foreign policy in recent weeks. Brazil's threat to break diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union because of Moscow's refusal to apologize for Izvestia's attack upon President Dutra doubtless brought this reaction home to Stalin in pointed form. But all the world knows that, to the men of the Kremlin, statements such as Stalin made to the visiting British legislators are merely tools which, to borrow a phrase from Kipling, may be "twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools." In the present context of world events even Mr. Stalin ought to realize that the people on this side of the iron curtain cannot hear what he is saying because of the din created by what he is doing.

Salutary Sentence

In sentencing Eugene B. Casey, wartime executive assistant to President Roosevelt, to serve a six-month jail term, Judge Chesnut declared that it was in the public interest to impose "something more than a mere fine and suspended sentence." The severity of the punishment is a salutary reminder that the courts of this country and the Bureau of Internal Revenue, whose agents uncovered the damaging evidence against Mr. Casey, are no respecters of persons. On the contrary, the wealth and the former confidential official position of the convicted man, instead of winning for him special consideration, have rightly been considered an aggravation of his crime calling for imprisonment in addition to heavy fines and other legal penalties.

Perhaps the culprit shared the views of some cynics both at home and abroad who believe that the Government has one set of laws for the rich and privileged and another for the poor and underprivileged. Or he may have hoped that the heavy administrative burden suddenly thrust upon our tax officials by war would provide a convenient cover for tax evasion. No doubt some luckier crooks have escaped the official nets thrown out to catch them, owing to the magnitude of the task confronting the Bureau of Internal Revenue. But that does not detract from the salutary effect of vigorous prosecution and punishment of a public enemy like Mr. Casey, who, while pretending to serve the public as a confidential aide of the President, was trying to increase an already large fortune by defrauding the Government.

Half a Loaf

This communication is in answer to a letter appearing in The Washington Post on October 12.

How tolerant Mr. E. G. is of the likes and habits of others! Because he and his wife are able to use a whole loaf of bread without waste, he seems sure that anyone who has difficulty doing the same is just insistent on having absolutely fresh bread at all times. Has he considered the plight of those who live alone, who eat many meals away from home, or who for any reason habitually eat very little bread? Until our young son started to eat bread regularly, our usual consumption was about six slices per week for the two of us. An average-sized loaf was obviously extremely old, dry and stale, if not moldy, before we finished it.

Other products, from paints to tooth paste, are sold in "dime store" packages, as well as in the "large economy sizes." If, as many believe, there is also a market for small loaves of bread—and especially if there is a chance that the exploitation of that market would diminish waste and release more grain for the starving peoples of the world—why should anyone object? I'm sure the "large economy-sized" loaves would still be available for those who want them.

If there is no law against small loaves, why doesn't some bakery take advantage of our free enterprise system and start distributing the small loaves without waiting for Government directive or industry-wide agreement?

K. S. EATON.

Silver Spring.

Now it is proposed to cut down on the size of a loaf of bread! And I suppose we consumers must assume that there will be no propotionate reduction in the price of that loaf!

A better solution to the problem of food saving, it seems to me, would be to have the bakeries reset their slicing machines to the point at which those machines were set before the bakeries imposed on us the hidden increase in cost of a loaf of bread by the simple artifice of cutting it into thicker slices. Since people eat bread not by the loaf but by the slice, this adjustment to thinner slices could readily be made and would conserve up to three or four slices—possibly more—per loaf.

Proper Foods

It is a pity that in his article of October 12, "Vienna Yearns for Stale Bread; We Send Ham," Mr. Fodor has discussed a vital problem in terms that make one wonder whether the confusion in his own mind, or in that of his two straightmen, does not exceed the one he sets out to criticize. Undoubtedly the relief experience of the first two postwar years yields many examples of a particular food being sent to a country which does not ordinarily include it in its diet.

Mr. Fodor may be excused for not knowing that UNRRA's supplies were, to a large extent, contributed by the member countries on a "take-it-or-leave-it" basis, putting it up to the agency to find suitable outlets, not always an easy task for certain surplus items. Mr. Fodor may not be excused for presenting the misleading chatter of his two acquaintances as a serious reporting job.

To quote only a few examples: (1) Except in the south, Europeans normally are large butter consumers; the reason that margarine is not widely eaten is exactly that butter is available in normal times. In what sense margarine is "expensive" is difficult to understand; the suggestion to base a fat-procurement program on house-to-house collection of kitchen drippings betrays an utter lack of familiarity with procurement problems.

(2) Canned corn is a far cry from cornmeal and "polenta" and therefore as difficult to dispose of in Italy as in Greece; southern Italy consumes practically no corn at all, contrary to the assertion in the article.

(3) The suggestion to send "bread, bread and bread" (to which the Italians can "add a tomato or two to supplement their diet") is a praiseworthy one, and one may assume that the author considers UNRRA'S huge wheat shipments as acceptable substitutes for stale bread (the condition of which, when it reaches the consumer after a minimum lapse of two months can easily be imagined). One wonders whether Mr. Fodor's friend has heard of the world cereal shortage, the seriousness of which made even "Quaker Oats" a welcome substitute for flour.

It seems the fashion today to belittle and criticize UNRRA, but it would be well to stick to the many real shortcomings of that organization rather than to introduce misinformation and sloppy thinking into a problem that is still very much the order of the day.

"Latin Communism"

You have hit the nail on the head in your editorial "Latin Communism" in The Washington Post of October 13. If the United States had continued its magnificent work of economic betterment, which was carried on during the war years throughout Latin America, we would not feel the need for repression now. It still is time for all of us to wake up with the adoption of your five points.

Foreign Postage

Yes, reduce the parcel post rate on food relief packages sent abroad. I agree with A. Majower, who suggested that in a letter to The Washington Post of October 14. The present rate of 14 cents a pound makes individual shipments a luxury. The parcel post charges usually add up to twice the cost of the food contained in the package. Surely the actual transportation costs to the Govenment cannot be as high as the sums the Postoffice Department collects.

Individuals are eager to send these packages, and we are sending many at the present high costs. But there are thousands of persons who could and would send more packages if the parcel post rate did not eat up so much of their cash. The Government ought to do everything in its power to encourage the sending of food packages, for that may help to reduce the Government's own burdens. And while it is looking into the matter, it could also do away with some of the red tape. Why, for example, force persons to fill out customs declarations on these food gifts when they go to the American zone in Germany?

Meatless Tuesday

Last Tuesday I had dinner in a restaurant, where I overheard the following story:

There was a couple coming in, sitting down next to our table, when the hostess came and said:

"Good evening—there's no meat on the menu, but a la carte you can order whatever you please, as we found out that our competitors are also serving meat on meatless days!"

"Ah," said the customer, "I just heard that you are the only restaurant in the neighborhood serving meat on meatless days!"

Says the hostess, smiling and blushing a little, "That's why you're here, isn't it?"

"Yes," was the short reply of the customer, and then he ordered a sirloin steak!

Isn't that a sad joke?

"Sham In Korea"

On October 10, you published a letter from Mr. Robert T. Oliver, entitled "Sham in Korea," in which he says that in the election of the Interim Legislative Assembly in South Korea (U. S. Zone), the Nationalist Federation won an overwhelming victory at the polls. It is true that these extreme rightists obtained a majority of legislative seats with the aid of police and civil officials. The irregularities in the elections were so prevalent that Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge, commander of the American forces in South Korea, ordered a reelection in some districts.

Mr. Oliver criticized the American efforts to unify the Korean political parties through a coalition committee. Does he want a democracy by coalition or a dictatorship by one party rule?

He also charged that Dr. Kimm Kiusic, chairman of the South Korean Legislative Assembly, and the late Lyuh Woon Hyung, chairman of the Working People's Party, and the Korean Olympic Association, were former Communists. As every Korean knows Dr. Kimm and Mr. Lyuh were never Communists.

In Korea, Dr. Kimm has been classed as a rightist but not reactionary, and Mr. Lyuh was liberal but not red. They perhaps disliked communism more than any of those who attempt to smear them as Communists. Mr. Oliver might just as well call the extreme rightist, Syngman Rhee, a former Communist, for in the early thirties he wanted an understanding with Soviet Russia and its support, which was quite legitimate.

Mr. Oliver has been a most impatient agitator for instituting "democracy" in south Korea through an election in accordance with the election law passed by the Interim Legislative Assembly last June. He is well aware of the fact that the election law is very undemocratic. There is no franchise law in any democratic nation which has such a high age provision. The Rhee group proposed setting the voting age at 25, while the democratic members of the Legislature proposed 20. The extremists with their numerical strength managed to set the voting age at 23. The purpose of imposing this high age qualification was obvious. It was to keep several million young people, who are more alert in public affairs than their elders, away from the polls.

No other Korean received so much support from General Hodge as did Rhee. Even in such an advantageous position, Rhee demonstrated neither the statesmanship nor leadership expected of him. For the good of Korea, the disappointed general could not afford to support the factionalist politician indefinitely, but was forced to look for a more capable leadership. This made Mr. Oliver very bitter and he is now charging General Hodge and the United States Government with following a policy of dictatorship. On the contrary, many Koreans complain of the weakness of American policy as a contributory factor in the lawlessness created in south Korea by the uncontrolled extremist groups.

The insistence of the reactionary faction for a hurried election is an indication that Rhee's leadership is slipping as time goes by.

Reds In French Unions

By Andre Visson

Marshall Plan Opposed

THE Communist-indorsed strikes which paralyzed transportation in Paris on the eve of the French municipal elections to be held this Sunday throw a revealing light on the new Communist objectives and tactics.

French Communist leaders, properly briefed by Moscow, reached the conclusion that their immediate objectives is not to strengthen the political position of their party at the polls, but to wreck American aid to France.

Parisian workers, who were the main victims of the strike which prevented them from reaching their plants, are unlikely to have any particular sympathy for the French Communist Party this week. But the party leaders do not at this moment appear to care very much about the feelings of the French workers. They consider that they have a sufficient grip on them in the control of the French Confederation of Trade-Unions—CGT (Confederation Generale de Travail—to which 5,500,000 French workers belong. And it is of paramount importance to the Politburo in Moscow and to its "Cominform" branch in Belgrade to use the Communist control of the French trade-unions for wrecking the Marshall Plan.

THE STRIKES which are now breaking out in France can, indeed, have a twofold damaging effect on the success of the proposed American aid for European recovery. First, any important strike, which at a distance of 3000 miles always appears much more terrifying than it does on the spot, may frighten American legislators who will be called on to indorse the Marshall Plan. Secondly, besides this possible psychological damage in the United States, any new wave of important strikes in France may, indeed, cause serious economic damage there.

When, after the liberation, the French Communist leader, Maurice Thorez, returned from Moscow, he defined the labor policy of the Communists in a talk to the coal miners at Amiens as no strikes, no demands for increased wages; everything should be sacrificed to the intensified national production upon which national prosperity depends. But after the dark shadow of Soviet-American conflict fell over western Europe, Thorez and his associates were ordered by Moscow to cease being interested in French national prosperity. Above all they were instructed not to allow Americans to help the anti-Communist French attain economic recovery with American dollars, food, fuel or raw materials. Consequently the French Communists must indorse—and when necessary instigate—all workers' demands for increased wages and start as many strikes as possible.

THERE ARE two schools of thought on how to meet this danger: The first advocates that we disregard it completely and speed up as much help as possible, in the belief that the amelioration of economic conditions will induce an increasing number of French workers to disobey the Communist bosses in their unions. At the same time all further attempts of the Communists to paralyze French recovery should make them only more unpopular with the French workers. The other school of thought recommends immediate measures for the elimination of Communist control of the French labor unions as one of the preliminary conditions not for stopgap credits but for the great recovery credits to be granted under the Marshall Plan.

The Communists, according to ILO experts, do not have a majority among union members. But by using a number of clever tricks they succeeded in having a majority in the council of directors. Six out of the 13 directors of the CGT are Communists and several others are sympathizers. The nominal president of the Federation is the Socialist, Leon Jouhaux. But its real boss is the Communist secretary-general of the federation, Benoit Frachon. The Communists achieved these results by a skillful combination of terror campaign and "attrition tactics" in a great number of local unions, and by ordering their men to accept all minor union jobs which are usually badly paid and would not ordinarily attract other union members. Elections in the French labor unions are held by open ballot. So many timid souls do not dare to vote against the Communists, who, let it be known that they would "take care' of their adversaries once they got into power. Moreover, the elections are usually held late in the evening, in a place pretty remote from the workers' residence. Those who overcome their fatigue and do attend are put to the trail of unending debate which may last way beyond midnight. Losing patience, many of them return home. When the Communists figure out that their adherents are in the majority, they call for a vote and thus have their candidates elected.

These Communist tactics of terror and attrition could be successfully met by secret ballot elections held during working hours in the plants.

This electoral reform of the French labor unions is advocated by De Gaullists. The status of the French labor unions could be changed either by constitutional amendment or by a law of the National Assembly.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

CSC Has Juicy File on Hoffman

By Drew Pearson

MICHIGAN'S bombastic Congressman Clare Hoffman showed what he thought of the public's right to scrutinize the acts of Congressmen when he cross-examined the editor of the Washington Star.

The Star had poked fun at the gentleman from Allegan, Mich., because he didn't like the fact that the Civil Service Commission kept a file on him. Apparently the Congressman thought the Civil Service Commission should keep a file on everybody except him.

What the public did not know, however, and what Hoffman probably did know, was that the Civil Service Commission's file contained some highly interesting but rather damaging Hoffman remarks. Here are some of them:

"We might now profit from what Hitler has done by adopting at least some of his decent methods of production, or preparedness." (Speech by Hoffman one year and a half after Hitler invaded Poland and just as France was falling.)

"I charge, upon my responsibility as a Representative, that this Administration is deliberately sabotaging our national defense." (Hoffman made this speech on January 31, 1941, after he had voted against most Roosevelt measures for preparedness.)

"What matters it to us whether our independence be taken from us by the force of Germany and Japan or stolen from us by a Streit, an Ickes, and their associates?" (January 22, 1942).

"All of us, if we would stop to read—think—know that there is a war right here within our own Government, carried on by an enemy more dangerous than either the one on the Atlantic or the Pacific." (February 16, 1942).

Also in the Civil Service files is the interesting notation that Congressman Hoffman's speeches have been sold and distributed by Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, later indicted for sedition, and that George Sylvester Viereck, who served a jail term for his activities as a German agent, sent out 30,000 copies of an editorial under Hoffman's frank. Others of Hoffman's speeches were distributed under his frank by Charles Hudson, Gerald Winrod and David Baxter, all indicted for sedition.

"I have no apology to offer for making those speeches, for sending them out, or for the manner in which they were sent out," Hoffman said afterward.

However, it was another matter when he discovered that the Civil Service Commission had kept in its files the history and background of the speeches.

Truman's Muscle-Man

STAR-STUDDED generals are a dime a dozen around the White House, but no other military man spends as much time with the President as a lowly sergeant. He is J. P. Leverett, who enjoys the unique distinction of being the only person who can pinch and poke the President. Sergeant Leverett is Truman's rubdown man.

It is the President's custom to start off his day with a brisk dip in the White House pool, after which he turns himself over to Sergeant Leverett, who kneads the Presidential muscles under a sun lamp. Usually this is an occasion for profound barbershop talk. Once or twice the sarge found the President's conversation so absorbing he forgot to turn off the sun lamp, and gave Mr. Truman a slight toasting.

The other day, however, it was Truman who did the listening as the sarge spoke uneasily of a problem of his own. His wife was at Walter Reed Hospital, about to have a baby. Truman asked to be notified whether it was a boy or a girl, and not long after the event Mrs. Leverett received a telegram:

"Congratulations on your new four-star general."

It was signed Harry Truman.

NLRB on the Carpet

THE STORM over whether top AFL and CIO officers must sign non-Communist affidavits blew itself out the other day behind closed congressional doors. For two hours, however, the National Labor Relations Board was kept on the carpet.

The cross-examination was conducted by the Senate-House committee set up to keep an eye on the Taft-Hartley law, and its members wanted to know why the Labor Board and its chief counsel had not been able to get together on their rulings. Counsel Robert Denham had issued a written opinion that AFL and CIO general officers must sign affidavits before any affiliated union could use the board's facilities. This was later reversed by the NLRB itself.

"What I want to know," interrupted cigar-chewing Congressman Gerald Landis, Indiana Republican, "is how the AFL convention got advance notice that the board was going to reverse its decision?"

"I would like to know myself," confessed Paul Herzog, NLRB chairman. "Evidently there was a leak."

Inflation Gets a New Jog Nov. 1

ON THE first of next month we shall have another installment of inflation. "Installment" is the appropriate word, for the step next month consists of taking controls off installment selling.

At present, a regulation of the Federal Reserve Board puts a limit on the terms of installment selling; on automobiles it is one third down and 15 months to pay. After November 1, sellers of any goods can make the terms what they please.

A humorous exaggeration of what went on before the war was current in many colloquialisms. "A dollar down and a dollar a month till the cows come home," or "till you die," or "forever."

It is in this phase of the installment practice upon which most of the criticism of it dwells. But apart from the individual buyer and seller, the enlargement of installment selling that is certain to follow removal of Government regulation of it next month goes to the heart of our national well-being at this time.

Dangerous Timing

MORE credit is, in effect, more money. It means more purchasing power. Increase of purchasing power is looked upon as a virtue, and under normal conditions commonly is. But present conditions are utterly abnormal, dangerously so.

Increase of purchasing power is wholesome only when it is accompanied by abundance of goods. At present, when goods are scarce, increase of purchasing power means, automatically and infallibly, higher prices of goods. The effect of the removal of Government restrictions on installment buying next month will be a definite step in inflation.

It follows closely upon another. Some weeks ago veterans were paid some billions of dollars through their cashing of "terminal leave" bonds, originally issued to be paid off some years hence. The cash paid to the veterans was in effect an immense increase in the quantity of money in the country. It was an increase of purchasing power not accompanied by any increase in quantity of goods, and was therefore an automatic cause of rising prices.

Mechanism Clicking

ALL this goes to the very heart of inflation. While there is much argument about the exact definition of inflation, there is general agreement upon the basic cause of it: increase in quantity of money out of proportion to quantity of goods.

Apart from this basic definition of inflation, there is the mechanism through which inflation operates. The mechanism consists of increase in wage rates (which is increase of purchasing power), followed by increase in cost of producing goods, which means increase in prices of goods, increase in cost of living. This is followed in turn by still further increases in wage rates. That upward spiral has gone on since the end of the war.

At present, increases in wage rates are not taking place to a material degree, though of course the existing rates are high, as the sum of increases that have taken place since the end of the war.

In the other phase of the inflation spiral, prices of goods are very high and in process of going higher. If increase in price of goods, cost of living, is continued, we are likely to see the coming months a new wave of demands by labor for higher wage rates.

In short, the inflation mechanism is at this moment going strong.

Blame Is Shared

THE prospect of inflation is a national emergency. To check it is an imperative obligation on the Administration at Washington. The Administration itself is responsible for much of it. Among other inflationary actions, the Administration, following the end of the war, adopted a policy of bringing about increases in wage rates.

Congress shares with the Administration some of the responsibility for inflation. A cause and effect of inflation, currently glaring, is high prices of farm products, food. On this point the Government practices a policy called "price support." This policy is based upon statutes passed by Congress, some during the 1930s, when prices of farm products were relatively low, some passed during the war to stimulate production of food.

In the emergency today, checking inflation is an obligation of both the Administration and Congress. Much of the recent talk about President Truman calling a special session of Congress says the need for it is the crisis in Europe. The domestic crisis of inflation calls equally for action; indeed, inflation is a cause of both the foreign crisis and the domestic one.

Congress and the President together could check inflation. Of many steps possible, one would be modification of the Government policy and practice of price support for farm products, food. Another would be extension of the government control over installment selling, due to expire November 1.

Taft Act's Benefits

THE executive council's proposal to amend the AFL constitution in order to convert its 13 vice presidents into members of an executive board and to leave the federation with only two officers, a president and a secretary-treasurer, is further proof, if any were needed, of the benefits which organized labor hopes to derive from the Taft-Hartley Act. For the AFL is considering this drastic and unexampled action in order to bring the smallest and least important of its constituents under the law.

Now that the new law has become operative, we are beginning to see the difference between fact and propaganda. In spite of the attacks to which the law has been subjected, there will in time be very few unions which will elect to deny themselves the law's benefits. And the decisions of those few will depend upon highly peculiar considerations.

Still the Wagner Act

THE reasons for this changing attitude of organized labor are simple. The Taft-Hartley Act, among other things, reenacted the Wagner Act. It revised the Wagner Act in numerous respects. But those features of the Wagner Act which in the last 10 years proved of such inestimable value to unions are still in the law.

Unions can still proceed against unfair labor practices and they can still invite representation elections. Every union and every union lawyer knows that. Where such valuable and tested aids to organizing and winning recognition are made available by law, a union will think twice about rejecting a law because it dislikes some of its provisions.

The unions which decide to bypass the law will do so either because they think they don't need it or because they are embarrassed by the Communist requirements of the statute.

John Has Nothing to Gain

THERE are a number of unions which have so throughly organized the areas of their jurisdiction that they can well afford to rest on their laurels. For them the Wagner Act and its predecessors did a thorough job.

The United Mine Workers would seem to fall in this category. The coal mines are completely organized. The adventures of District 50 must have been expensive and not worth the effort put into them.

It is not that the miners and John L. Lewis are averse, on principle, to employing law and Government in the union's service. For they did just that on a grand scale during the NRA and the early days of the Wagner Act. In fact, the Government, through its various agencies, did yeoman's service for Lewis and his organization. It put them both on their feet.

Under the circumstances, Lewis can afford to dedicate himself to matters of principle. With characteristic unselfishness he will insist on steering the federation in the proper course whatever the feelings and the views of his hundred, more or less, fellow presidents.

Larger Problems Foreshadowed

A Marshall Miniature

By Thomas Hardie
Post Reporter

MANY persons are under the impression that the Marshall Plan is completely revolutionary. Actually, it is the dovetailing of American aid into the historical concept that European nations, especially those in the west, can benefit themselves by designing an over-all economic blueprint.

For instance, Benelux, the economic coalition proposed for Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, is patterned after the tripartite union of the same countries resulting from the Congress of Vienna in 1814 and the Belgium-Luxembourg economic union developed after World War I.

Benelux was conceived by the three governments in exile in London in 1944. Although admittedly beset with difficulties, such as the recent postponement of its inaugural date from September 1 to January 1, 1948, it should prove a valuable backdrop and precedent for the larger brotherhood of the Marshall Plan in which it is included.

Currency Comes Last

BENELUX aims to increase the foreign trade of the three nations and to coordinate trade among them. It avoids all political and cultural problems, and is planned in three steps:

First, the establishment of uniform customs regulations for all imports from countries outside the union.

Second, the abolition of import duties among the three nations and the establishment of uniform excise and sales taxes.

The final step will be complete economy and monetary union. Although this phase will not take shape before 1952, the countries have laid the groundwork by sending a single delegation to the Geneva World Trade Conference last spring.

Under the plan, the Dutch, for example, will ship their customary surplus of vegetables, cheese, potatoes and flowers to their predominantly mining and manufacturing neighbors. In return they will get needed steel and manufactured products.

The Dutch vegetable surplus highlights the general problem. At present, extensive canning is impossible for lack of tin plate, which they could get from their neighbors.

Each Has Advantages

ONE expected difficulty is the difference in price levels. Holland, for example, has no domestic tax on beer, and with more favorable brewing conditions and lower production costs she could undersell Belgium and Luxembourg by a good 35 per cent, officials estimate.

Belgium was liberated before its neighbors, and had a head-start on postwar recovery. She also was spared much of the plundering and battle scars suffered by the Netherlands. Some think this might give Belgium an undue advantage in open competition.

Some light and medium Belgian manufacturers have expressed fear that Holland would take advantage of the union to increase its low industry potential, and because of cheaper labor be able to "dump" in Belgian markets.

The matter of a common currency is expected to be one of the toughest problems to crack. However, even before World War I, France, Belgium and Switzerland had worked out a plan where coins were freely interchangeable.

Jealous of Shipping

ONE major issue has not been tackled—ocean shipping. In 1938 the sea traffic of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Antwerp and Ghent totaled 65 million tons, more than the combined tonnage of New York and London. The Dutch have shown little willingness to coordinate this traffic of the two maritime countries, Belgium and the Netherlands, clinging to their tradition of free competition.

The democratically chosen Parliaments of the member states are fully backing the plan. A survey of public opinion in Holland, for example, showed that 80 per cent of the population welcomed such a union and only 3 per cent were against it. Seventeen per cent had "no opinion."

True, Belgian small and medium industrialists fear the growth of small industry in the Netherlands, Belgian farmers fear low-cost Dutch agriculture and Dutch farmers fear the growth of agriculture in Belgium and Luxembourg, but all realize the necessity of economic union.

Matter of Fact

Reich 'Evacuation' Offer Likely

By Stewart Alsop

THE Politburo rarely telegraphs its punches. There is no really reliable way of forecasting the next turning in the devious road of Soviet foreign policy, since the American experts can only fit together odd pieces of a jigsaw puzzle, with most of the puzzle missing. Yet if these odd pieces of the puzzle are being correctly interpreted, there is a strong possibility that the planners in the Kremlin are preparing a Sunday punch, to be ready for delivery at the Foreign Ministers' Conference next month.

The speculation—and it is still only speculation—runs something like this: The ministers will meet as scheduled in London on November 25. The old familiar deadlock will develop, with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov tirelessly reiterating his favorite word, "Nyet."

Then, just as the ministers and their aides are packing to go home in disgust, Molotov will ask for one more conference. With an air of making an enormous concession to break the deadlock, he will offer what the Soviets have already offered in Korea—simultaneous withdrawal of all occupying troops in Germany.

Formality of Nodding

IT MAY seem odd that this prospect fails to delight the American policy-makers. It has long been the first objective of American foreign policy to get the Red army out of Germany and out of those Balkan states in which the Red army remains for the ostensible purpose of keeping open the lines of communication to Germany and Austria. Yet this American objective is, of course, conditional on a peace treaty with Germany, including real political and economic unification of all zones and supervised free elections of a German government.

The astute planners in the Kremlin, on the other hand, if they decide to use the same tactical maneuver they have already used in Korea, are expected to demand a simple referendum of the German people before the evacuation of all foreign troops. Already, on the Soviet-controlled radio in Berlin, there have been hints of such a referendum. It would merely call for a vote by the German people on whether foreign troops should be evacuated and Germany unified.

The Germans would, of course, vote an overwhelming "Yes" on both questions. Then, if the Soviet proposal took the expected shape, the occupation armies would simply pull out, leaving Germany to the Germans.

The Korean Pattern

NATURALLY, before making any such offer, the planners in the Kremlin would have made very careful preparation for a possible acceptance of the offer by the Western powers. In northern Korea, before making their evacuation offer, the Soviets established an all-Communist "people's government" of willing Soviet stooges. They also trained and equipped a "Korean Red army" of more than 200,000 men.

Thus, the Kremlin planners undoubtedly calculated, if the Americans were idiots enough to accept their offer of simultaneous evacuation, all Korea would very quickly become a Soviet bulwark. If the Americans refused, the offer would at least be an effective propaganda device in Korea and throughout the world.

There are reliable reports that precisely the same sort of preparations are now in progress in the Soviet zone of Germany. The Communist control of the Soviet-sponsored "Socialist Unity Party" is now wholly unchallenged. The unreliable deadwood has been ruthlessly weeded out. The Communists have an iron grip on the labor unions throughout eastern Germany, and the Communist minority is on the offensive throughout the western zones. Finally, the German equivalent of the "Korean Red army" is being prepared.

Waiting in South Russia

THERE are reliable reports that this Russian-created German army, whose core is the German survivors of Stalingrad, numbers at least 100,000 men and probably far more. It is being kept in readiness in south Russia and its leaders, Marshal Friedrich von Paulus and Maj. Gen. Walter von Seydlitz, are in Germany, at the beck and call of the Soviet commanders.

One hundred thousand men is not a great army. Yet in case of the evacuation of all foreign troops from Germany, even so small an army would become the only power in what would otherwise be a complete power vacuum. Working closely with the tightly organized German Communist leadership, this power could be expected shortly to assure Communist, and thus Soviet, domination of all Germany.

Thus the Soviets would have everything to gain and nothing to lose. At the most, they would gain Germany, which Nicolai Lenin called the key to Europe. At the least, they would gain an exceedingly effective propaganda weapon, in Europe as a whole, but especially with Germany.

For if the Western powers refused the Soviet offer—as they must—the blame for refusing to make a settlement in Germany could be placed on them. That is why those who have most closely followed Soviet tactics are convinced that there may well be something in the speculation about the forthcoming Soviet proposal.

Science Thinks Atom Might Solve Cancer Secret in 7 Years

By Robert M. Hutchins

Chancellor, University of Chicago
Copyright, International News Service

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Thanks to atomic research, the mystery of cancerous growth may be solved within a few years—perhaps as few as seven.

Huntsmen sometimes band together to sweep through a forest in narrowing paths and drive a beast into the open where it may be slain. This practice, too machine-like to be called sportsmanship, is nevertheless sure-fire.

Scientists at the University of Chicago are using that method against cancer. In 18 major paths, and in many minor ones, they are working together to find the cause of the disease which kills 177,000 Americans a year.

Enlisted in the effort are experts in physics, chemistry, medicine, obstetrics, gynecology, pediatrics, surgery, roentgenology, bacteriology, parasitology, pathology, biochemistry, pharmacology, physiology, anatomy, botany and zoology.

Enlisted, too, is the limitless power of atomic science. The scientists are relying heavily on the 12 million dollar nuclear research program started by the University of Chicago with the hope that private capital and industry would soon see its value and help pay the cost.

Jungle Searchlight

IN medicine, and particularly in cancer research, atomic knowledge provides instruments greater than the microscope.

The human body is a chemical jungle. Most of the elements found in nature combine in uncounted complex ways to form the human structure.

Organs, bones, blood, fat, flesh and skin have their own chemical makeup and go through their own chemical processes of living. Here is chemistry that cannot be duplicated in test-tubes. It can't be seen by a microscope or exposed by X-rays.

But now it can be observed by atomic means. Searchlights have been brought into the jungle. In fact, beams very probably can be attached to a cancer cell which the cell can't shake off.

They are rays thrown out by substances which have been made radioactive and which fasten themselves in or near cancer cells. Such substances are known as radioactive isotopes, or radioisotopes. They have long been known.

Cyclotrons produced them before the war at enormous cost in money and time. They are now being made cheaply and quickly as a direct result of work on the atomic bomb. A quality of such a substance which before the war would have cost one million dollars and required three years to make, can now be turned out overnight at a cost of $50.

Overwhelming Growth

THE result is that radioisotopes are being used on a wide scale. They are giving scientists in many fields, particularly those concerned with cells and tissue, an insight into growth that never before was possible.

The cancer problem is one of growth. When cell units in the body undergo change so that they multiply at an abnormally high rate and acquire the property of penetrating surrounding tissue or spreading to distant organs, then cancer is present.

The cancerous body makes millions of new and unneeded cells to the point that man is literally consumed by his own flesh.

When introduced into the body, radioisotopes carry with them wherever they go the telltale ray which the scientist follows with a Geiger counter. Never before has the scientist had means to trace and time an element in the course of its becoming part of the body.

This type of research opens the way for startling developments in all medical sciences. When we know the chemistry of the human body, we shall know how to build a stronger race. At the same time we shall gain priceless knowledge in how to combat the bodily ills of the present race.

Control Is Problem

IN fighting disease it is important to know what parts of the body have special affinity for certain substances.

It is known, for example, that the thyroid gland in the neck has special affinity for iodine and that bones attract phosphorous. When we take iodine into our bodies through food or water, a large portion goes to the thyroid to be stored for use as part of the fluid which the gland secretes. If the iodine used is a radioactive isotope, the rays it emits are concentrated in the thyroid gland.

Radioactive rays are extremely destructive to living cells—and on this basis are used to treat cancer. One of the problems is to regulate radioactive iodine in such a way as to concentrate it in the thyroid tumor cells in an amount sufficient to destroy them.

Radioactive phosphorus checks bone cancer, and the same problem of regulation persists.

Leukemia is cancer which causes organs responsible for formation of blood to produce too many white corpuscles. These overabundant white cells suffer reduced ability to perform their normal function of resisting infection.

For many years X-ray treatment has been beneficial but not at all certain of cure. Experiments with radioactive phosphorus have shown it to be as beneficial as X-ray in most cases and in some cases more advantageous. Radioisotopes of gold and sodium have also been found effective in fighting leukemia.

83 Available Elements

THESE developments are still in experimental stages. Expenditure of much money and effort confronts us. The Cancer Research Foundation of the University of Chicago is currently conducting a campaign to raise $2,570,000 for additional facilities.

We have a long way to go and, happily, nature gives us a lot to work with. The list of radioactive elements being used in medical research is already long and it is lengthening. Among those being put to work experimentally are radioactive antimony, argon, arsenic, bromine, calcium, carbon, chlorine, gold, iodine, iron, mercury, phosphorus, potassium, silver, strontium, sulphur, sodium and zinc.

After excluding all elements which are now known to have even remote value in making atomic bombs, nature has given us 83 elements for peacetime research. If that were not enough, scientists working with restricted elements are adding immeasurably to this Nation's basic knowledge of the atom and its powers.

Cancer—and many other diseases—cannot withstand assaults which atomic knowledge enables us to hurl.

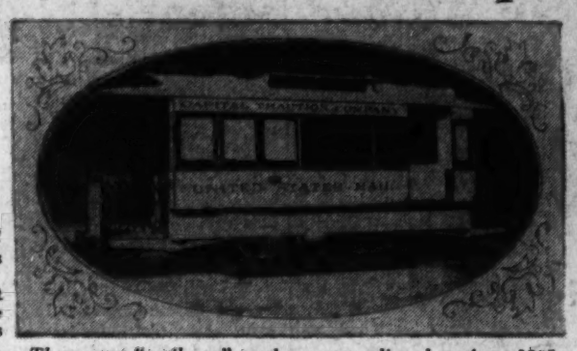
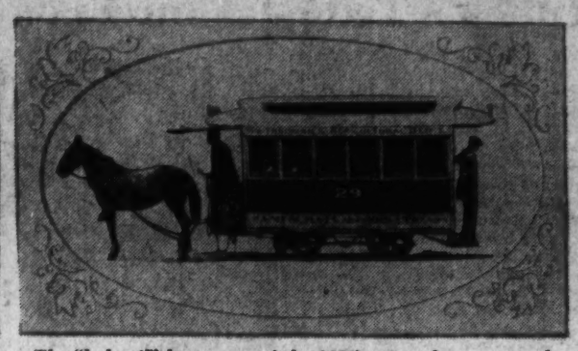
There Were 15 Lines at One Time

After 150 Years, Capital Transit's All Alone



There were "mail cars" on the streetcar lines here from 1895 to 1913. This one shuttled between East Capitol st., the main postoffice on 12th st. nw. and Georgetown



The "bob-tail" horse cars of the 1880's were almost as much "porch" as passenger space. This packed specimen was photographed on Maryland ave.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Post Reporter

FEW tears were shed when the venerable Washington Railway & Electric Co. died quietly the other day.

For the last 14 years "Wreco" had existed on the fruits of its earlier labors. As a holding company for 50 per cent of Capital Transit Co. stock and 100 per cent of Potomac Electric Power Co. common shares, it collected its dividends and passed on a large share to its parent, the North American Co.

Declaring it served no useful purpose, the Securities and Exchange Commission passed the death sentence on Wreco under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1933. This was upheld by District Court and the local Public Utilities Commission.

Wreco, which dated back to 1899, was merely one of many companies in the city's history. There were 15 or more in existence here at one time. The field gradually narrowed to two—Wreco and Capital Traction—and they were merged in 1933 under the present name.

Nameless Casualties

INTERESTED in some of the predecessor lines? The following history is far from complete. Many small lines perished quickly. Their names were not even recorded. But with the assistance of officials and files of Washington Railway & Electric and Capital Transit, The Washington Post has traced back as far as possible the highlights of the city's transit history:

1800 to 1830—Just stagecoaches and muddy avenues.

1830—First organized transportation . . . Omnibuses carrying 12 pasengers . . . Schedules at whims of operators.

1855—All omnibus lines brought under control of Gilbert Van Derwerken . . . Regular schedules set up between Georgetown and the Capitol . . . Fare 12½ cents . . . Streets full of mudholes, horses often bogged down . . . Rear entrance to omnibuses so they could back into sidewalk for passengers.

Washington's first organized public transportation, the Van Derwerken lines of the 1850's, operated handsomely decorated coaches which had names, like Pullman cars. The fancy job above ran, or, rather, was hauled from the Capitol to Georgetown 1862—Civil War transformed Washington into metropolis of 200,000 persons . . . Uproar made for better transportation . . . Horse-drawn hacks sprang up to meet demand, charging "outrageous" $2 an hour, if you could get them.

1862—Washington & Georgetown Railroad chartered by Congress as first local transit system to operate on tracks . . . Horses plodded from what is now Wisconsin ave. and M st., to Navy Yard via Pennsylvania ave., also on 7th and 14th sts., to what is now Florida ave.

1864—Metropolitan Railroad Co. chartered as second street railway in city . . . Known as the H st. line because of route.

1870—Columbia Railway Co., incorporated to operate in northeast section . . . Developed by Henry Willard of hotel fame.

1871—Big impetus to street railways when Pennsylvania ave. was paved . . . Horses could get along better.

1875—Capitol, North O Street & South Washington Railway Co. incorporated . . . Name changed to Belt Railway Co. in 1893 because its lines circled city.

1877—Fifteen luxurious horse-drawn chariots introduced.

Advent of the Bus

1879—Herdic Phaeton Co. developed large horse-drawn buses.

1888—Georgetown - Tennallytown Railway chartered to operate from Potomac River to District Line via High st. and Tennallytown rd.

1889—Horse car era draws to an end as cable cars are introduced . . . Steam engines moved cables through underground conduits at 9 miles an hour.

1889—Rock Creek Railway Co. organized . . . First to use electricity as motive power.

1889—Columbia Railway & Metropolitan Railroad Co. merged by syndicate headed by F. C. Stevens, president of old West End National Bank.

1895—Metropolitan Railroad announced intention of adopting Siemens & Halske electric trolley . . . Congress objected to overhead wires so they were put underground . . . In July, first trolley car ran over 9th st. line.

1895—Rock Creek Railway Co. absorbed the Washington & Georgetown Railway Co., forming the new Capital Traction Co.

1895—Several smaller lines united to form Capital Railway Co.

1897—Herdic Phaeton Co. went out of business and Metropolitan Coach Co. took over its buses.

1898—Capital Traction Co. completed electrification of entire system . . . Three smaller firms merged into City & Suburban Railway.

1899—Capital Railway Co. acquired by purchases and receiverships virtually all major railway systems here except Capital Traction Co. . . . Capital Railway now called Washington Railway & Electric Co. and controlled 12 railways and Potomac Electric Power Co.

1909—Metropolitan Coach Co. started experimenting with gasoline motor buses.

1913—All horse-drawn buses withdrawn in favor of gasoline motors.

Bus in Abeyance

1915—Metropolitan Coach Co. went bankrupt and buses disappeared until organization of Washington Rapid Transit Co. in 1921.

1922—Capital Traction and Washington Railway & Electric branched out into bus field.

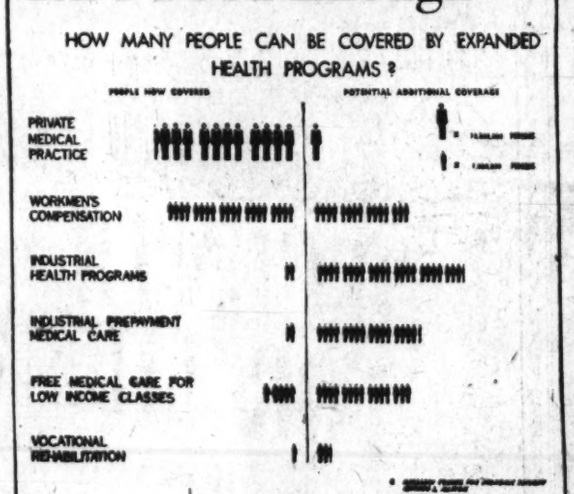
1925—Washington Rapid Transit Co. bought by North American Co.

1933—Capital Transit Co. born of merger of Washington Railway and Capital Traction.

1936—Washington Rapid Transit Co., sole remaining independent operator, sold to Capital Transit.

1947—Capital Transit routes cover 426 streetcar and bus miles . . . It has 1082 buses, the largest privately owned bus fleet in one city in the United States, and 824 streetcars—509 streamliners and 315 of conventional type.

'Best' Health Setup Isn't Good Enough



By William J. Conway

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (AP).—There are more people, organizations and facilities devoted to keeping citizens alive and well in the United States than in any other country—but there still is a lot of room for expansion.

So concludes the Research Council for Economic Security, a private, non-profit organization supported by business firms.

A survey of programs, personnel and equipment produces these estimates of what Americans have and what they could use:

We have 146,854 physicians, and need 60,000 more.

The number of dentists (some 70,000) and nurses of all types (317,800) 'should be more than doubled."

Beds now number 710,597 in general and most other kinds of hospitals, 674,930 in hospitals for mental and nervous patients, and 83,187 in tuberculosis hospitals. Additional beds required are calculated at 195,000 in the first category of hospitals, 191,000 in the second group, and 44,000 to 75,500 in the third.

A need for 2400 rural health centers is mentioned.

"Physicians are unevenly distributed throughout the Nation," the concil reports. "Some States have twice as many physicians, in relation to the population, as others."

The study also went into the question of "how many people can be covered by expanded health programs?" The entire population was not taken into the reckoning—rather, "how many additional people can be reached suitably and effectively by each of these forms of health protection."

It found that private medical practice now covers 115 million persons and has a potential additional coverage of 10 million. Workmen's compensation laws cover 20 million and could be extended to 15 million more.

Taft-Stassen Act Aimed at Dewey

He was reelected Governor in '42, but soon went into the Navy and eventually became flag secretary to Admiral William (Bull) Halsey in the Pacific.

In 1940, when he was 33, Stassen was the keynote orator at the Republic National Convention and, as floor manager for Willkie, did a superb job in helping the Hoosier to win the presidential nomination.

Comparison Is Odious

STASSEN'S political lieutenants, for a variety of reasons, don't care for talk which likens their hero to Willkie. It is a fact, though, that Stassen became the great hope of the GOP liberals following Willkie's death.

Lately, some liberals have been disturbed by the mutual admiration society that has been formed by Stassen and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

Tom Stokes, the columnist, asked Stassen a question about this at a press conference in the Statler last week. Stassen, after denying any deal with Taft, told the reporters:

"I am more on the liberal side on both domestic and foreign policy than Senator Taft, but I do have respect for his ability and his integrity and his sincerity. And I recognize that . . . in the two-party system there must be room for a quite wide divergence of views; that in fact the best progress in America has come from a blending together of a liberal attitude with a conservative position into a program of action on behalf of the people.

"That is the genius of free government. You battle out issues, the people reach decisions in conventions or primaries or in the final election, and then, on the basis of the results, you begin to fuse together into action."

Actually, Stassen and Taft are engaged in a "stop Dewey" movement. This doesn't mean that there is a formal alliance between them. It is simply a case of two men having common interests. They both realize that neither can get the nomination unless Dewey is stopped.

Two Achievements

THE chances are that Taft and Stassen, together with favorite-son candidates, will have it in their power to stop Dewey. At some stage in the proceedings, however, a lot of people at Philadelphia are going to ask themselves whether they really ought to exercise that power.

Stassen, looking back over the last ten months, feels that he has achieved two things: (1) By his early announcement, he has "accelerated" the GOP campaign, and (2) he has had a chance to talk to Republican leaders throughout the country, making up for his six years in the Navy.

The only "avowed candidate" likes people and he likes politics. He is enjoying himself as he flies back and forth north and south over the United States. The worst that can happen to him is to lose. Apparently, however, he doesn't worry much about defeat. He seems to be driven by a philosophy such as Emerson once voiced:

"They can conquer who believe they can."

'Jimmy's' Biggest Monument Is the Education of America

Kurile Islands, Byrnes suggested that American support for these Soviet territorial acquisitions would depend upon Soviet agreement to put the Japanese mandated islands under American trusteeship. Again the Russians agreed promptly. But the day may come when the United States may try to get the Kuriles put under precisely the same kind of Soviet trusteeship, and future American negotiators may find themselves hampered by the implicit commitment Byrnes made as a bargaining counter. The Russians can easily interpret his words as a promise of support for outright Soviet ownership rather than trusteeship.

European Blind Spot

THE GLARING failure, apparent in the pages of "Speaking Frankly," was that Byrnes did not seem to see the importance of European economic recovery to the process of peacemaking. He saw the economic aspects clearly enough in the cases of the former enemy states. He knew the importance of getting occupation armies removed, of giving the former enemy peoples a chance to stand on their own feet economically, or bringing their prisoners of war home to work in the factories or on the farms.

But there is only the faintest glimmering of awareness, in this record, of the economic paralysis then creeping over Western Europe, or of the need of a well-planned American program to revive the former allies as well as the former enemies. In discussing the Marshall Plan Byrnes sees it clearly enough, but he did not see it during his term in office.

He was primarily political in training and in his interests. It was left to his successor to see the problem clearly and to see it whole.

Of his positive contributions, at least two are outstanding in addition to the major policy decision of going ahead without Russia.

First, it can be said of Byrnes that bipartisanship in the negotiation and acceptance of foreign policy reached its zenith during his term. It was an accident that as a former Senator he was on close and cordial terms with Senators Connally and Vandenberg, but in many ways it was an accident that paid dividends. The cooperation between them was complete; at secret meetings of the Foreign Ministers, when each principal was limited to two advisers, Byrnes invariably brought Connally and Vandenberg with him. The first concrete result came when the Senate overwhelmingly ratified the Italian and satellite treaties. Even if bipartisanship is abandoned, the Byrnes record will stand to show how it worked, and how it strengthened the hand of the United States.

Finally—and this must be recognized as one of Byrnes' achievements—he took the American people into his confidence as few Secretaries of State have ever done. He devised, and insisted upon, the system of "briefing" newspaper correspondents after every regular meeting of the Foreign Ministers.

He not only saw that the press was informed but he reported by radio to the American public whenever he returned home from a conference abroad. If the American people today have a better knowledge of the problems they face, they can thank James F. Byrnes for speaking frankly.

them by depriving the prisoner of some specific process of law.

The Attorney General remarked of this the other day:

"And how are you supposed to prove in court just what any police officer has in his mind when he starts to beat up a prisoner?"

Slavery Defined

IN CASES where peonage or slavery is involved, the law is a little clearer. The Ingalls case in California, which the Justice Department won, was a recent one.

Clark has used every means both to prosecute civil rights violations and to stress the need for stronger legislation. His work has been widely recognized by minority groups. The Chicago Defender, a Negro newspaper in Chicago, awarded him a citation last January.

Mother Nature Has to Assist Rainmakers

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—You can't make it rain by picking out just any old cloud and salting its tail with dry ice.

If nature hasn't prepared the right conditions beforehand, you might as well leave your plane on the ground.

For one thing, the cloud has to be "supercooled"—a term taken, not from Hollywood, but from the meteorologist—and nature has to do that trick.

A "supercooled" cloud is one in which the moisture content is below freezing in temperature but still liquid. Some amateurs have seeded clouds whose moisture content was above freezing, and nothing happened. Others have succeeded in making rain, but none of it reached the earth because the atmosphere beneath the cloud was too dry and the precipitation evaporated.

Others have used too heavy dry ice pellets, which have fallen straight through the supercooled part of the cloud before setting up the processes of precipitation. Still others used too much dry ice—the most effective quantity is a gradual distribution of 1½ pounds per mile of cloud.

Foreign Experiments

VINCENT J. SCHAEFER, General Electric scientist who first produced snow artificially in November, 1946, says his techniques "will work anywhere, any time under the proper weather conditions." He has received information of rainmaking experiments in Chile, Mexico, South Africa, Australia and Hawaii, as well as in many States.

Some of the practical reasons motivating attempts to make it rain or snow include: relieving parched crops, combating forest fires, refilling irrigation reservoirs, covering ski-runs with snow, and blanketing tender crops with snow to protect against low temperatures.

Relieving a heat wave by producing rain is still too grandiose a conception. The small local rains produced by dry ice affect a limited area temporarily and have little effect on the large air masses that control general weather conditions.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

PSYCHIATRY is the subject of the hour. There has suddenly appeared a rash of articles on its various aspects. And if, as at least one author states, necessary action depends on an aroused public, then this simultaneous editorial outburst should bring results.

Look deals with the overcrowded mental hospitals in "Our Neglected Insane" by Dr. Charles S. Stevenson, medical director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. "The whole problem comes from the general ignorance on the entire significance of mental illness," says Dr. Stevenson. Best remedy for the situation, he thinks, is more public psychiatric service to detect and treat mild cases before they develop to the point where they must be confined.

Two Federal acts passed last year constitute major steps in improving the mental health of the Nation, but both depend on financial participation by the States.

So only those States in which the voters are aware of the urgency of the problem will reap the benefit of the measures. One is the Hospital Survey and Construction Act. The other, the National Mental Health Act, provides for research, grants in aid for training personnel and grants to the States for local improvements.

* * * *

AN ADDITIONAL answer to the problem is contained in Howard Whitman's "New Horizons for Your Pastor" in the Woman's Home Companion. A nucleus of 1100 pastors, mostly Protestant ministers, have made an intensive study of psychiatry under the Council for Clinical Training headquartered at New York's Academy of Medicine, Whitman reports. "So promising have been the results of this wedding of psychiatry and religion that many doctors, sociologists and churchmen are urging that all pastors be clinically as well as theologically trained," he found.

The clinically trained pastor doesn't attempt to be a psychiatrist, Whiteman says. But his training gives him a wiser approach to such complicated human failings as adultery and alcoholism that will inevitably confront him. At the same time he has acquired the skill to recognize mental illness so that he can refer these cases to a psychiatrist.

"Too many of our pastors know all about religion but fail to know man," Whitman was told by the Rev. Maurice A. Riseling, chaplain and supervisor of clinical training at the Norristown State Hospital. "It is a basic tenet of Christianity that human beings must be understood, not condemned. It was Jesus who was called the 'friend of sinners.'"

EMOTIONAL needs of children are dealt with by Eleanor Hard Lake in The Woman. Our immediate job "is to promote more and better mental hygiene work in our public schools according to Mrs. Lake in "To Hear Our Children Weeping" condensed from the Junior League Magazine.

"Only our schools see the average child completely and with detachment," she points out. Only they can give children with incipient difficulties the "steady day-in and day-out guidance they need." And only the schools can give the more mature child an understanding of human relations and emotions that might save him much fear and worry.

Yet few schools are equipped to do any of this, she shows, because we refuse to demand highly skilled teachers and pay them well. On the contrary, she adds, too many teachers are themselves maladjusted. "In some degree," she concludes, "we can buy our children's happiness today. Tomorrow it will be too late."

The Saturday Evening Post contributes its bit with a profile of Dr. Edward A. Strecker, one of the Nation's leading psychiatrists, whom Greer Williams thinks is the man who "Made Psychiatry Respectable." Strecker was in the news most recently when he answered the much publicized sermon of Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen on psychiatry and religion. Strecker, a member of the Catholic Church, said he found no conflict between religion and psychiatry.

His activities have been remarkably diffuse. "A recent count showed him to be consultant, committee chairman or mental factotum for 17 public agencies or organizations," says Williams. This on top of a heavy teaching schedule and a practice. He accomplished such delicate wartime missions as settling a jurisdictional dispute between the surgeon general and the air surgeon over the control of hospital care for airmen.

Strecker doubts that there will ever be enough psychiatrists for everybody who could use one, according to Williams. "The goal," he says, "must be to leaven the loaf of medicine and surgery so that all doctors will understand functional complaints resulting from emotional conflict and tension, and know how to treat them."

Freedom in Jeopardy

Top Job Turned Out On Functions of Press

By J. R. Wiggins

GOVERNMENT AND MASS COMMUNICATION. By Zechariah Chafee, Jr. 2 vols. $7.50.

THIS AMBITIOUS work is clearly the best thing that has come out of the Commission on Freedom of the Press.

"Free Speech in the United States," Chafee's earlier work in this field, is marked by more solid scholarship and substantial reference value, but his new contribution will be equally indispensable to those who choose to inquire into how our newspapers (and other media) are functioning.

On the whole, Chafee submits questions more frequently than he supplies answers. His misgivings about some popular solutions for alleged inadequacy of the press are those of a man thoroughly familiar with the dangers of cures worse than the disease. His approach to some of the most touted nostrums for improving communications media is marked by a sound and healthy skepticism.

Government's relationship to mass media is seen as threefold. It may suppress and limit and restrain. It may encourage. It may participate in receiving and distributing information itself.

'Grave Anxieties'

HE HAS some "grave anxieties" about the future of press freedom. He feels it is threatened by the general growth in governmental function and power; by the centralization of economic power and by the socially divisive forces in our increasingly complex society.

He finds especially significant "the enormous recent expansion of the subjects which officials are seeking to hide from publication until they give the signal."

The dangers of leaving in official hands discretion for such secrecy he strongly emphasizes:

"No doubt there are many matters which ought not to be disclosed for a time, but officials should not have a free hand to determine what those matters are or to lock them up forever. It may be human nature for them to want their mere say-so to be decisive on the need for secrecy, but the possession of such a power would allow them to hoist public safety as an umbrella to cover their own mistakes."

The effect of a large scale communication on quality worries Chafee. He properly warns that "when people have come to regard a publication as trash they do not care much if it is kept from them." He feels that "one reason (that citizens do not place much value on free speech) may be that they do not place much value on what would be suppressed."

Even Some Lying

SPEAKING for the whole commission, on which he served as a member, Chafee asserts that it was unquestionably demonstrated to the members that "the output of the press includes an appallingly large quantity of irresponsible utterances and even deliberate lying." He finds this disclosure responsible for new doubts about the certainty of truth's triumph in a fair field; but, on his own part, is "far from ready to abandon the base against abridging the freedom of speech and of the press."

Voicing some doubt about the continuing efficacy of the "self-righting" process in our modern society, he is still optimistic enough to be able to ask: "How self-righting was England when Milton wrote the Areopagitica in 1644?"

To those who have lost faith in the outcome of a free contest between truth and falsehood, and who wish to call in the Government, Mr. Chafee sounds a warning. He reminds them that "there is no perfect government which can step in to regulate an imperfect press. The Federal Government is actually an assemblage of Congressmen and Washington officials, who have as many human failings as newspaper editors and owners."

Timid About Race

IF CHAFEE would avoid Government control of the press, however, it is not because he thinks the press is perfect. He finds a great many things wrong with it, but prefers to leave those wrongs largely to forces inside the press and to public pressures.

Among newspaper practices of which he voices dislike is the tendency to deal timidly with important issues. He thinks there has been "too much hush hush" about race and group antagonisms in the press of large circulation: "They are so anxious not to offend any group that they behave as though antagonisms did not exist. Such timid silence is one of the causes of the villification in the subsidiary press. When wise men refuse to mention disagreeable facts, foolish and stupid men will have their say more than ever."

Taking note of the invasion of privacy by the press, Chafee concludes that here, too, the matter is best left untouched by law to be dealt with by "public opinion" and "the conscience of owners and editors."

While he denounces lying in the press and admits it happens, he would be afraid of legal penalties against it because "the existence of a penalty against lying would add to the dangers of telling unwelcome truths and thus impair the courage of disclosure, which is one of the great values of freedom."

Some interesting methods of dealing with falsehood and libel are canvassed. Consideration is given to French and German statutes under which wronged persons have the right of reply. It is proposed that this might be coupled with a law giving the newspaper the option of retraction, in case of error. It is pointed out that such methods have some advantage over conventional libel statutes of the United States. Faith in legal remedies, even here, does not seem to be strong in Mr. Chafee. He prefers remedies outside the law: the force of community opinion, the "strengthening by all possible means of the professional obligation to tell the truth."

Postal Omniscience

THE knotty problem of obscenity is handled with great skill. Insofar as local control goes, Chafee is for jury trial of obscenity cases. Generous praise is given Huntington Cairns, special legal adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, for his handling of imported books, films and pictures coming under statutes controlling admission of obscene matter.

The Postoffice Department does not get off as easily. There is some severe criticism of the handling of cases involving exclusion from the mails:

"If the postoffice continues to decide exclusion as it does now, then judicial review (of the decisions of the department) is indispensable. The country cannot afford to go on leaving freedom of the press in the uncontrolled hands of officials who disregard elementary requisites of fairness, combined prosecution with judging, lack any specific training or qualifications for passing on art or literature and yet reject the possibility of help from outside experts."

Of sedition laws in peacetime, Chafee is profoundly skeptical. He finds that "our best protection against internal enemies of freedom lies in the free flow of discussion, in the absence of spies and eavesdroppers on conversations and seizers of private correspondence." To those who would withhold free speech from people who seek to destroy democratic institutions, he offers an answer. He cites their argument that "a person who does not want a free society cannot claim the benefit of a free society." He points out that the trouble with this is that "you cannot frame any law which would pick out such a man for punishment without at the same time hitting many others."

Mr. Chafee is quite critical of press coverage of the courts. He fears that the press and the courts do not understand each other. To this he attributes many "harms" such as "sensational reports of criminal trials and inadequate accounts of important unspectacular litigation." Generally he is sympathetic with the current liberality of the courts in dealing with contempt. He would allow the press full comment on proceedings in the courts and would have judges educated to expect newspaper controversy to develop over their opinion.

He compares English and American court reporting to the disadvantage of the American press. He urges newspapers to have trained reporters in this field. In general, there is no doubt much substance in this criticism, although newspapers have better-trained men than this general criticism would indicate. (The Washington Post has two law graduates covering the courts, two staff members admitted to the bar and three now going to law school.)

Government Scriveners

A QUESTION of particular pertinence in Washington is raised in Chafee's discussion of the control of information by government. "How far," he asks, "should government employes, while in office, be allowed to publish criticism of the conduct and the policies of their superiors"? He does not have a ready answer.

He warns that "the result of an enforced silence within the service may, by that inefficiency or corruption on the part of men higher up, will continue because honest persons who know the facts do not dare tell them to the public." But he admits that complete freedom of subordinates would "open the door wide for cranks and greatly hamper any administration."

The interposition of press relations officers between the reporter and the official also is discussed. The conclusion on this subject is that: "Although such a screener may prevent some misstatements by ill-informed newspapermen, it is much better to have the sifting of truth from falsehood done by the newspaper which serves the public than by the very agency which may deserve condemnation."

Familiar newspaper pleas for the sanctity of a reporter's sources are not seriously regarded by Chafee. He thinks judges should retain their present power to order a reporter to testify or else go to jail for contempt. But he admits that the power to make them testify should be exercised with great caution.

Chafee deals the most roughly with newspaper ownership in his handling of the guild and his remarks on the Associated Press case. He concludes that initial fears of biased news handling resulting from union membership have been groundless. He regards the Associated Press opinion compelling the abandonment of the exclusive contract as a good thing. "It seems clear," he states, "that this decision has had the desirable result of opening new channels through which news and ideas may reach American citizens."

Defense of Profit

THE CONCENTRATION of control in American journalism is deplored by Chafee, but he puts no faith in antitrust actions to stop the trend. He is aware that bigness is a characteristic of American organization and acknowledges that a "little" press in a country of big industry might have faults.

The profit motive is not the villain in the press picture, by Crafee's lights. He thinks the problem is "how to give more power to people who are professionally motivated and less to the people who are economically or profit motivated." But he is not altogether critical of profits in the newspaper business. He takes a crack at those who say that publishers are "just out to sell papers." "If wanting to sell papers is wrong, I wish that these writers would explain why it is right for them to want to sell their books," he tartly observes.

Nor is he sure that sensationalism is the result of the pursuit of profit. He discovers in the government-controlled press of other countries "the same tendency to reach the least common denominator of the population." It is Chafee's conclusion that the profit motive alone is not enough, but "unless that underpinning of profit is there, there can be no freedom of the press."

Chafee is no more a longer after "the good old days" of journalism than he is a pursuer of "heaven-before-breakfast" reforms. He states it as "his belief" that "really good jobs among newspapers are commoner now than 50 years ago, when there were many more newspapers."

In proposals of Government subsidies of one sort or another for small newspapers, such as urged by Morris Ernst, Chafee sees "terrifying possibilities" of lobbying and manipulation of opinion.

This book delivers a reproach to those who fear and those who are for a government-owned press like Pravda or the BBC. The government press will have the same evils of bigness or be so unenterprising and dull as to go unread. The newspapers who fear such publications, on the other hand, are seen as insincere or "fraidy cats."

Relegate the Ads

IN HIS conclusion, Mr. Chafee stresses a point that he says is often forgotten:

". . . the first amendment was not adopted to protect vehicles of advertising and entertainment. They are legitimate and beneficial activities, but so are stockbroking and circuses, which receive no constitutional immunity. The more newspapers and radio allow advertising and miscellany to swamp news and ideas, the greater the risk of losing some of their privileged position. Freedom of the press exists to enable the press to perform its essential task of dispensing news and ideas."

He sounds a warning that "institutions become vulnerable when they cease to do their main jobs well. Sooner or later the public welcomes somebody else who will furnish what it lacks . . . frequently the state."

There is plenty of criticism of the press in these two formidable volumes. Newspapermen will not admit that all of it is warranted. They will have to acknowledge, however, that Zechariah Chafee has brought to his task a magnificent background in the legal rights of the press, a healthy skepticism about legal remedies for the shortcomings of the press and some constructive suggestions for raising the standards of the newspaper profession. The book commends itself to everyone who is in the business of making newspapers and everyone who reads them. If it reaches all of them, the country will have better newspapers that will be better read.

Author's Best Distance Is a Shorter Novel

Hilton's Latest Concerns an Atomic Scientist

By Sterling North

NOTHING SO STRANGE. By James Hilton. Little Brown. 308 pp. $2.75.

I WISH I might report that Mr. Hilton had once more transported his readers to Shangri-La, or at least had captured their sympathy and imagination with a character as satisfying as Mr. Chips. But I fear this time he missed the bus.

His forte is quiet fantasy; his distance the short novel. But when he attempts solid story-telling on a semirealistic plane and seeks to come to grips with problems of international importance his slender talent has difficulty coping with the assignment.

"Nothing So Strange" is not a bad novel. Hilton is probably incapable of writing a really second-rate book. But the slender thread of plot is pulled out gossamer thin. As he proves in his final chapter, where he recapitulates, 100 pages would have sufficed.

Not to keep you in frustrated suspense as long as Hilton does, "Nothing So Strange" is the chronicle of an atomic scientist whose brilliant research very nearly gave Germany the atom bomb before we acquired it.

You won't discover this simple fact for hundreds of pages, for Dr. Mark Bradley is given a buildup worthy of some interplanetary visitor before his actual activity is revealed.

Bluntly and briefly, Brad, as the novel opens, is interested solely in pure science. Through the Anglo-American girl, Jane (who tells this story in the first person), he meets Jane's reactionary father, who helps him to get a job with the fabulous Dr. Framm of Vienna, a scientist who is working on the secrets of heavy water and nuclear fission. Framm steals Brad's discoveries just before the Nazis march into Vienna, and Brad's newly acquired Viennese wife tries to kill Framm.

What happens thereafter seems to me rather unbelievable. Unless Mark Bradley's character was much weaker than we are led to believe, he would never have gone on helping the Nazis, although he might have given Hitler the double-cross, as he did shortly before Pearl Harbor.

HILTON

The following chapters in America are not very convincingly American, despite Hilton's long sojourn in this country. As a minor example, Brad, now on a little farm in North Dakota, would scarcely be commuting to Chicago on farm business. Mr. Hilton moves with much greater assurance in London or Vienna or Paris than he does in Hollywood, New York or Oak Ridge.

But the one utterly believable thing about this book, and the one which lifts it above the ordinary, is the implied collision between patriotism and pure science which drives Brad to near insanity. It is a situation of which we will hear more as our great scientists begin to realize the terrifying results of their highminded devotion to "pure" science.

SHADOW OF HEAVEN. By Alfred Hayes. Howell, Soskin. 278 pp. $2.75.

TO LIFT an applicable line from a poem by Carl Sandburg, "The strong men keep coming on."

Jacket design for "Whistle Daughter Whistle," by Herbert Best, due from Macmillan Tuesday

One of the most vital of the postwar newcomers is Alfred Hayes, whose first book, "All Thy Conquests," was probably the best war novel published last year.

Both Hemingway and John Hersey place Hayes among the most talented of the new writers. His prose has fluid grace and a masculine punch. He achieves a sense of actuality without descending to photographic realism. His characters come alive in a sentence and stay alive to the last page. They do not seem to be manipulated to satisfy the exigencies of the plot.

But Alfred Hayes, like even the best of his confreres, is unable to remove the major road block in contemporary fiction. It is almost impossible to write great novels about such a patternless society as the one in which we live. It is exceedingly difficult to maintain a point of view in swirling chaos; to achieve a critique of manners and morals when society has neither.

In other words, unlike the great novelists of last century, the contemporary writer must first create a pattern, then criticize it. In this difficult dual role he has little help from moiling, confused, frightened, rootless modern man.

Subconsciously realizing the basis of this confusion, Mr. Hayes makes it his central theme in his new novel. His chief protagonist, Harry Oberon, is the true tragic hero of our era, the idealist who has at last become dismayingly aware of the petty and vicious nature of most of his fellow men.

Oberon, like his author, is no cheap cynic. At 40 he has put more than two decades of ill-paid, man-killing effort into helping make this world a more livable one. As a small-time labor leader in the garment industry, he has worked 18 hours a day in his attempt to achieve better wages and working conditions for the girls at the sewing machine. He has fought bribery from employers, petty jealousies within the movement, oblique attacks upon his integrity. He has not allowed himself to acquire the attributes of tyranny so frequently discovered among the top eschelons of labor. He has remained human and humble and dedicated.

But when a clever politician offers him $12,000 a year, instead of the $3100 he is making, he is torn with inner struggle. He reexamines what was once his great faith in the virtue of the poor. He is suddenly tired to death of the pettiness of both the employed and the employers. He all but loses faith as he faces the fact that he is no longer young and that his hope of personal happiness is rapidly fading.

This is not a great novel. At times it is as confused as the heart of his major character. But it is probably the best novel that could have been written out of the material available. And within the limited scope of the assignment it has succeeded. All that Hayes needs to be a top-flight novelist is a world that makes some sort of sense.

LITTLE WORLD, HELLO! By Jimmy Savo. Simon & Schuster. 181 pp. $2.75.

JIMMY SAVO, the St. Francis of the Amusement industry, and probably the most beloved comedian, dancer, juggler and mime who ever held a drunken night-club audience through sheer sweetness and charm, has written a book which is as unusual as his act.

It is no exaggeration to say that this little classic leaves the reader with the feeling that Pan is still playing his pipes if we only knew where to look for him; that the fairy-tale castles of our youth still exist in Italy; and finally that all the world needs to achieve the millennium is a beneficent ruler like Lord Jimmy of La Rocca di Poggio.

Jimmy's wife Nina acquired the thirteenth century castle high in the Umbrian Hills where the native New Yorker rules between theatrical engagements. He arrived on a donkey, and after his sojourn left on a donkey. In between he helped to change for the better the lives of his 19 eccentric and charming villagers.

Greeted by a delegation of small, bare-footed children bringing flowers and by a bad small boy who hung onto the donkey's tail, Jimmy and his wife were soon ensconced in the impressive but dilapidated castle with its courtyards and magic well (in which one could see the face of a beautiful woman), its aura of romance and hidden treasure, its tradition of good and bad rulers reaching back 700 years.

St. Francis himself had lived at the foot of the hill; the Pope had once owned the castle, and the hall of 100 horsemen still echoed faintly with the boasts and toasts of mounted men who had conducted private wars in the name of previous owners.

SAVO

It was immediately evident that Lord "Cheemy" had taken on a major problem as the new ruler. There were roofs to be mended. There was a naughty and beautiful girl who must be married off as quickly as possible (after sleepless nights of serenading). It was equally obvious that a pretty little thief and the incorrigible small boy mentioned in the opening pages were in need of love and tolerance and what might be called "progressive" education.

How Jimmy's best laid plans oft went awry. How he didn't find the treasure and at last had to let the lovely and naughty young miss choose her own pagan husband. How the mystery of the face in the well was at last cleared up. This and much more is the fantastic truth of "Little World, Hello!"

DECENTRALIZE FOR LIBERTY
by THOMAS HEWES

Seldom has a book won such excited acclaim before publication!

JAMES TRUSLOW ADAMS: "Mr. Hewes has struck straight at the heart of the problem which confronts us Americans . . . I hope that as many Americans as possible will read and ponder it. For all who like myself have lived and preached 'the American Way' it is a fire-bell in the night! Do not miss it."

LOUIS BROMFIELD: "This is one of the important books of the generation. It is especially important to every American who wants to preserve freedom of will and action and the form of government which has made the American people the freest, the happiest and the most fortunate on earth. Every intelligent citizen should read it."

PROFESSOR LEO WOLMAN, Columbia University: "Workingmen, above all, stand to gain from the adoption of the principles defined and argued by Mr. Hewes. The opportunities and security, for which so many people are today planning, will be most effectively furthered by decentralization . . ."

*P. LECOMTE DU NOUY: "Everyone who is interested, not only in the future of this country but also in that of our western civilization, should read and ponder this book so as to be prepared to act intelligently and promptly . . . a work of the utmost importance."

At a time when most Americans are deeply concerned about the future, Mr. Hewes comes forward with a bold and vigorous program. Its aim: the true fulfillment of the American way of life — security and prosperity without the sacrifice of personal liberty. The distinguished men quoted above are only a few of the many in all walks of life who have endorsed Mr. Hewes' program. This is a book for a critical hour. Read it now!

The Headmaster Abroad

German Students Already Glossing Over the Defeat

By Fred M. Hechinger

FRANKFURT, Oct. 18.—"It would not be wise to make any of the drastic changes which some Americans demand," said a German university professor. "Our colleges have a long tradition. We must not desert it for uncertain experiments."

In Germany, tradition has become the standard excuse for a return to reaction, nationalism and militarism.

I began to understand the real meaning of tradition when I attended random lectures at the University of Frankfurt. Their content and presentation seemed as far removed from the needs of contemporary civilization as they were void of any trend toward liberal education.

Professors read prepared essays. There was not the slightest trace of intellectual sparkle. As the teacher plodded through his text, students feverishly scribbled notes. Their faces registered neither approval nor criticism.

In a course on the German folk song, the lecturer read a dry brief which might have been found in any anthology. She voiced no opinions other than those of the conventional experts.

The catalogue listed a course on the novels of Thomas Mann. When I inquired, nobody knew about it.

Also listed in the schedule was a free political discussion. When I looked for the lecture hall I was informed that no professor had been appointed to lead the discussion.

Elementary Sociology

THE German university remains what it has been for so long: an efficient training ground for narrowly professional experts. There is no indication of any attempt to teach that understanding of our civilization which alone can create citizens of the world.

No provision has been made for the scientific teaching of sociology. At most, there is a brief introductory course. Comparative literature is still almost unknown. The curriculum is satisfied with a sprinkling of Dante, Moliere and Shakespeare.

Perhaps the most drastic omission is the complete absence of political philosophy. "Politics don't belong in the school," I was told again and again. "Besides, our students have had their share of politics; they don't want any more."

That is perhaps the greatest error of the reeducation program. For while the curriculum carefully shuns the "controversy" of political thought, German students perpetuate the most fantastic political myths. Even though they may never have been active Nazis, their minds are contaminated by false and dangerous ideas of power politics and German supremacy.

'Romantic' Revival

TWO factors are at work to exploit this combination of political apathy and "nonpolitical" chauvinism; nationalistic, though non-Nazi, professors, and a small but vocal clique of former officers among the student body. "Unless the inert mass can be taught real political consciousness and independent thinking, the nationalistic group will inevitably assume effective leadership once more," Professor Hans Rheinfelder of Munich University warned.

To this prominent opponent of fascism, the pattern is as simple as great tragedy. "In less than three years from now," he predicts, "the horrible experience of the war will fade and give way to sentimental memories and the deceptive romance of martial glory."

Everywhere in the American zone the democratic elements are beginning to fear reprisals as soon as the occupation troops are withdrawn. Even now they are socially ostracized. In Marburg, for instance, Professor Ebbinghaus knows that his colleagues talk of him as a "collaborator." His desperate attempt to sweep the Nazis and nationalists out of the staff rooms has put him on the blacklist of every reactionary.

Another German educator spoke to me in terms of unmitigated despair: "The trouble with you Americans is that you accept the help of those who come with broad smiles and jovial backslaps. You forget that those who crowd around your desks, fawning for favors, are old hands at bootlicking. The anti-Nazis will come only when you call on them—and promise them backing and protection."

The Outer Dark

THE failure of the German university to become an instrument of reeducation is heartrending. In its lecture halls are the young people who will soon assume the responsibility for German political life. In overcrowded rooms are solemn men and women who have believed in a criminal illusion and have lost the last vestige of faith.

Most of these have now been cleared by amnesty. But as they feverishly try to absorb all the technical and professional knowledge which the universities offer them, it seems as though the prison gates have merely been opened on another abyss. There is no new light to guide them.

"While the universities everywhere else have been strongholds of liberalism and progress," a leading German anti-Nazi pointed out, "our colleges have failed in their objective. It is sheer madness to believe that we only need to return to Weimar days. There is no logic in a return to a system of failure. You Americans should have encouraged an educational revolution instead of preventing it."

A few days at the University of Frankfurt confirmed the accusation that we have permitted a "return to a system of failure." I cannot ascribe my gloom to the dreariness and whirling bomb dust of these tomb-like buildings: in Britain and other war-torn countries similar conditions have not blacked out the road to new values.

But on the grandstand of the German universities one shudders at the sight of history beginning to repeat itself.

Who Goes to Night School?

The Curious and Lonely Attend

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

LAST year 15,646 persons attended District public night schools.

Who were they?

Richard K. Brown, acting principal of the Central High School, largest in the city, describes them as the ambitious, the curious, the failures and the lonely.

In that cross section there were persons whose ages ranged from the teens to the sixties.

Why were they going to school?

To improve their skills to qualify for better jobs, to satisfy a hunger for learning, to make up scholastic deficiencies, or to spend an evening in congenial surroundings, Brown said.

Charles C. Knight, acting director of the night school program for white schools, estimates that no more than 1500 of the 9790 white students who attended last year were working for high school diplomas. Only 170 were graduated.

These students are the men and women who left school to take jobs and now find that without a diploma they have little future, Knight said.

A good many are young folk who dropped out of school during the war when jobs were plentiful and well paying. Some are veterans finishing out their schooling before going to college.

8000 at a Time

THE great bulk of students, though, are either Government workers, primarily women, improving their skills to pass tests for permanent jobs, or workers in trades filling out apprenticeship training.

It is these students who, dropping in and out of classes, boost the enrollment. While more than 15,000 persons were enrolled in the night school program during the entire year no more than 8000 ever were in attendance at one time.

The perennial students—those who go to school just for the sake of learning—number about 500, Knight believes.

It is their faces that show up year after year in language courses, in history and civics and in the sciences.

Mrs. L. Marshall, student of beginning French at Central has been going to school most of her life. A former school teacher, she has found "the greatest pleasure is the pleasure of the intellect, even if we have a tiny one."

"I spend all the time I can learning," she said.

In fact, she is so enthusiastic about learning that she recruits students. Last week she brought along to class a woman she met in a book store. They struck up a conversation on Galsworthy. It turned to French and now Central has another student.

Six Over Sixty

CLASSES in mathematics and the sciences attract college students who are falling behind in their subjects or high school graduates whose grades weren't good enough to get them in college.

More than one half of the nearly 1000 students who attended Central last year were high school graduates. Two hundred were college graduates and 250 more had some college training.

Half of Central's students were clerks and half of them fell in the 20 to 30 age bracket. One hundred and twenty-nine were in their teens and 168 in their 30s. Six were over 60.

Currently studying with the apprentices at Bell is Guy W. Gienger, associate professor of agricultural engineering at Maryland University. Skills he acquires in acetylene welding will be passed on to students.

Night school courses are offered on all levels from elementary through high school. They include English, English grammer and business English, spelling, composition and speech; history, world problems, sociology, geography; mathematics from algebra through solid geometry; French, Russian and Spanish, and in the sciences, biology, chemistry, physics and psychology.

In business subjects there are classes in typing, shorthand, business law and business arithmetic, bookkeeping, office machines and office practices.

In the trades classes are offered in auto mechanics, barbering, blue print reading, cable splicing, electricity, diesel shop, plumbing, printing, refrigeration, sheet metal, woodwork and welding.

Safety on Road Should Start In Classroom

By William J. Conway

CHIAGO, Oct. 18 (AP).—Organizations striving to halt the Nation's growing traffic death toll are putting increasing emphasis on the importance of attacking the problem right at the roots.

The idea is to teach safe driving to teen agers in high schools across the country.

The reasoning behind the campaign is this:

Most accidents are caused by drivers' errors. The way to eliminate these faults would be to retrain motorists. But this would be a tremendous, and probably impractical, task. The next best thing is to give thorough instruction to the new generation of drivers—youngsters ready to get behind the steering wheels.

The program is being pressed as a long-range answer to the question of how to cut motor vehicle casualties. But it could have more immediate benefits for the young people themselves.

33 Per 100,000

National Safety Council statistics show that in 1946 the death rate in the 15-24 age group was 33.8 per 100,000 population. It was exceeded only by the rate among persons 65 or older—and a considerable number of the elderly victims were pedestrians.

Youthful drivers have a sorry record, researchers say, because they have a tendency to speed, to show off and to overload cars. They lack the experience, knowledge and "intelligent fear" of their elders.

The plan to conduct classes to prepare them to take a safe place in a motorized society began to take shape in the middle 30's.

There still is much ground to cover. At the latest count, 5521 of the 25,300 high schools offered classroom driver education, and 545 also provided actual behind-the-wheel instruction.

The courses usually are given to students approaching the legal driving age—16 in most States. They include the mechanics of an automobile, fundamentals and responsibilities of driving, traffic rules and the costs of accidents.

Mass Follow-up

Researcher's Dream Come True at VA

By Rowland Evans, Jr.

A DOCTOR'S dream is coming true at the Veterans' Administration.

Where medical researchers have only dreamed of having as many as 100 cases of a given disease to investigate, and follow through in a search for the most effective treatment, VA has thousands.

In charge of the $2,500,000 program are Drs. E. H. Cushing and Dr. L. G. Welt. Cushing is a nephew of the late Dr. Harvey Cushing, noted brain surgeon.

"Follow-up studies are vital in medicine if we are to evaluate different types of cure for the same disease," Dr. Cusing says.

VA doctors have a peculiar opportunity for follow-ups because most of their patients have service-connected disabilities and must report for periodic examinations for compensation purposes.

Mass Jaundice

"NOT only that," Dr. Cushing explained, "but we are dealing on a mass scale with diseases which before have appeared only sporadically, in widely separated parts of the country.

"For example, we have a pool of 60,000 veterans who picked up jaundice in the service. We can follow samples of these veterans from time to time which will enable us to understand the natural history of the disease and evaluate the various modes of treatment these patients have received."

Within the past five years a new operation has been employed on peptic ulcer patients who do not respond to other types of treatment. VA doctors have been using this operation—called vagotomy—and will be in a good position to determine its possibilities—and limitations by pooling their results.

All 62 VA hospitals affiliated with universities will be equipped with research laboratories for clinical investigations, and there will be nonlaboratory investigations of neuro-psychiatric diseases.

"As everybody knows," Dr. Cushing says, "there just aren't enough psychiatrists to go around. So we're trying out a new thing called group psychotherapy.

"Instead of practicing on one patient at a time, we'll take five or six or even a dozen and handle them all at the same time. We've been trying this out, and it works. But we're just getting started in this kind of research."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

DURHAM, N. C., OCT. 18.—Officials of the New York Giants football team, when in Washington last week, hinted broadly that they expect to regain Frankie Filchock from the ranks of the ineligibles next year . . . Admitting that the Giants were floundering without Filchock, they said, "it will be different next season." It was a reminder that Filchock was not permanently banished by League Commissioner Bert Bell for failing to report a bribe offer—merely suspended indefinitely . . . The announcement of how the Brooklyn Dodgers split their World Series shares revealed that Leo Durocher was not cut in on the spoils, but it did not tell the whole story . . . Brooklyn players voted Durocher a full share, but Commissioner A. B. Chandler vetoed that idea and sent the listings back to the Brooklyn players for a revision that did not include Durocher's name . . . Frank Thomas, Alabama's former head coach, is in Durham taking the famed rice-diet cure for high blood pressure from the German refugee doctor, Walter Kempner, who last year had as his patient Dick Harlow, Harvard coach . . . No eggs, no meat, no milk, no water, no vegetables for a period of months—only rice, fruit and fruit juices.

POVICH

LOUIS GAMBINO, MARYLAND University's good back, apparently was a long time getting into college. Reportedly he is the same Lou Gambino who was playing for Baltimore Polytechnic High School in 1936, which is 11 years ago by expert reckoning . . . Army would have been playing Michigan this season, if the West Pointers hadn't ducked out of the game. They had a contract calling for a game but asked Michigan please to let 'em out of it . . . Don Whitmire, the Alabama tackle who made All-America at Navy a couple years back, wrote a nice thank you letter to the Congressman who appointed him to the Naval Academy . . . A colored Congressman from Illinois who had a spare appointment available . . . Between the halves of last week's G. W. U. Washington and Lee football game at Lexington, Va., the W. and L. cross-country runners loped into the stadium as winners of a match race, only 3500 were in the stands, a small crowd for football, but probably the biggest that ever saw a cross-country finish . . . The Redskins haven't had a sell-out since they enlarged the Griffith Stadium seating capacity by more than 3000 seats . . . Buck Newsom is wintering in Washington this year and summering in Yankee Stadium next season, he hopes.

AFTER BUYING OUT Larry MacPhail's share of the Yankees, Del Webb and Dan Topping called a meeting of the Yankees office staff and thanked them for sticking it out during the turbulent MacPhail regime, saying "there won't be any more front-office rumpuses" . . . Topping, who succeeded to the presidency of the Yankee empire, will resign as president of the Yankee football team . . . The Nats, counting heavily on Outfielder Gil Coan next season, won't take him to Florida for spring training but will let him condition himself in his native North Carolina. After two experiences with infected feet, Coan has learned his dogs are allergic to the Florida sands . . . Among the Redskins weekly expense are the 1400 feet of 16-millimeter color film used at a cost of $90 to record their games for the movies . . . Jonas Ingram, Commissioner of the All-America Conference, ruled wisely when he disallowed the Baltimore Colts protest, based on the games movies, of Buffalo victory of last Sunday. Any other decision by Ingram would have set a dangerous precedent, with the game officials always at the mercy of the camera which operates from an angle.

IT'S DOUBTFUL IF any team in the Eastern Division of the National Football League will beat any team in the Western Division this season, with the exception of Detroit . . . A couple of pretty fair outfielders had 50-yard line seats at today's Duke-Maryland game—Enos Slaughter and Terry Moore—Buddy Lewis, who is leading a barnstorming baseball tour of his native North Carolina, isn't getting rich at it. His club drew only $600 at the gate in a game staged here earlier in the week . . . North Carolina University has the most fearfully named tackle extant. He is 250-pound Earthquate Smith . . . Outfielder George Case has reconsidered his decision to retire and will report to the Nats' Orlando, Fla., training camp March 1. Johns Hopkins doctors advised against an operation and prescribed special shoes for Case to relieve pressure that was affecting the spinal nerves . . . N. C. State shapes up as the hottest thing in Southern basketball with eight of last year's lettermen on the squad . . . In his first year as assistant coach at Duke, Ace Parker, the alltime pro great, says "coaching is a harder job than playing" . . . Houston or Dallas will probably replace Brooklyn in the All-America Conference next season.

THE END OF AN END AROUND—Wake Forest's Halfback Bud Lail is pulled down by a George Washington University tackler, but only after a gain of 18 yards around right end in the first quarter of yesterday's one-sided contest at Griffith Stadium. The heavily favored Deacons from North Carolina trounced the Colonials, 39-7. David Howell (arrow), GWU guard, makes the tackle while his teammate, Carl Butkus (right) puts a restraining hand on Lail's helmet. At left, on ground, is Fullback Spangler of George Washington

Middies Win First Game in 11 Starts

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Navy's football team, a slumbering, lumbering Giant which hadn't tasted victory in it's last 11 games, came out of its long sleep with a crushing, overwhelming victory over Cornell here this muggy afternoon, 38-19.

The score the Middies ran up in no wise indicative of their superiority. Keyed up for this brush with the Big Red as they were for their great stand against Army last year, the Sailors attacked with such ferocity that the turnaway throng of 35,000 must have wondered why they had been so unsuccessful until today.

Striking by land and air, the Middies amassed 537 yards, 351 on the ground and 186 on the 13 passes they completed. So punishing was their offense, they had to punt only five times.

Standouts Stand Out

Coach Tom Hamilton's team introduced no new heroes. But three of its stalwarts—Fullback Bill Hawkins, Quarterback Reaves Baysinger, jr., and Tackle Dick Shimshak were brilliant in roles they were supposed to play—top-drawer football players.

And their Johnny-come-lately, placekicker, Jimmy Wills, the lad whose two conversions brought them a 14-14 tie with Duke last week, has got to be mentioned right up there with the other blue-ribbon winners. He kicked five extra points in as many efforts and also chipped in a 13-yard field goal.

But Hawkins, Baysinger and Shimshak were the trio who steered the Navy ship on its first victory course since the Villanova game of September a year ago.

Hawkins Unstoppable

Hawkins, running like a jet-propelled steam roller, busted over for two touchdowns. The 131 yards he gained rushing was almost seven times as much as Cornell was able to advance on the ground.

Baysinger, the boy from Syracuse who had been a great disappointment so far this year, snapped out of it with gusto. Tagged for the starting role after much deliberation by Hamilton between him and Bob Horne, Baysinger was the lad who directed the attack most of the way.

His passing was terrific, 10 out of 20 for 107 yards including a touchdown, and his punting wasn't of a mediocre nature, either. He booted four times, kicking out of bounds on the 9 twice and on the 2 on another try.

Maryland Drops From Undefeated Class; Folger Tosses 3 Touchdowns, Scores One

By Shirley Povich

Durham, N. C., Oct. 18.—Maryland University's football team was evicted from the ranks of the unbeaten today, bedeviled by its own fumbles and Fred Folger in a 19-7 victory for the Blue Devils of Duke.

Before a shirt-sleeved crowd of 20,000 Tailback Folger, a triple-threat all day, unveiled his running, passing and kicking talents to set up all three touchdowns, scoring one himself.

Folger spearheaded a 76-yard touchdown drive for Duke in the first quarter, and scored on a sweep from five yards out; he romped 65 yards with an intercepted pass to start a second touchdown march; he angled a punt outside on Maryland's three-yard line to precipitate Duke's third touchdown.

Well it was that Folger was in peak form, however, because the Terrapins were an explosive outfit themselves, and threatening to win the game as late as the fourth quarter.

Quarterback Vic Muryn took Maryland 76 yards downfield, capping that drive with a touchdown pass to George Simler that cut the Duke lead to 13-7.

Terps Fumbles Costly

Maryland had Duke and its supporters in an apprehensive state almost from the opening kickoff with its spectacular charges through the Duke line, Turyn stepping 42 yards on a quarterback sneak on the first play from scrimmage.

Lu Gambino was held scoreless today by Duke but he tore off gallops of 60 yards, 25 yards and 21 yards through the Duke defenses.

Three times the Terapins were inside Duke's 25-yard line on first downs only to toss off scoring chances with fumbles on all three occasions.

Before Folger could swing into action, Maryland took the opening kickoff and in two thrill-plays the Terrapins raced from their own 19 to the Duke 24.

Hardison Recovers

Turyn on a quick-opening burst into the Duke secondary and skedaddled 42 yards to the Duke 39 where Folger brought him down. Bouncing back from a 15-yard penalty, Turyn lateraled to Gambino for 21 yards and a first down on the Duke 24.

But the Terrapins were halted by the first of their fumbles. The ball went free on a handoff from Turyn to Idzik and Hardison recovered for Duke on its 24.

From that point, Folger, operat-

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Manuel Bentin's swift boot of a blocked ball in extra-period play gave Navy a 2-to-1 soccer win over North Carolina today.

Irish Whip Nebraska, 31-0

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame rushed and passed their way to a 31 to 0 victory over Nebraska today, but they lost first-string back Johnny Panelli for an undetermined period with an elbow injury.

A packed house of 56,000 saw Coach Frank Leahy's three-deep squad win its third straight triumph and remain undefeated.

Notre Dame clicked the scoreboard marker in every period and poured it on for good measure with 12 points in the last heat.

The win was a costly one. Panelli, 190-pound fullback, was borne from the field on a stretcher in the third period.

Notre Dame scored in the first period on a sustained drive that went 76 yards with Panelli carrying the ball over.

In the second session, Jimmy Brennan whirled around right end for 32 yards to set up the second score and Mike Swistowicz, substitute halfback, took it over.

In the third, a pass from Lujack to Swistowicz set the stage for Coy McGee who pranced 14 to score. Fred Early, reserve halfback, dashed in to boot the extra point.

A running and passing attack early in the final period brought the ball to the Nebraska 20. The next score came on a pass from Tripucka to Doug Waybright in the end zone.

Wake Forest Bowls Over Colonials, 39-7

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Passing Tom Fetzer and his gold-clad Wake Forest cohorts lived up to advance notices as they romped over George Washington University's Colonials, 39-7, before 10,000 spectators yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

Fetzer pegged two long passes to his favorite target, John O'Quinn for the first pair of Demon Deacon touchdowns, then set up the next two with heaves to another brace of teammates.

In notching its fourth straight victory, Wake Forest was surprisingly hard pressed for two periods, leading by only 13-7 at half-time.

Al Dugoff, a former Roosevelt High star, put the Colonials back into contention shortly after Fetzer's first 35-yard payoff toss at 10:30 of the first quarter.

Taking Deacon Bill George's kickoff on his own 15, Dugoff threaded his way through a clump of tacklers on the 25, cut to his right and found daylight. He poured on the coal and moved 77 yards before being brought down from behind by Bud Lail on the Deacon 8.

After one play lost 7 yards, G. W. pulled a cute trick from its bag. End Dick Koester came into the backfield on what looked like an end around play. He stopped suddenly, then pitched a perfect toss to End Frank Close in the end zone. Frankie Cavallo added the point

Elmer Raba Passes for Both Scores; Hurricanes' 1st Home Loss Since 1944

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Tulsa, Oct. 17.—Georgetown's big, battering linemen took complete charge of the ball game today and carried the Hoyas to one of the season's intersectional upsets in a 12-0 victory over Tulsa University.

While the Hoyas' burly boys in blue manhandled their lighter Tulsa opponents, Georgetown packed two touchdowns into the second period and played conservatively thereafter.

Towering George Benigni caught a short end-zone pass from Elmer Raba for Georgetown's first score and it was Raba throwing again, this time to John Kivus for 29 yards, for the second touchdown.

Hoya Line Checks Tulsa 'T'

After that it was principally a question of whether Tulsa's tricky T-formaton could spring loose its fast backs but the Georgetown linemen rarely gave them a chance to get started. Only once during the long afternoon of a beautiful Indian summer day did the Tulsans act as if they might score for 9616 shirt-sleeved spectators. They reached Georgetown's 27 in the first period.

Right then and there, the Hoya linemen asserted themselves, throwing the Tulsans back to the 29. That apparently convinced the

Virginia Jolts W. & L., 32-7

By Charles Yarbrough
By a Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 18.—The fine passing arm of Washington and Lee's Dick Working kept the University of Virginia Cavaliers in a working frenzy here this afternoon.

But the Cavaliers came out of that rosy dream left by last week's truimph over Harvard and saved the day, 32 to 7.

Pennel Star

Pulled along by Halfback Billy Pennel, the Cavaliers flashed moments of the greatness which downed Harvard, but the great moments didn't begin to show until the final quarter.

A shirt-sleeved Commonwealth Day crowd of 12,000, including many State officials, saw the Cavaliers continue a long string of triumphs over the Generals. Washington and Lee hasn't scored more than seven points against Virginia since their 13 to 13 tie in 1929. It was Virginia's seventeenth victory in 19 games against W. and L.

Cavaliers Hard Pressed

Working, a 178-pound senior from Baltimore, Md., paved the way for the Generals' only marker with a short pass to Left Half Charley Harrington, who toted it 65 yards to score. Ciancutti's fine block which took out the Virginia safety man was one of the best assists of the afternoon.

Even Virginia's last quarter scoring spree wasn't a romp.

The Cavaliers tapped the scoreboard after the first nine minutes of play when Pennel went 26-yards through tackle.

The Generals struck back swiftly, rammed to Virginia's eight on Working's passes, but the drive folded there.

General's Offensive Dies

Pennel broke through the left side of the line again late in the second quarter and ran 42 yards to score. Grimes' kick was good.

Working flipped six consecutive

Bartos Paces Quantico In 57-0 Slaughter

Joe Bartos, former Naval Academy football star, paced the Quantico Marines to a 57-0 victory over Camp Lee yesterday at Quantico. Bartos scored three touchdowns and Tony Messina booted seven extra points as the Marines won their fourth straight game.

Michigan Wins 4th in Row; Drubs Northwestern, 49-21

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 18 (AP).—Michigan's proud and capable Wolverines, bidding for a Rose Bowl invitation, swept to their fourth consecutive lopsided victory today, burying Northwestern's injury-riddled eleven under, 49 to 21.

A capacity crowd of 48,000 watched the Wolverines score seven touchdowns and roll up a total of 500 yards gained by rushing and in the air to Northwestern's 317.

Most of Northwestern's yardage was picked up in the second half when Coach Fritz Crisler of the Wolverines, currently the Nation's No. 1 eleven, was shooting 39 reserves into the game.

In the first half with the Michigan regulars operating, Northwestern was held to a mere 82 yards, while Michigan was rolling up 238.

50-Point Average

The 49 points, added to the 69 Michigan scored over Pittsburgh a week ago, 55 in defeating Michigan State and 49 rolled up against Stanford, raised Michigan's total to 22 for four games against 34 for all opposition.

Northwestern, playing without the services of highly rated Center Alex Sarkisian, sidelined with a broken arm, and four other regulars, out because of injuries, made a praiseworthy showing, particularly 21-year-old Art Murakowski,

Tarheels Beat W. & M., 13-7; Justice Plays Erratic Game

By Frank L. Dennis
Post Reporter

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 18.—Charlie Justice almost gave William and Mary a tie with his North Carolina team this afternoon, then thought better of it and set up the situation that gave Carolina a 13 to 7 victory.

If Justice had not been found eligible earlier in the day to continue playing for Carolina, William and Mary might not have scored. Until the fourth quarter, the local boys had a good chance to continue unbeaten because of Justice's miscues, but he turned out to be an Indian giver.

Fans, Players Swelter

There were two things to marvel at in the sweltering tidewater weather: (1) How two big football teams crashing into each other off identical single wing attacks could survive it in 80 degree heat; and (2) how the score or so among 21,000 spectators who persisted in drinking straight whisky could keep from boiling over.

The football, by both teams, was very, very rugged. The drinkers must have been.

Carolina led 7 to 0 at the half, after a scoreless first quarter in which the two big teams shoved each other around pretty vigorously.

The score in the second quarter came on a pass from Justice to Camp, a four-yard toss to the right flat in the end zone.

This came after the W. and M. Indians had made a magnificent stand on their one-foot line for two downs, to take possession and kick. The kick was to the W. and M. 40 from whence it was returned to the 32.

It was a pass from Walt Pupa, one of those Pennsylvania hominy fanciers so numerous on Dixie football teams, to Jim Powell, his

Longhorns Win Another

Texas Slowed Up by Rain But Bypasses Arkansas, 21-6

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 18 (AP).—The mighty Longhorns displayed a brutal ground attack today to smash the University of Arkansas 21 to 6, and mark their fifth successive victory of the season and their first in Southwest Conference play.

The great Bobby Layne's passing powers were laid aside as a drenching rain fell on a crowd of 28,080 in Crump Stadium which was "home" for the Razorbacks for this one day.

Texas smashed across three times, traveling 25, 56 and 72 yards after being jolted by the fancy footwork of Arkansas' Clyde Scott who sped 47 yards for a first period score.

Jones Scores Twice

Two of the Longhorn touchdowns were scored by Raymond Jones, hard running fullback from Houston, and one by Halfback Randall Clay—al from the one-yard line.

Texas presented a fast, hard-charging forward wall that completely dominated the conflict and enabled such ball carriers as James Canady, Byron Gillory and Billy Pyle to gain virtually at will.

Eighty-four times the Texans carried the ball compared to Arkansas' 34 and they racked up 18 first downs to the losers' three—those in the final minutes of play via desperation passes.

Scott's 47-yard touchdown jaunt was easily the most spectacular individual performance of the rainy afternoon. This former Navy star followed his blockers to the left, then cut to his right, shook off grasping hands of two foemen and outran the others, going across upright.

Longhorns Walk Through

The first Texas counter came shortly after the second period opened. Gillory returned a punt 30 yards to the Razorback 25. Clay smashed for eight and then dashed 14 to the three. He was across in two more plunges.

Minutes later a 13-yard punt return set the Texas offense in Jones picked up five, tackled on action again on the Longhorn 44. 13, and then three before H. J. Shands ambled through a hole large enough for a battleship and went to the 19, a 16-yard gain. Later Layne finally tossed a pass —the first, and End Max Bum-

Penn Batters Lions, 34-14; Harvard Beats Holy Cross

Toni Minisi Too Much for Columbia

Philadelphia, Oct. 18 (AP).—Pennsylvania's big and bruising Quakers manhandled the Columbia Lions, 34 to 14, in sweltering weather today.

Penn rolled up a 28-0 lead early in the second quarter and then held off a spirited second-half rally by the Light Blue before 70,000 at Franklin Field.

Though he scored only once, Tony Minisi was the big man on the field. His terrific running and his bullet southpaw passes wrecked Columbia's chances in the one-sided first quarter, and his kick-off returns put them in the hole time after time. In successive times the Quaker ace dashed kick-offs back to 39, 40 and 49 yards.

Penn Off to Quick Start

Penn struck quickly after Minisi drove the opening kickoff back 39 yards. Aided by a 22-yard aerial from Minisi to Art Littleton, the Red and Blue drove to the 8-yard line in six plays. Minisi then dropped back to pass again, but saw no receiver and circled his own left end for the score. Ed Lawless place-kicked the first of four straight extra points.

Three minutes later Charles Bednarik, big Penn center, intercepted a Rossides pass and hustled it back to Columbia's 14. Bob Deuber smashed out a first down on the 3, and Fullback Bill Luongo plunged over.

The next time they got the oval the Quakers went 43 yards in five plays. The scoring play was a 6-yard pass from Deuber to Bob Sponaugle.

93-Yard Drive to Score

Set back by a clipping penalty, Penn started on a 93-yard march to the fourth marker. When the second period began they had gone to their own 32. Al Sica shot a 20-yard pass to Littleton, and the Quaker end fought his way for another 38 yards to the Columbia 9. Two plays later Ray Dooney, substitute Penn fullback, dove across from the four.

Lou Kusserow gave the Lions their first score midway of the third period when he intercepted a pass by Bob Evans and got loose for 61 yards down the sideline without being touched. Columbia, thus encouraged, drove 53 yards for another score. A 12-yard throw from Gene Rossides to Bill Swiacki provided the tally.

Wolverines Top Wildcats

a rip-snorting ground gainer, who scored Northwestern's trio of touchdowns.

No individual star stood out in Michigan's smashing victory. Jack Weisenburger, the Wolverines' plunging fullback, accounted for two touchdowns and led his teammates in piling up yards, with a total net gain of 116. Chalmers Elliott and Bob Chappuis, ace fullback, rolled up 65 and 60, respectively.

Score Two in Six Minutes

The Wolverines piled up two touchodnws in the first six minutes of play. Derricotte ran Worthington's punt back 54 yards to Northwestern's 9. Elliott raced around right end for a touchdown on the first play. Brieske made the first of seven conversions.

Michigan started again from its own 41. Elliott went 34 yards on a fake pass and Fonde scored three plays later.

The Wildcats struck back savagely. Worthington ran a punt back 13 yards and Aschenbrenner, Tunnicliff and Murakowski reeled off thre first downs to the 7. Murakowski scored and Farrar converted, making the score 14-7.

The Wolverines went 80 yards in 12 plays with Peterson plunging over from the five. Michigan scored again midway in the period on a drive from its own 34 in two plays. Weisenburger ran 15 to the 49. Mann took the ball on an end around and went 51 yards for the touchdown.

Regulars Roll Again

Michigan's first stringers produced another touchdown in the first three minutes of the second half. Five rushes gained 59 yards, and Chappuis rounded left end for the final two yards. Brieske made it 35-7. On the first play after the kickoff Farrar fumbled and White recovered for Michigan on the 25. Weisenburger scored on the third rush.

The Wolverines held and started again from their own 31. Teninga passed to Ford for 23 yards and Weisenburger broke 30 yards through tackle for a touchdown.

Brieske kicked his seventh straight conversion for a 49-7 score.

Then came the Wildcats roaring back with Murakowski scoring twice, once on a [illegible] around right end and the other on a short plunge from the one.

String Broken

Badgers Top Unbeaten Yale, 9-0

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18 (AP). Taking charge from the opening play and protecting a late second-period field goal advantage down to the closing minutes, a fighting Wisconsin football team picked up a touchdown just before the battle ended to blank hitherto unbeaten Yale, 9-0, in the bowl today.

With both sides looking good, the Badgers thrilled the near-capacity crowd of 65,000 with 10 seconds left to play in the second quarter of this hard-fought nitersectional battle when Lisle Blackbourn, standing on Yale's 22, split the uprights with his placement shot.

Then, after each team took turns in threatening several times, with Wisconsin proving the more dangerous, the Badgers, capitalizing on a "break," drove to the fray's only touchdown in the final minutes of action. It was a 30-yard pass by Earl Girard to Jim Embach, who caught it on the 2, surrounded by three Elis, and bulled across. Blackbourn's try for the extra point went wide, but it didn't matter by then. Neither did the fact that he missed one from the 19-yard line in the opening period.

So strong a defense did the Wisconsin nine throw up that the closest Yale came to tallying, play and protecting a late sec-Taking charge from the opening came in the second quarter and ended on the Badgers' 13. Wisconsin, in addition to its scoring plays, muffed another on the opening play in the final quarter when Gene Evans, who played brilliantly with Girard, fumbled on the Yale 4, the ball rolling over the goal line where it was picked up by Art Fitzgerald for a touchback.

For Wisconsin it was a well-deserved victory, one worth waiting for since 1899, when it last met Yale. That time the Blue won, 6 to 0.

75-Yd. Drive Nets Game's Only Score

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 18 (AP).—Harvard's battered football forces, still licking their 47-0 Virginia game wounds used defensive magic to eke out a 7-0 win over heavier and healthier Holy Cross before a perspiring 35,000 crowd today at the Stadium.

The contest appeared headed for a tame stalemate until the third period when the weary Crimsonites rallied and drove 75 yards for a touchdown. It came when Johnny Fiorentino pulled a 14-yard pass from Chip Gannon out of the hands of two defenders in the Holy Cross end zone.

The spark that set off Harvard's second straight win over Holy Cross and its fifteenth in a 22-game series came when Bob Sullivan made 10 and then Fullback Paul Lazzaro banged through the middle 34 and 6 yards, respectively, to Holy Cross' 25.

Ken O'Donnell passed to Left Winger George Hill for 10. Then the left-handed Gannon took over and contacted Fiorentino.

Holy Cross' only impressive march of the game was made early in the final period. Ray Sullivan, younger brother of Crusader Co-captain Bob, returned a punt 15 yards to Harvard's 45. Walt Brennan passed to Jim Dieckelman on Harvard's 25. Harvard Center Don Stone stopped the drive by intercepting a Crusader pass.

Mighty Midget Needs Stilts

Fred Scolari May Get Lost In 'Tall Timber' Wednesday

UNLESS Washington Cap Coach Red Auerbach puts a leash on his runt-sized guard, Fred Scolari, the latter is likely to get lost in the pro basketball exhibition shuffle at Uline Arena Wednesday . . . Scolari, who has to give it everything he's got to make 5'10", will be on the same floor with Hank Boykoff, of the visiting Toledo Jeeps, and John (Super) Mahnken, the local skyscraper . . . Boykoff hits 6'9" without any exertion with Mahnken only an inch below that mark . . . In case Mahnken finds he's outreached by the altitudinous Boykoff, the Caps can use Irv Rothenberg, who's only 3 inches shyof the 7 foot mark himself . . . The Capitols, who won the Basketball Association's Eastern championship last winter and who now operate in the Western Division, have been staging their rehearsals at American University with the regular five cutups intact. . Bob Feerick, the shot-putting high scorer and Scolari are at guards, Mahnken at center and Bones McKinney and Johnny Norlander up front . . .

Maryland probably will replace Richmond on its 1948 football schedule with Miami. The Terps have just about accepted a game with the Floridians under the lights of the Orange Bowl . . . Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has a six-round supporting bout for his Monday show which figures to be a lulu. It pits two flashy local 120-pounders, Puggy King and Jimmy Cooper, against each other . . . A year ago today Smuggy Hursey was the idol of the Turner's Arena customers. Today, however, he and his manager, Mel Stevenson, have to buy their way into the fight palace. They're on the "outs" with Menendez and he requires them to pay their respects to the box office, just like any other customer . . .

Indians Nip Brown In Final 11 Seconds

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 18 (AP).—In the most thrilling finish on Memorial Field since the famous "first down" game against Cornell in 1940, Dartmouth's Indians today scored a touchdown with only 11 seconds of playing time remaining and defeated Brown University, 13-10.

As 10,000 shirt-sleeved fans, sitting in 86-degree temperature, screeched, either for Dartmouth to score or Brown to hold, the Big Green advanced steadily from its own 20 for the score, tallied by Right Half Hal Fitkin, who took a pitch from Quarter Joe Sullivan and skirted his own left end, nipping into the end zone a foot from the sideline.

Dartmouth's victory was hard fought as Brown jumped off to a 10-0 lead in the first half and seemed headed for a triumph in this thirty-second meeting between these old Ivy rivals.

Brown raced to a score in less than four minutes of the opening whistle, but a holding penalty nullified those six points. However, Brown refused to be denied and Fullback Arn Green finally bucked over from 1 foot out. That score climaxed a 33-yard drive. Center Joe Condon came in and kicked the point.

Then 40 seconds after the start of the second quarter Condon stood on the Dartmouth 26 and placekicked a field goal for three more Brown points.

A 43-yard scamper by Fitkin, hero of the final tally, put Dartmouth back in the game, 4 minutes and 15 seconds after half-time intermission.

Birds Scout Hunters (It Says Here)

Freeport, Ill., Oct. 18 (AP).—Bob Peters maintains that the pheasants are scouting the hunters this season.

Peters, owner of a sporting goods store which sells guns and bird shot, told friends today that shortly after he opened the store, and while he was in the back of the establishment, a ringneck pheasant cock walked in.

While he stared, Peters said, the pheasant strolled leisurely about the store, eyed the sporting equipment then walked out and flew away.

Astaire's Horse Wins $15,000 'Cap

New York, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Trippicate, displaying some of the fancy footwork which made his owner, Fred Astaire, famous, surged to the front in the stretch today to capture the rich $75,000 added Golden Gate handicap.

The favorite, with veteran Johnny Longden handling the reins, beat Bymeabond by two and a half lengths going away and brought his dancer-owner $52,450. He ran the mile and a quarter in 2:05.1 on a track made slow by recent rain.

Triplicate paid $6.90, $4.50 and $3.20. Bymeabond, which set the pace for most of the race, returned $10.70 and $6.40 while Autocrat paid $4.30 for show.

Sella Paces Tigers With Brilliant Runs

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Princeton University's varsity football team defeated Colgate's Red Raiders, 20 to 7, today in Palmer Stadium with Sophomore Halfback George Sella breaking away consistently for long gains and John Powers plunging through the Scarlet and Black line from the fullback position.

Near the end of the first period, Len Palin, playing guard for Princeton, recovered a Colgate fumble on the Red Raiders' 16. Val Wagner's pass to Meyer picked up 10 yards and three plays later, Powers plunged over from the one.

Sella took the kickoff on his own 36 and ran 64 yards for the second score.

Colgate scored in the third period on a line buck by Frank Muehlheuser from the one and Elmer Gall's placement was good for the extra point.

Val Wagner, Princean halfback, opened the final period with a pass to Sella for 56 yards and a first down on the Colgate 14. Fullback Powers hit the line four times and scored from the one on his last attempt. Keuffel again converted to make the score 20 to 7.

V. M. I. Rally Fails, Spiders Win, 21-20

Richmond, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—The educated toe of old "never miss" Frank Thompson of Farmville was the margin of victory today in the University of Richmond's 21 to 20 homecoming victory over V.M.I. in a wild and woolly football game before 8000 in City Stadium.

The aroused Cadets scored twice in a stretch of 80 seconds of the final period to turn what had looked like a decisive victory into a close squeek for the Spiders.

It was the first major victory of the season for Johnny Fenlon's boys, who had command of the situation all the way until that final period uprising. V.M.I. was trailing, 21 to 6, with only seven minutes remaining in the ball game when George Crowson took a kickoff on his own 13 and raced 87 yards for a touchdown.

Americans Bow In Tennis Tourney

Mexico City, Oct. 18 (AP).—Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia and Tortsen Johansson of Sweden, won today, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2, their quarter finals match against James Brink of Seattle, Wash., and Earl Cochell of San Francisco, Calif., left unfinished yesterday in the 6th Pan American Tennis Tournament.

Georgia Tech Wins

Atlanta, Oct. 18 (AP).—Georgia Tech gave up its first points of the season today but kept its fotball record clean with a well earned 27-7 victory over a scrappy Auburn eleven before 37,000.

Penn State Triumphs, 40-0

State College, Pa., Oct. 18 (AP).—High scoring Penn State, still unbeaten after four starts, converted four miscues into touchdowns today to rout Syracuse University, 40 to 0, before a homecoming throng of 20,000.

Playing without the services of three regulars, the Nittany Lions had trouble getting under way but once their offense began to roll Syracuse was unable to stem the tide. The Orange, meanwhile, made it easy, by an endless series of errors.

The first period ended in a scoreless tie but then Penn State's 140-pound reserve halfback, Elwood Petchel of Easton, Pa., came on the scene to spark a drive which carried 81 yards to pay dirt. State's reserves added two more scores in the third period, both on fumbles and two more in the fourth stanza to complete the route.

Veeck and Evans In Trade Talk

Cleveland, Oct. 18 (AP).—Bill Veeck, boss of the Cleveland Indians, talked baseball deals today with General Manager Billy Evans of the Detroit Tigers.

But Lou Boudreau—the Indians' manager Veeck makes no bones about wanting to trade if he can find a good deal—didn't come up in the conversation, Veeck said. Other players were discussed without any definite agreement reached, he said, and another conference will be held soon.

Cadets Win, 40-0, Extend String to 32

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 18 (AP).—Army overwhelmed Virginia Tech today, 40 to 0, thereby extending its brilliant string of consecutive games without defeat to 32.

VPI managed to get only as far as Army's 45-yard line and was held to three first downs. But the plucky invading team started out stubbornly, holding Army scoreless through the first period and twice taking the ball on downs inside its 10-yard line.

Rip Rowan, Charles Gabrielle, were Army's big ground gainers. Amos Gillette and Bobby Stuart. The first two Cadet touchdowns came in quick succession at the start of the second period. The first climaxed a steady drive down the field with Rowan going over from the six. Winfield Scott engineered the next when he squirmed 40 yrds only to be run out of bounds on the Tech three. He crossed the line on the next play.

Just before the end of the first half, Tom Bullock, substitute center, snagged a Tech aerial and returned to the enemy's 26. Arnold Galiffa passed to Davis Parris in the end zone on the next play.

The first touchdown of the third period came on an 85-yard rive with Galiffa going over from a half yard out. In this drive Gillette made the longest run of the game, 47 yards.

Later in the period Rowan intercepted another Tech throw, ran to the 3, and then rounded end to score.

In the final period Gabrielle intercepted, ran down the sidelines and then lateralled to John Shelley who was pushed out on the Tech 10 for a 40-yard gain. From there Gillette scored to make it 40-0.

Army's mastery was shown statistically by the fact the Cadets gained 392 yards by rushing against only 10 for Tech. The two teams were equal in forward passing, however, each making 48 yards through the air.

Episcopal Wins, 33-0

Baltimore, Oct. 18 (AP).—Unbeaten Episcopal High of Alexandria, Va., rolled to its fourth straight victory today by smashing St. Paul's of Baltimore, 33-0, in a scholastic football game.

The Virginians scored their first touchdown when Rufe Barkeley returned a por St. Paul's punt to the Baltimore 22 and later bulled over from the 2.

Phil Duckett scored the second touchdown a few minutes later, smashing over from the 3. The score was set up by a pass from Barkeley to Weir Goodwin, who lateraled to Duckett and the latter raced to the 3.

Tommy Birge personally accounted for two touchdowns. He raced 21 yards around end in the second quarter for one and climaxed a third-period downfield march by taking the ball over from the 5.

Chris Holland, on a 10-yard run, made the other touchdown. Barkeley booted three placements for the conversions.

The losers' only threatening gesture was halted late in the game on Episcopal's 8-yard line after the passing of Carl Dean and Wilson's 30-yard run had moved the ball downfield.

Navy Plebes Edge Terp Frosh, 7 to 6

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Navy's plebe footballers overcame the Maryland freshmen with a touchdown and extra point with only four minutes to play and came up with their first win of the season today, 7 to 6.

Dave Bannerman drove through center for 8 yards and the tying touchdown to culminate a 79-yard march in only five plays. Roger Drew's boot from placement gave the plebes the slim edge they held until the game ended.

Maryland scored near the end of the opening period, after Andrews intercepted a plebe pass on his own 10 and raced to the Navy 40. Joe Kutchta rammed through right guard to the 3-yard stripe, fumbled and recovered in the end zone for the Maryland touchdown.

Unbeaten McKinley Tech Overwhelms Eastern, 19-0

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

TECH ROLLS ON—Bobby Thompson of Tech hits the center of the line in yesterday's interhigh clash at Central Stadium only to be stopped by Elmer Landon of Eastern. The action took place in the third quarter. By virtue of a 19-0 victory Tech kept its unblemished record intact with four victories, retaining first place in the interhigh standings. Central is in second place with a 3-0 record. Eastern has a 2-2 mark after yesterday's defeat

4000 See Trainers Retain Leadership In InterHigh Series

With Bob (Buggy) Thompson, speedy [illegible] leading the way, Tech High School registered an impressive 19-0 victory over Eastern High yesterday to keep intact its undisputed claim to first place in the interhigh series.

Although scoring but one touchdown, Thompson still dominated the picture with his all around passing and running before 4000 fans at Central High Stadium. The victory was the fourth for the Manual Trainers.

Tech scored in the first quarter, when Thompson ran the ball around his own right end from the 7-yard line after his team had advanced up the field from their own 28-yard line. The sustained drive of 72 yards was the result of gains by Thompson and his running mate Cecil Gray. A pass from Gray to left end Jim McCauley netted the extra point.

As the half came to a close the Eastern Ramblers seriously threatened when they drove from their own 47-yard line to the Tech 6. With a first down and goal to go the clock ran out and they never had another chance to score.

Tech drove over for their second touchdown of the afternoon on the first play of the last quarter. Thompson and Gray advanced the ball from their own 48 in a series of line bucks and passes and, with but a yard to go, Gray smashed through right guard for a score. His attempted pass for extra point was knocked won.

The final tally occurred when Eastern attempted to kick on their own 47-yard line. Tech End Glenn Smith raced in to partially block the boot and the ball sailed into the surprized arms of Julius Poms. He raced 55 yards down the side lines for the score. The try for extra point was blocked. Eastern is now relegated to third place with the Techmen on the top of the list.

Ice Lions Play Heavy Schedule

Coach Jack Riley's Washington Lions are to complete a series of six matches over a span of eight nights this week when they swing into the thick of their American Professional Hockey League schedule.

The local pros opened a brief road trip against the Hornets in Pittsburgh last night that will be terminated agains the Capitols in Indianapolis tonight.

On Tuesday night the Lions return to Uline ice against the New Haven Ramblers; play the Rambles in New Haven Thursday; the Springfield Indians at Uline's Friday night, and in Springfield Saturday.

Commodores Defeated for First Time

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 18 (AP).—Kentucky's Wildcats had their backs and their T formation functioning to perfection today to defeat the hitherto unbeaten Vanderbilt Comodores, 14 to 0, in a Southeastern Conference contest.

Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant's swift-striking T-model system, newly installed this year at Kentucky, completely smothered Coach Red Sanders' single wing up to today had carried the Commodores to three straight victories.

A capacity crowd of 22,500 watched Kentucky gain almost at will through and around the Vanderbilt line which appeared sluggish in contrast to previous performances. Kentucky piled up 19 first downs to Vanderbilt's 8.

The Wildcats scored in the first seven minutes after getting the ball on the Vanderbilt 13 on a pass interference ruling. Jack Farris, Kentucky's leading ground gainer, made nine yards and Fullback Moseley made it first down on the one. Quarterback George Blanda carried it over and then kicked goal to make the score 7 to 0.

The Wildcat offensive began to click again as the second period neared its end. With less than two minutes remaining Blanda passed to End Chink Sengel for the second Kentucky touchdown after Farris had carried the ball around left end 20 yards to Vanderbilt's 16 and Don (Dopey) Phelps added nine. Blanda's kick again was good.

Vanderbilt missed a scoring chance in the second quarter when Jamie Wade failed to make two yards which would have meant a first down on Kentucky's two.

Catholic Trampled by Jackets, 35-0

By Frank Wagner
Post Reporter

The Randolph-Macon College Yellow Jackets swarmed all over a game but outclassed Catholic University, 35-0, yesterday at the Brookland Bowl. It was Catholic U.'s second straight loss and Randolph-Macon's fourth win in five starts.

Jacket Fullback Roger Dughi supplied most of the winner's scoring punch, ramming over for two touchdowns and place-kicking five points after touchdown. The five conversions gave him a record of nine straight.

Dughi's first tally came early in the opening period when he skirted left end for 10 yards after Guard Art Olney had blocked Joe Maiuri's punt on the C. U. 20.

Cards March 48 Yards

A 50-yard drive in the last quarter was climaxed by Dughi's second touchdown, a 1-yard smash through center.

This score was the Jacket answer to the Cardinals' longest sustained drive of the afternoon—a 48-yard foray in which the Cards rolled up four first downs.

The drive was halted when Jacket Halfback Ray Byrd intercepted Bill Frank's pass on the Jacket 42 and ran it to midfield.

Gummerlock Pegs Two Scores

Quarterback Stan Gummerlock took up where Dughi left off. He pitched one touchdown pass to Left Half Bob Sprenger just before the half ended. Sprenger took the 23-yard heave on the Cardinal 10 and raced across the goal line untouched.

Gummerlock tossed another pay-dirt pass as the third quarter began. Back on his own 46, he threw to End Bill Atkins who strolled 21 yards for a touchdown.

Another third period score for the visitors was registered when Jacket End Bob Brown blocked another Joe Maiuri punt on the CU four. Quarterback Bill Caldwell sneaked two yards to score.

Reese Says Dodgers Voted Durocher Full Series Share

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 18 (AP).—Pee Wee Reese, shortstop for the Brooklyn Dodgers, said here today the Dodgers voted suspended Manager Leo Durocher a full share of the players' pool in the recent World Series.

The action apparently was vetoed by the office of baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, since Durocher's name was not listed among those sharing in the players' pool.

Several reports said the Dodgers voted to cut Durocher in on the pool but they were not confirmed.

"Sure, we voted Durocher a share," Reese said. "There's no secret about it, is there?"

Stepping Into Faster Company

Baugh & Co. Tackle Packers As 2-Touchdown Underdogs

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 18.—Reversing the order of frontier days, the Washington Redskins will be the brave but underdog little band of attackers tomorrow as they face the Green Bay Packers in their first regular-season invasion of the wild and wooly Western Division of the National Football League.

The Redskins, some say, should lose by as much as two touchdowns. They may be co-holders of the Eastern Division lead but, it is pointed out, they're stepping out in faster company. The West has been conceded the toughest of the two divisions and Green Bay, confounding the experts, has whipped the Chicago Bears and Los Angeles and lost by a mere four points to the terrific Chicago Cards.

Some 27,000 of this brewing community's citizens, along with as many Green Bay fans as can make the trip, should pack State Fair Grounds Park for the sixth meeting of the teams since the 'Skins came to Washington.

Packer supporters have all the bset of pre-game arguments. They need only point to a pre-season get-together of the clubs in Baltimore. That one went to the Packers, 31-21, and it took the Redskins three touchdowns in the last quarter to get that close.

But Green Bay's management isn't taking the game lightly. Publicist George Strickler, speaking for Coach Curley Lambeau, says everyone realizes the Redskins club, they'll face tomorrow is not the one they beat in Baltimore.

In the first place, Sammy Baugh is ready for a full game's offense. In Baltimore he played less than a half. And the youthful Redskins' overall play, on offense and defense, has developed each Sunday as they won two and lost one game.

Again it will be Slingin' Sam tossing against his former understudy, Indian Jack Jacobs, with the Redskins holding an edge there they hope will outweigh a Packer margin in weight and experience in the line. Jacobs, just returned from a trip to Oklahoma where his father has been gravely ill, is being called the lad who "makes the Packers click."

Certainly it was Jack who accounted for that preseason triumph, hurling three touchdown passes.

Probable starting line-ups:

Washington		Green Bay
Lookabaugh	L.E.	Goodnight

AFL Calls Off Jamaica Strike

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—Members of Local 814, International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL), tonight called off their strike at the Jamaica Race Track after agreeing to sign an agreement with nine horse owners and trainers.

State Labor Relations Board chairman, the Rev. Father William J. Kelley, termed the pact a "code of honor agreement" and said it listed substantially all of the terms agreed upon at a city hall meeting Wednesday. These terms had been drafted by Mayor William O'Dwyer's citizens' committee. They subsequently were accepted by the union but rejected by the horse owners.

The members were Sports Writers Dan Parker and Arthur Daly, and John Sloan, former chairman of the New York State Racing Commission.

Father Kelley announced a meeting would be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the Jamaica Race Track clubhouse, where the remainder of the 151 owners and trainers have been requested to appear.

He said he would urge them to accept this "code of honor agreement," and added he had "hopes" they would do so.

West Virginia SwampsN.Y.U.

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—West Virginia's unbeaten and untied Mountaineers played the football forces of New York University for the first time today and the shrinking Violets, who wilted as the powerful visitors ran and passed their way to a 40-0 triumph, probably hope it will be the last.

A polite gathering of some 6000, which rattled around in Yankee Stadium like a handful of beans in a barrel, watched the Mountaineers strike six times with explosive suddenness to hang up their fourth one-sided victory of the 1947 campaign.

Coach Bill Kern's regulars chalked up two quick touchdowns in the first period, then turned the game over to the reserves, who also reached teh enemy end zone from every angle. The first-stringers got back in the game briefly in the second half, presumably for the fun of it.

Staunton Swamps Greenbrier by 25-0

Staunton, Va., Oct. 18.—Staunton Military Academy broke back in the win column here this afternoon to chalk up an easy 25-0 victory over Greenbriar Military School of Lewisburg, W. Va.

Capt. Bob Spears' 45-yard jaunt around left end near close of first quarter put Staunton out front and the final issue never was in doubt.

Fordham Loses Again, To Rutgers, 36 to 6

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 18 (AP).—A heavily favored Rutgers eleven turned back the visiting Fordham Rams, hopeful of their first victory of the season, 36 to 6, before a crowd of 6000 today.

Fordham made its lone score in the third period when interference was called on a pass. Otherwise the Rams were on the defensive.

Georgia Drubs Okla. Aggies On Passes, 20-7

Stillwater, Okla., Oct. 18 (AP).—Twenty-year-old Johnny Rauch, who pitches a football as if it were a silver dollar, shone just as brightly as he passed to two touchdowns and set up another to give Georgia a 20-7 victory over Oklahoma A. & M. here today.

Rauch's accuracy was amazing as he hit his receivers for scores in the third and fourth quarters while the Aggies were able to muster the scoring punch only in the third period.

Aiding the 173-pound junior was a solid forward wall that only a couple of times had the Georgia Bulldog in its own doghouse.

Only a little behind Rauch in playing a sparkling offensive game was the Aggies' Jim Spavital who scored the Aggies' only touchdown. In the first minute of the third quarter, he took a punt on his own 23-yard line and savagely snaked his way through the entire Georgia team to score. A perfectly timed block by Joe Spencer cleared out his biggest obstacle.

SMU Whips Rice, 14-0

Dallas, Oct. 18 (AP).—Southern Methodist whipped Rice decisively, 14-0, today to remain among the Nation's unbeaten, untied teams and to exalt Doak Walker as the greatest all-around back ever to play for the Methodists.

A crowd of 22,503 roared approval at the amazing feats of the fiery sophomore who now has run virtually at will over four straight teams.

Walker led an 80-yard surge in the first period for the initial Methodist touchdown, scoring it himself on a dash around end, and getting off a long run that led eventually to the second. He also kicked two points after touchdown, narrowly missed a field goal from the Owl 15-yard line and intercepted two Rice passes that were labeled "touchdown."

Missouri Beats Kansas State

Columbia, Oct. 18 (AP).—The University of Missouri Tigers unleashed a powerful running attack today and flattened the Kansas State Wildcats 47 to 7 in the first Big Six conference game of the season for both teams.

Seven Missouri backfield men scored a touchdown each as the Tigers struck early and often through and around the Wildcats' line.

Out. Fishing . . .

By Jack Bell

COMPETITIVE angling contests gradually taking hold with Chesapeake Bay fishermen.

Two successful contests were held during the summer and the day may not be distant when Maryland will realize sport fishing is big business.

However, if nothing is done to curb excessive commercial netting of bay fish there will be few fish for either sport or profit.

Last Wednesday the Martha's Vineyard Striped Bass Derby concluded in Massachusetts. More than 2000 were entered a short time after the opening September 15.

George Marshall, Cambridge, Mass., won first prize and a $4200 Cris Craft cruiser with his 45-pound 13-ounce striped bass. The ladies came in for big prizes. Miss Janet Allen, a lass from the Middle West, fishing for the first time, landed a 34-pound 11-ounce striper to win a third prize valued at $1000.

North Carolina's $15,000 fishing rodeo, hampered by easterly wind, is now in its fourth week. It appears 50,000 entries will be received before the close, November 1.

DR. ELLIOTT J. MOTLEY, jr., of Charlotte, the other day unloaded a sailfish from the Idle-On that measured 7 feet 11 inches and weighed 74 pounds.

It was taken off Frying Pan Shoals, and may bring Dr. Motley the $5000 cash first prize, and for Capt. Thomas Halon Watts the extra $1000.

Local Waltonians are losing a hard worker and friend through the resignation of E. E. Hamilton, president, Maryland Division of the Izaak Walton League, due to his transfer to Hartford, Conn.

He was largely responsible for a 10-mile stretch of the C. & O. Canal at White's Ferry being converted into a fishing hole.

Frank A. Gunther, Silver Spring, Md., chapter of the IWL will take over for the interim.

O'Neill Signs Contract For 1948 Ball Season

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP). — Steve O'Neill, manager of the Detroit Tigers since 1943, signed a contract today to lead the American League Baseball Club in the 1948 season.

President Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit Baseball Co., said O'Neill would receive the same salary as in 1947, a figure that was not revealed.

Joe Medwick Released

St. Louis, Oct. 18 (AP). — Joe (Ducky) Medwick, colorful St. Louis Cardinal outfielder of the "Gashouse Gang" era, was given his unconditional release by Cardinal Owner Sam Breadon today.

Jeffords' Gelding Wins By 8 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Staff Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 18.—Loyal Legion, a grandson of Man O'War, ran like a chip off the old block here today. A crowd of 25,000, seeing racing under ideal conditions, watched the 3-year-old gelding romp to the wire by eight lengths with speed to spare in the $25,000 added Washington Handicap.

A distant second was Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Blue Yonder with the King Ranch's Bridal Flower third in a field reduced to six by late scratches. In repeating his victory of last week in the Maryland Handicap, Loyal Legion was a $3 favorite and was clocked in 2:032/5 for the mile and a quarter.

Sets Fast Pace

Jockey Albert Snyder rode Loyal Legion and had him under a strong grip at the end. However, the son of Halcyon showed his speed in going the first six furlongs in 1.11 3/5.

The victory was the fifth of the year for Loyal Legion in 11 tries and ran his earnings over the $50,000 mark for the year.

Shivaree was the only horse in front of Loyal Legion. The Fisher Hope set the early pace but stopped when Loyal Legion was asked for speed. Snyder let out the wraps, Loyal Legion swept into a long lead and then coasted to the wire. Blue Yonder and Bridal Flower fought for the place money while Loyal Legion was being taken in front of the clubhouse.

The Black Toney, the day's secondary feature, brought an upset. Jockey Johnny Tammaro came through on the inside rail at the top of the stretch to win the 6-furlong sprint with S. W. Labrot, Jr.'s, Bovard a $69.60 shot. Wayne Kendrick's Equisun was second with R. E. Carler's Oriole third. C. V. Whitney's Dusty Legs proved a dull-performing favorite.

Double Pays $199.60

The Broadside Steeplechase proved little more than a workout of the Rokeby Stable's Genancoke. The 5-year-old drew far out and won by the most part of a city block. Kent Miller's Battle Cruiser was second and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Cosey was third. The crowd backed Genancoke with utmost confidence, the son of Gino paying a mere $3 mutuel after gong the about 2 miles in 3:57 2/5. Jockey T. Field won his third steeplechase of the meeting.

The daily double paid $199.60 on the 8 and 6 combination. The Blue Stone Farm's Lanceron came from far back to be a going-away winner of the first race while J. Scelzi's Joe Mandell struck by his running guns to win the second.

A FUTURE BRONKO NAGURSKI—"Mighty" Billy Woodward, 6-year-old Merrick Boys Club player, is shown scooting around right end in an intraclub scrimmage which was held between halves of yesterday's Eastern-Tech game at Central High Stadium. Billy weighs 45 pounds in uniform and 38 stripped. He attends Hilton School when he isn't playing football and he lives at 102 7th st. ne.

Bullis Prep Rolls Over La Salle, 44-0

Scoring in every period and in almost every manner possible, the Bullis Prep footballers yesterday pulverized LaSalle Military Academy, 44-0, for its fourth victory before several hundred fans at Bullis Stadium.

Four of the tallies came by air, two by rushing and one on a blocked punt. End Dick Goelzer and Back Ted Kukowski topped the point parade, with two touchdowns apiece.

The victory avenged last years' 33-6 beating, and practically everyone on the Bullis squad got a chance to pue in a few licks against their unfortunate opponents.

A 16-yard toss from Mike Casoli to Mike Sorrentino started the score rolling near the end of the first quarter. The next period saw Goelzer sharing his first touchdown on a 7-yard pass from Sorretnino, and Kukowski couonting for 6 points on a quarterback sneak.

A freak play featured the next tally in the third quarter, Goelzer blocking a punt by Al Therisult on the 5-yard line, catching the ball and carrying it over the goalline. Then Kukowski ran 35 yards with an intercepted pas sfor another touchdown in the same period.

A 10-yard sprint by Jim Lyons and a 34-yard pass from Xen Sideris to Buster Frazier added two more touchdowns to the Little Admirals' total in the last stanza.

Sinkwich Plays For Colts Against Dons

Baltimore, Oct. 18 (AP).—While the loop's No. 1 pitcher, Bud Schwenk, still will pose the biggest offensive threat for Baltimore in its All-America Conference tilt with Los Angeles here tomorrow, the expected crowd of 35,000 will be watching Frankie (Fireball) Sinkwich.

The former Georgia All-America, obtained from the New York Yankees two weeks ago, now is ready to go. Coach Cecil Isbell, who used him only sparingly against Buffalo last Sunday, says Sinkwich's injured knee appears fine and he will start at fullback.

Another former All-America, Ernie Case, from UCLA, will staff at quarterback for the Colts, but he will give way quickly as usual for Schwenk.

Probable lineups:

Unbeaten Illinois Rolls Over Minnesota's 'Beef Trust', 40-13

Perry Moss Completes 7 Of 7 Passes

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 18 (AP).—Perry Moss completed seven passes in seven tosses today—two of them spiraling to long touchdowns—as Illinois' high-octane football team crushed Minnesota 40-13.

The pinderous Gophers, entering the important Big Nine game with a string of three victories, suffered their first defeat before 56,048 in Memorial Stadium. It was the worst lacing Minnesota has received from Illinois in an 18-game rivalry which began in 1898.

In remaining undefeated in four games, the Illini cracked the Gopher "beef trust" by drilling through a line which had a weight advantage up to 21 pounds per man and striking through the air against a pass defense that was nil.

Gopher Slowness Aids Moss

The Gophers clowness afoot enabled Moss, the migrant from Tulsa University, to hurl a 25-yard scoring pass to Dwight Eddleman and then follow up with a 54-yard aerial play to Art Dufelmeier for two touchdowns in the first period. Both receivers were completely in the clear after outrunning Minnesota defenders.

The Gophers rammed 60 yards for a touchdown at the outset of the second quarter. Fullback Bill Elliott capped the effort by smashing over from the 6.

A few plays later, Eddleman scored for the second time in one of the longest runs of the season. The high-jumping track star hugged Harry Elliott's punt, faked a hand-off to Duffelmeier which drew the Gophers' tacklers to one side of the field, then streaked 89 yards down the sidelines.

Minnesota Stopped on 3

Minnesota shook off this dazzling play by scrambling 97 yards only to be denied entrance through the touchdown gate. The Illinois line, which let the Gophers seep through for 251 yards in the course of the game, cemented and held for downs on the 3 as time ran out in the half.

From then on it was a rout. The Illini piled up two more touchdowns in the third period and one in the last. Moss completed three passes in the first half and four more in the third period before retiring. His whip-lash tosses gained 113 yards.

Michigan State Wins in Rain, 20-0

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Michigan State splashed its way to a muddy 20-to-0 victory today over Iowa State before a drenched homecoming crowd of 20,987 fans at Macklin Feld.

Little George Kuerre, left halfback, made the Spartans' first score with a 25-yard gallop around right end. Minutes later, Right Halfback Lynn Chandnois broke through tackle and ran 40 yards for the second touchdown.

Iowa State took over then and marched t othe Michigan State 13, where the Cyclones lost the ball on downs. Guerre took the ball on the first play, broke through the middle and sloshed his way 87 yards for the final counter. He was the rushing star of the game, carrying the ball 15 times for a total of 143 yards.

Michigan State held a distinct edge over the visitors in the statistics, gaining 344 yards to the Cyclones' microscopic 34.

Fort Belvoir Defeats Fort Eustis, 34 to 0

Fort Belvoir defeated Fort Eustis, 34-0, yesterday in a Middle Atlantic Service League game at Fort Belvoir. George Evans scored twice for the winners, once on a 50-yard punt return and again on a 17-yard sweep around right end. John McDaniels caught two touchdown heaves from Charley Morris and the final score came when Bill Perkodiz passed 20 yards to Jim Barrick in the end zone.

Terriers Never Had Chance

Purdue's Speedy Backs Run Roughshod Over Boston, 62-7

Boston, Oct. 18 (AP).—Purdue ran roughshod over the Boston University Terriers, 62-7, today before 11,446 at Fenway Park.

Paced by hard-running backs, the Boilermakers tallied in every period with eight different men figuring in the scoring.

Outcharged and outran, the hapless Boston University team never had a chance.

Midway through that session Boston University, after an exchange of punts, moved the ball from Purdue's 38 to the 14 on a pass and line buck. Quarterback John Toner then flipped a pass to end George Boston, who charged over the goal line.

Purdue tallied twice in the third session, both on long aerial. Bob Demoss tossed one from B. U.'s 38, contacting Adams on the 14 from where the Purdue back jogged over. The other score came on a 33-yard pass from Demoss to Bill Canfield, who took the ball on the dead-run on the 3.

Purdue tallied three times in the final period. Bill Barnard plunged over from the 5, Harry Stram from the 1, and from the 2.

Indiana Wallops Pitt Panthers, 41-6

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Touchdown-hungry Indiana found its range today and, led by the passing and running of George Taliaferro, handed the University of Pittsburgh a 41-to-6 lacing.

Taliaferro scored twice, hit his pass-receiving with deadly accuracq and stalled a Pitt offensive with vicious tackling.

Pitt's lone score midway in the third period was set up by Halfback Du Cecconi, who rifled a 40-yard pass to Bill McSpeak. The speedy end was all by himself on the 16-yard line and crossed the goal unmolested.

Dick Deranek made the first Indiana touchdown, sprinting 16 yards into the end zone in the second quarter after Taliaferro led a 70-yard downfield drive. Minutes later, Taliaferro made a screen pass to Mel Groomes, who scored another touchdown. Then Indiana scored again quickly on another toss to Harry Jagade.

Lou Mihajlovich went for another score in the third period when he intercepted a pass and scampered 20 yards. Indiana finished the game with its third and fourth stringers.

Miss. State Wins

State College, Miss., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Mississippi State Maroons mixed accurate passing with hard running today to trounce a hard-fighting Duquesne eleven, 34 to 0, before a homecoming-day crowd of about 10,000.

It was a battle of powerful lines during the first half, but State's power came to the fore in the last two periods as "The Duke" tired.

Two Maroon touchdowns resulted from passes, and three were on running plays.

The teams battled on even terms during the first period with neither able to do much through the line. State made 18 first downs and allowed the Dukes only three.

Ole Miss Tops Tulane, 27-14; Conerly Stars

New Orleans, Oct. 18 (AP).—Charley Conerly passed for three tochdowns and plunged over for another to give the Mississippi Rebels a 27 to 14 victory over the Tulane Green Wave before 40,000 spectators today.

Two of Charley's scoring heaves were 18-yarders on last down. His passes also set up the tochdown in which he scored himself. When not otherwise engaged, the tailback was keeping Tulane backed up with fine punts and quick kicks.

Tulane scored on third-period marches of 59 and 77 yards—the only sustained touchdown marches the Wave has made in four games this season.

A fumble recover on Tulane's 26 set up the Reb's first score early in the opening period. Conerly passed to Poole for the last seven.

Demers Faces Our 'Stonewall'

Another newcomer to local boxing fans, 21-year-old Pat Demers, Boston lightweight, comes to Turner's Arena tomorrow night to meet 18-year-old Stonewall Jackson in the feature 10-round attraction.

This is Stonewall's twenty-second professional bout, and 19 of his matches were victoriees. But on the basis of Demers' performance against some of the country's top-notchers, Jackson will find himself in the role of underdog.

Jackson upset the 3-1 favorite, Joe DiMartino of Bridgeport, last week with a technical knockout in the third round.

Demers, handled by Johnny Attel and Larry Barry, has had some 70 bouts since 1943 when he turned pro. He has beaten among others Danny Bartfield, New York headliner; Julie Kogan and Charley (Cabey) Lewis. He's scrapped with Tony Pellone, Charlie Fusari, Freddie Russo and Archie Wilmer.

Laurel Lifts Ban

Laurel, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Elmer F. Vickers, jr., head of the Laurel police, announced today he had rescinded a previous order barring Don Meade, the former jockey now under suspension for life, from the track.

34,700 Crowd Sets Record

Kansas Comes From Behind To Tie Oklahoma, 13 to 13

Norman, Okla., Oct. 18 (AP).—The University of Kansas Jayhawks matched the Oklahoma Sooners' powerful running attack in two scoring thrusts to earn a 13-13 tie in a fast and furious football game between the Big Six Conference's defending cochampions here today.

An alltime Oklahoma home record crowd of 34,000 shirt-sleeved fans watched the speedy Jayhawkers jump to a 6-point lead in the first minute of the second period, come from behind in the third to knot the count at 13-all and finally halt an Oklahoma drive with a pass interception in the end zone by Halfback Ray Evans on the last play of the game.

TCU Upset Aggies

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 18 (AP).—With Lindy Berry in the starring roll, the Texas Christian Horned Frogs upset Texas A&M 26-0 in a Southwest Conference game today.

Thirty thousand fans jammed TCU's stadium for the fiftieth anniversary of the two schools' grid rivalry and saw the Frogs break a listless first period defense duel by scoring once in the second period, twice in the third and again in the final quarter.

Berry in the second period chalked up the first of his two touchdowns, skipping around right end for six yards to finish a drive that had started on the Aggies' 29-yard line.

Berry finished the scoring with the longest run of the game—a 60-yard runback of one of Buryl Baty's desperate fourth quarter passes.

Ohio State Rallies, Ties Iowa, 13-13

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 18 (AP).—An aroused Ohio State team, which didn't look too good in the first half, found itself in the final period today and roared to two touchdowns on long drives to tie favored Iowa, 13-13, in a Western Conference fray before 72,998 fans.

Before the spurt, Buckeye fans had seen Ohio lose its last two games and go scoreless for seven frames while the opposition counted in 10 periods in a row.

The Hawkeyes scored in each of the first two sessions on passes by little Al Dimarco, the loop's No. 1 tosser. He connected on five of his first six passes, and two of the first three went for touchdowns.

After a punt into the end zone, Ohio started on its 20 and marched 80 yards for the first marker. Fullback Ollie Cline went over from the six after a 24-yard pass from Pandel Savic to Bob Brugge had moved the ball into the shadow of the goal posts. Emil Moldeas's placement kick for the extra point was blocked.

With four minutes to go the Bucks took over on their own 28 after a punt, and marched 72 yards to score. The feature was a beautifully faked reverse by Halfback Jimmy Clark for 41 yards. End Fred Morrison bewildered the Hawkeyes completely on an end-around play for the payoff two yards, and Moldea booted the extra point to deadlock the game with 52 seconds to go.

Terp Soccer Team Beats Navy Juniors

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Don Terzi of the University of Maryland soccer eleven played a standout game and scored two points in his team's defeat of the Navy junior varsity today, 3 to 1.

The Middies opened the scoring when Randy Young, inside right, bodied one over close to Maryland's goal. Soon after, Terzi, playing outside right, whammed one over about 15 feet from the net. John Linz sent over another Maryland tally on a free kick for an inside penalty on Navy.

California Wins 5th Straight, Beating Washington State, 21-6

Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 18 (AP).—California's Bears combined power, alert playing and a few breaks to defeat the scrappy Washington State College Cougars, 21-6, today before 26,000.

It was the fifth straight victory for the unbeaten Bears and their first Coast Conference win of the season.

California scored all its points in the first half. Fullback Johnny Graves smashed through WSC's right tackle for 13 yards and the first Bear touchdown in the opening period.

In the second quarter, Paul Keckley, sub left half, scored from the three.

Later in the same quarter, Right Half Jack Cunningham accounted for the most spectacular play of the game when he intercepted a blocked pass and ran 83 yards.

Oregon Wins, 6-0

Portland, Oreg., Oct. 18 (AP).—The underdog University of Oregon turned on the power to defeat a ragged University of Washington team, 6-0, in their Pacific Coast Conference football game here today.

Oregon crossed the goal line three times, but twice penalties nullified the scoring plays. The Huskies never threatened.

The Ducks started their touchdown march on their own 43-yard line in the third period. Halfback Jake Leicht scored from the 5.

USC Romps, 48-6

Los Angeles, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—University of Southern California, playing like the Trojan thundering herd of old, today defeated Oregon State College, 48 to 6, before 61,000 fans at Memorial Coliseum.

The Trojan line ripped the Oregon State forward wall to shreds. Trojan Halfback Mickey McCardle returned to the form that made him the most feared back in the West in 1944. Tom Walker, the goal-kicking drum major, converted six out of seven extra points.

Western Maryland Wins Easily, 41-0

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Gaining almost at will and putting together a nice mixture of fancy running, passes and breaks, Western Maryland overwhelmed Washington College, 41-0, this afternoon in the first home game of the season for the Sho'men.

Western Maryland went into the lead on the second play of the game when left halfback Joe Giannelli scooted 72 yards from his own 28 for a touchdown.

Charlie Havens' Terrors from Westminster put together two more scores in the first period and added a touchdown in each of the other stanzas.

Baylor 32-6 Victors Over Texas Tech

Lubbock, Tex., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Baylor Bears ran wild at the expense of the Texas Tech Red Raiders today to win 32-6, and remain undefeated and untied.

Baylor had a tremendous edge in the statistics, rolling up 314 yards rushing to Tech's 16 and making 16 first downs to Tech's six. The Red Raiders held the edge in passing, however, completing six for 137 yards while Baylor connected on five for 54.

CIGAR SMOKERS:
Here are the Answers to the Questions You're Asking

QUESTION: "Why can't I get all the PHILLIES I want?"

ANSWER: Simply because the demand for PHILLIES is so great that we are unable to increase production fast enough to supply all the PHILLIES you want.

However, within a short time production of PHILLIES will be the largest in our history, and we hope, that soon all you PHILLIES smokers will be able to buy and enjoy "America's Number 1 Cigar," wherever and whenever you wish.

QUESTION: "Why is it I can get all the X Brand, Y Brand and Z Brand cigars everywhere, but can't get all the PHILLIES I want?"

ANSWER: PHILLIES and other standard brand cigars are in short supply. But cigars of sub-standard value can readily be obtained just as other kinds of sub-standard merchandise can be bought in quantity.

QUESTION: "I learned to smoke PHILLIES overseas—Why can't I find them in my home town? Can I order PHILLIES from you by mail?"

ANSWER: We do not feel it would be fair to open new territories until our regular old-time customers have been fully supplied. While we would like to furnish PHILLIES to all of you, we think our dealers and their customers in our present territories should be supplied first.

QUESTION: "Why is it so hard for me to purchase PHILLIES by the box?"

ANSWER: PHILLIES are allotted to dealers on what we, and they, consider the fairest method that can be devised. If your dealer sold PHILLIES by the box, it would mean that a relatively few smokers would take all his allotment. That would be unfair to other customers who now share a part of each box.

QUESTION: "Why is my dealer out of PHILLIES so often?"

ANSWER: The vast majority of dealers are not out of PHILLIES for more than a short period between shipments. If your regular dealer is temporarily out, the chances are that you can find PHILLIES at a nearby store.

QUESTION: "Why are PHILLIES different from other cigars?"

ANSWER: Smokers continue to ask their dealers, and ask us—"Why do PHILLIES have a richness of flavor—and mildness—that I don't find in other cigars?"

The answer to this question is one of the reasons why we can't make all of the PHILLIES smokers want.

Bayuk buys the best tobacco that can be obtained. While that tobacco is available to other manufacturers, the comparison with any other cigar ends at this point. For under our manufacturing methods, the tobaccos used in PHILLIES are cured and treated by exclusive processes used by no other cigar maker.

FOR EXAMPLE: One of the processing methods invented, patented and used exclusively by Bayuk requires two years to properly condition a particular type of tobacco. We could immediately give you more PHILLIES by conditioning this tobacco only seven, or even six months. But the result would not be the PHILLIES you smokers know and want.

Bayuk believes that rather than sacrifice the quality of PHILLIES in order to more quickly increase our output, you smokers prefer the kind of PHILLIES you now enjoy.

The use of these processes gives PHILLIES the uniformly smooth richness and mild flavor that makes you smokers say—"Men Who Smoke PHILLIES, Get More Out of Smoking."

For the benefit of our smokers (as well as our dealers) we are glad to give this full and complete story.

Gilmer Sparks 'Bama to 10-0 Win Over Vols

Tennessee Stunned by Air Barrage

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 18 (AP).—Hurling Harry Gilmer was bottled up for a half by the Tennessee Vols today, but he completed 11 out of 13 passes in the final half to lead Alabama to a hard-earned 10-0 victory. About 32,000 fans saw the Southeastern Conference battle.

Bill Cadenhead accounted for the 'Bama touchdown on a 9-yard run after a hand-off from Gilmer in the third period. Harry's passes, five good in succession, had done all the other gaining in a 51-yard drive.

The other Tide points came from a field goal by Hugh Morrow. He booted it squarely between the uprights from the 17-yard line midway of the final period. Gilmer's running and passing had taken it to the Tennessee 7.

For his day's efforts, Gilmer connected with 11 of 14 passes for 87 yards, and got 59 more rushing. He was thrown for losses totaling 15, mostly on pass attempts which he failed to get off.

Tennessee had all the better of it in the scoreless first half, but inept ball handling and a stout Alabama line thwarted the Vol efforts. One drive stalled at the Tide 9 and another at the 14.

Yardage gained for the day was about even, with Tennessee netting 61 rushing and 114 passing to 94 rushing and 87 passing for 'Bama.

passes, but the Generals folded up again against Virginia's revived defense on the 21.

Virginia sensed real danger when Harrington ran 65 yards at the opening of the third quarter to tally W. and L.'s lonesome tally.

Fleet Joseph McCary, Virginia's quarterback, Fullback Grover Jones and Substitute John Papit sparked the revival. Papit, on his first play, went through the Generals' scattered defense for 40 yards and stumbled over the goal.

George Grimes of Tazewell, Va., carried the ball from W and L's 35 and over to make the score 25 to 7. He kicked the point, 26 to 7.

The Generals made a dying effort when Brown intercepted a Virginia pass on the goal line, but their ground and air attack faltered and stopped at mid-field.

Michaels passed from the 35-yard line to Elliott in the end zone sent Virginia ahead 32 to 7. The kick was outside.

A last-minute passing rally by W and L's Boyda was broken up by Schroeder and the game ended in midfield.

Maryland Loses First, 19-7; Folger Sparkles for Duke

ing chiefly on reverses, swept the Maryland ends for 13 yards and again for 22. Stephanz slipped outside end for a first down on the Maryland 18 and on fourth down, Folger ran wide at left end for 13 yards and a touchdown. Stephanz' kick for the seventh point was wide.

Maryland stormed back after the kickoff and on a wide lateral from Turyn, Gambino galloped 60 yards to the Duke 20.

But he fumbled when tackled by Mulligan, who recovered on the Duke 18.

From the Duke 48 where they got the ball on Evans' recovery of Williams' fumble, the Terrapins moved to Duke's 41 on Turyn's long pass to Evans, but they gave up the ball when a fourth-down pass overshot Evans on the goal-line.

With less than two minutes to play before the half ended, Duke scored its second touchdown. Folger snagged a Turyn pass and in a stuttering gallop behind blockers he raced 65 yards to the Maryland 24 before Schwarz nailed him with a touchdown-saving tackle.

Wade's Switch Fruitful

Coach Wallace Wade switched tailbacks at this point, moving George Clark in for Folger and Clark passed to Mulligan for a first down on the Maryland 5. Faking another pass, Clark ran right end and cut back for a touchdown, with Stephanz place-kicking the extra point.

Maryland came into possession after the second-half kickoff when Seibert recovered a fumble by Stephanz on the Duke 26, but one play later, Tucker fumbled on a hand-off to Bonk and Duke recovered.

From its own 24, Maryland staged an unstoppable touchdown drive as the third quarter waned. Vernon Seibert, smallest man on the field, and big Gambino smashed into the Duke line for huge chunks and Turyn clicked with a pass to Simler for a first down on the Duke 16.

Seibert galloped for six more but was hurt on the play and left the field. Turyn hit Simler in the end zone for nine yards and a touchdown. McHugh's place-kick cut Duke's lead to 13-7.

Turyn Gambles, Loses

Desperate for another touchdown, Maryland gained the ball in the fourth quarter when Rowden recovered a Duke fumble near midfield, but that drive stalled, and Folger showed his versatility by punting outside on the Maryland three.

Two plays later, Turyn gambled with a pass from behind his own goal line and Tom Hughes made a one-hand interception of the pass aimed at Evans. From the Maryland 15, backfield man Hughes romped to the third Duke touchdown, almost untouched.

It was Maryland's fifth defeat of the five-game series with Duke, and the closest score of the series. Maryland outgained the Dukes from scrimmage 231 yards to 215, and passed 113 yards to Duke's 94. Of the games nine fumbles, Maryland committed five, losing the ball three times.

moth who led the charge of an almost impregnable Navy line, harassed Cornell ball carriers all day. Knifing and slashing his way through the two linemen Cornell assigned to him after intermission, Shimshak was chiefly responsible for the futile Big Red running attack—19 yards.

Until midway in the second period, Navy's victory wasn't to be taken for granted. The Ithacans got the jump before the ball game was three minutes old when they recovered Baysinger's fumble on the Navy 11. Three plays later Quarterback Bob Dean passed to Captain and Fullback Walter Kretz for nine yards and a touchdown.

Dean's kick was good and Navy was on the spot.

Navy scored the next time it got its hands on the ball, marching 77 yards to do it, but still its attack wasn't functioning too smoothly.

With Hawkins pounding away at the tackles, Navy drove to the two where Baysinger went over on a quarterback sneak. Wills came in to kick the point to make it 7-7.

But Cornell was to take the lead again, this time for the last time for them, however. On the fourth play of the second period, Sub End Harry Cassel grabbed a Baysinger pass on the Cornell 41 and raced 59 yards down the sideline.

Hawkins Scores Again

The Sailors got going after that and the only thing that stopped them was the game-ending gun.

After Billy Earl had returned the kickoff to the 26, Navy drove to the 4, only to be repulsed. This didn't faze the Tars, however. They started on their own 46 a bit later and traveled 53 yards.

Baysinger passed to Ends Art Markel and Phil Ryan and mixed up his attack long enough to allow Hawkins to eat up yardage with powerful thrusts through the middle. When the drive reached the 2, Hawkins got the assignment to plow over and he did. That tied it and Wills second straight conversion made it 14-13, Navy.

The Sailors took a big gamble to score that touchdown. On the Cornell 47 with fourth down coming up and needing two yards to move the sticks, Baysinger elected to try for the first down rather than punt. The task was Hawkins and he crashed through with plenty to spare.

Leading only by a point and with less than 55 seconds to go for the half, the Sailors didn't try to protect their lead. They threw caution and the football to the winds and their daring paid off with three more points.

This time Bobby Horne, a hero of the Duke game, engineered the passing attack which carried to the 13. At this point, Wills booted his field goal, with Horne holding. It was an angular kick from the 22 and split the bar as if guided by radar.

That made it 17-13 and Cornell would have settled for that margin of defeat, but not the Navy team today. The third touchdown climaxed an 84-yard penetration with Ryan snagging a deflected Baysinger aerial late in the third period.

The Big Red pulled one out of the books for their third marker. Set back on their own three by a beaut of an out-of-bounds punt by Baysinger, they, too, disdained a punt. Dean, faking a kick, passed to Halfback Norm Dawson on first down and the latter sped 94 yards for the Big Red's last marker shortly before the period closed.

Early in the last period, the Sailors marched 79 yards for touchdown No. 4. Horne's 25-yard sprint and Hawkins' savage rushes brought them to the two from where Hawkins leaped over.

Six plays later the Navy made its final goal. This one stemmed from an intercepted pass, Roy Russell hailing in Dean's aerial on the Big Red's 29.

It took only five plays for Horne to climax the short push by sneaking over for the tally. Once again Wills scooted in and the sure-footed lads aim was true. He booted his fifth straight goal to make it 38 to 19. Only the timer's gun halted another Navy drive minutes later.

Raba Leads Hoyas to 12-0 Victory

Tulsans they weren't going anywhere in particular and they didn't.

The first indication that Georgetown was about to hand Tulsa its first defeat at home since 1944 came on the opening play of the second period.

Tommy Graham threw the ball over Tulsa's secondary and the long-legged Benigni caught it. That play covered 54 yards and wound up on Tulsa's 8.

The Hoyas did not score just then. Tulsa held them off on three ground plays. On the fourth down, Raba passed to Bill Dzugan from the 6.

Dzugan caught the ball only a step from the goal line. About all he had to do was fall over into the end zone. But he ran wide, and was knocked off his feet by Tulsa's Jim Ford a foot from the scoring line.

A few minutes later, Georgetown was back in almost the same spot, and this time they made good.

Desmond Intercepts Pass

Franny Desmond, floating back from his end position on pass defense, took Jimmy Finks' pass right out of the hands of Tulsa's Harold Stratton on Tulsa's 48-yard line.

Running as well as many backfield men, Desmond raced to Tulsa's 5.

Again Tulsa stiffened, but on fourth down and four, Raba picked out Benigni in the end zone and fired the ball to him for a touchdown.

Convincingly this trip, the Hoyas quickly went 58 yards for their second touchdown, completely taking the forward passing play away from the Tulsans.

Raba threw to Benigni on a spot pass down the sideline at the 29. He next picked out Kivus in back of Tulsa's defense and Kivus went over.

Hoyas Move to the Four

Midway in the final period, Georgetown was inside Tulsa's 10 for the fourth time. Brook Beyer set the Hoyas in motion by breaking off tackle 19 yards to Tulsa's 39. A Raba pass to Joe Sullivan, who made a brilliant shoestring catch and spirited running by Beyer and Louis Miller gave the Hoyas a first down on the four.

But on second down on the two, Dee Clements of the Tulsans intercepted Raba's next pass in the end zone and ran it out to the 12.

That was just about the contest except for a flurry of Tulsa passes in the last few minutes, mostly around midfield.

Uclans Whip Stanford, 39-6

Palo Alto, Calif., Oct. 18 (U.P.)—UCLA's massive forward wall tore an undermanned Stanford eleven to shreds today for an easy 39-to-6 victory and the second straight triumph in defense of the Pacific Coast championship.

An estimated 25,000 fans saw Coach Bert Labrucherie's stable of swift backfield aces, led by little Al Hoisch and veteran Cal Rossi, speed through the weak Indians almost at will to score in every period with punches-pulled passing and ground attack.

Stanford, tagged for its fourth straight defeat, failed to put up a battle until the final period when Quarterback Al Morris engineered a 40-yard drive that paid off with only one minute to play.

TARHEELS—From C-1

N. C. Shades W. & M., 13-7; Justice Errs

line left end (a Virginian) that was the mainspring. The toss was straight as a string down the middle to the five-yard line, where Joe Lex of Newport News caught him. Justice ran right end to the four then, with the W. and M. secondary pulled in tight for a line play, he threw the payoff pass.

Justice Errs

Pupa held as Joe Cox kicked the seventh point.

A combination of William and Mary vigor and Justice's rashness led to the hosts' score midway in the third period.

With Lex, a 175-pound speedster from Newport News and Jack Cloud, a 200-pounder from Norfolk, doing most of the carrying, William and Mary brought the second-half kickoff to their own 49-yard line.

Stanley Magdziak, a Passaic, N. J., Southerner, then arched a high punt which Justice took on the fly on the 4-yard line though it would certainly have bounded over. Knox Ramsey, a true Dixie denizon from Tennessee, knocked him down enthusiastically on the 5.

Lex in Clever Play

Justice's quick-kick on the first play carried to the Carolina 45, and John Bruce of Bloomfield, N. J., hot-footed with the ball to the 25. Then Lex stationed himself directly beside his own left end about 3 yards, the ball was snapped directly to him, and he outran Rubish, the Carolina right end, to the 15. Cloud then did the rest, mainly on plunges. One unusual play here, though, was a left-handed push pass over the Carolina line into the center of its square secondary defense, where Bob Steckroth of Hazeltown, Pa., bobbed by to catch it for a first down gain of 4 yards to the 3. Cloud hit the middle for the touchdown so hard he almost skidded out of the end zone, and Magdheiskie kick tied it up at 7-all. Lex held for the kick.

A few plays later William and Mary had another chance, due to a fumble by 170-pound Justice when Thomas Thompson, W and M's 215-pound center, hit him head on, and recovered on the Carolina 45.

Fumbles Prove Fatal

W and M returned the favor, though, with a Lex fumble which Mitten, Carolina guard, recovered on his 35. After three plays failed, Justice spiraled a punt out of bounds on the first hop at the 12.

This set up the winning score, for Lex fumbled two plays later and several Tarheels fell on the ball on the 20.

Then with Justice a constant threat to the outside, Pupa kept hitting off the tackles to get a first down on the 1-yard line. It took him two tries to smash over.

Cox's kick failed.

Justice Outshone

W and M drove back to Carolina's 26. The big play in this drive was a center-alley pass, Magdheiak to Ragazzo, good for 25 yards, who lateraled to Hoey for 10 more. North Carolina took over on downs.

William and Mary's stadium is without a time clock, so the crowd could only guess at the remaining time, and the game's end came as a surprise.

With due regard for Justice's ability and publicity, the most effective player on the field was Thompson, the W and M center, who once was at West Point. He and Ramsey for W and M, Powell and Smith, Carolina's 250-pound tackle, put on a real line duel.

Neither team showed anything unusual offensively except a triple reverse by Carolina with an end the ultimate carrier.

COLONIALS—From 1

Wake Forest Overpowers George Washington, 39 to 7 and the score was tied at 7-7 as Colonial rooters went wild.

O'Quinn Scores

But that was GW's last threatening move as Fetzer, taking advantage of the glaring weakness in the Colonial's defensive left halfback zone which had accounted for Wake Forest's first tally, really began to exploit this "Achilles heel."

With the ball on his own 45 following an exchange of punts, the Deacon passing whiz hurled a 45-yarder to O'Quinn who outran Hank Bartelloni for the ball and scored standing up.

Again in the third period, Fetzer standing on his 32, fired a 30-yard toss to Harry Dowda who carried the pigskin to the Colonial 22. George Pryor banged the ball over from the three after five plays.

At this point, GW supporters began to despair, and Fetzer wasn't through yet. From his 35 he pegged to Carl Haggard who wasn't brought down until he reached the Colonial nine. Haggard took the ball over from the seven on a reverse around his left end.

Gun Hails G.W. on 16

Wake Forest's reserves took advantage of an intercepted pass and a G. W. fumble for two more fourth-quarter scores. Mike Sprock bulled over from the one to climax a 31-yard drive and the same operator went over from the two after a Bill Gregus to Jim Duncan toss covered 25 yards to that spot.

The nearest the Colonials came to a score after their first-quarter touchdown was on the last play of the first half. Charlie Butler passed 30 yards to Close, but the gun went off as Close was nailed on the Wake Forest 10.

Bill Spangler, Colonial fullback, was named the Colonials most valuable player following the game. Spangler's magnificent punting, especially on quick kicks, removed George Washington from many a hole. But with Fetzer ramming passes into that defensive blind spot, Spangler might as well not have booted at all.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Even Wall Street Cheers

The wave of the moment is cheerful. Not only have fears of a recession abated, but so have fears of a rupture with Russia.

Former Prime Minister Churchill declares that even if Russia bolts the United Nations, it doesn't necessarily mean war. And former Secretary of State Byrnes, in his book, "Speaking Frankly," observes that being firm and patient with the Soviet rulers may make the peace. What's more, columnists have started writing about the receding tide of Russia in Europe. The theme seems to be that the reestablishment of the Comintern was a last grasp.

Livingston

At home, retail sales—which were none too robust during August—picked up with cold weather. And once again gains—though modest—were recorded over 1946. Department store executives, who were fearful about the prospect of a women's war against the see-how-much-you-can-get-on-a-body styles, relaxed. Wall Street, figuring that this assured good business through Christmas, put money on the line. On Wednesday, for example, 63 stocks made new highs on the New York Stock Exchange.

Manufacturers Outwait Stores

This is in decided contrast with spring. Easter business was something of a flop. Retailers expected a drop in prices. The Newburyport merchants proclaimed a 10%-off plan to stimulate business. And retailers demanded price cuts from manufacturers. But manufacturers said "No;" their wages were up, so were the prices of their raw materials.

Result: Department store buyers held off buying. They'd show these recalcitrant manufacturers. In five months inventories shrank 15% (see chart). As a result—with Christmas only two months away and fall business on the rise—some frantic calls for merchandise have been put in. Manufacturing employment, which in soft goods lines was limp during the summer, has now perked up.

Christmas sales this year will certainly establish another all-time high in dollars. Weekly wages are up 10%. Total consumer income is up about the same amount. Veterans still have about half of their terminal-leave bonds left. The end of Regulation W paves the way to lenient installment credit terms, which will spur sales of electric appliances and home furnishings, if they need any spurring. And the new styles will prompt many women to enlarge wardrobes.

Merchants End Reconversion

This Christmas marks the end of postwar reconversion for merchants. Last Christmas, goods were still short, stores were still buying substandard toys and gimcracks to fill their shelves. Often buyers balked, and special sales were staged during the Christmas rush. This year there's likely to be none of that. Materials are freer and toy manufacturers have had a year in which to improve quality. Stores will be better stocked. Presumably consumers will have a wider range of goods to choose from. So, competition for the sales dollar will be keener.

The rise in food prices apparently has not had any significant effect on department store volume. No doubt, lower-income families have cut down purchases of clothing and other deferrables as a larger proportion of the weekly pay envelope went on the table. Among the higher-income families, however, the effect has been to cut down the amount saved per week. This is borne out by continuing Federal Reserve Board studies of what consumers are doing with their money.

Wall Street Dilemma

Two trends are going on at once in Wall Street. Stocks are rallying, but the bond market and preferred shares are weak. However, that's understandable. Holders of fixed-interest and fixed-dividend securities may have tired of seeing their purchasing power spirited away by higher prices, by inflation. So maybe they're doing a bit of switching to common shares. [illegible] common stocks return 4% to 5% these days, as against [illegible] than 3% on top-grade corporation bonds. In 1929 just the reverse was true.

The upturn in stock prices contrasts with what happened 13 months ago. Last September stocks broke badly, generated a feeling of industrial misconfidence and undoubtedly had much to do with the rash of pessimistic business forecasts. Question: If the market pushes to new highs, will it result in wild bullishness, industrial overconfidence, and perhaps speculation? All leading to a fall?

There's another factor influencing the bond market. Money is a bit tighter. Corporations have been borrowing from banks at an all-time record rate; also they've been getting loans direct from insurance companies. Only last week R. J. Reynolds & Co. got a 30-million-dollar additional credit from the Equitable Life Assurance Society. And Sharp & Dohme borrowed eight million dollars from the Penn Mutual Life and New York Life. So banks and insurance companies are not going into the open market to buy bonds.

Will Reins Be Pulled?

This could be an important tip-off. It's hard to say. Whenever interest rates start rising, whenever banks begin worrying about whether they have sufficient reserves to make loans, then a slight halter is put on business. It gets harder to raise money to expand. That could well be a check against continued increase in corporation inventories; and, in time, it could lead to de-stocking—to paying off loans—and perhaps to a commodity price drop. So, keep your eye on the money market as well as the stock market.

Home Loan Bank Advances Hit Peak

Outstanding advances of the district Federal Home Loan Banks to their member savings and loan associations and other home finance institutions now stand at more than 345 million dollars, a record peak, Harold Lee, governor of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, reported yesterday.

The total compares with 235 million dollars on September 30, 1946, and a wartime and postwar low of 51 million dollars in May 1945, in a period of little requirement for reserve credit because of the high flow of savings into local institutions and rstrictions on building during the war.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 18 (AP).—More dry weather in the Southwest and a forecast for no rain over the weekend caused aggressive buying of wheat contracts representing the 1948 crop on the Board of Trade today. Other wheat deliveries were firm.

Corn scored fractional gains in a light trade. Oats were slightly stronger than the yellow cereal although there were no reports of Government oats buying. Soybeans spurted the 8c limit for the second straight day in a "thin" market.

Wheat closed 1½ to 2¼ higher, December 3.00@3.00¼; corn was ½ to ¾ higher, December 2.32¼@2.32½, and oats were ¼ to 1¼ higher, December 1.20@1.19½. November soybeans closed at 3.39¼.

Food Machinery Holders to Vote On Stock Dividend

San Jose, Calif., Oct. 18 (AP).—Directors of Food Machinery Corp. today called a special meeting of stockholders December 22 to approve a proposal to declare, in effect, a 100 per cent dividend on common shares.

The proposal is to increase authorized cumulative preferred stock of $100 par value from 70,000 shares to 100,000 and of common stock of $10 par from 1,500,000 shares to three million and to distribute to common share holders of record December 22 a total of 668,810 shares of common on the basis of one share for each share then outstanding.

Directors said they do not plan further issuance of either stock.

5 Va. Clinics On Inebriety Recommended

Richmond, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Virginia Advisory Legislative Council today recommended establishment of clinics in various sections of the State to work in conjunction with an institution or farm for the treatment of alcoholics.

The council termed the extent of inebriety in Virginia "shocking" and added that "there are substantially no effective methods being taken for the prevention or control of inebriety and excessive drinking."

"Unfortunately," the council added, "society has adopted a rather 'do-nothing' attitude toward this very serious problem with which we are faced in the Commonwealth. At the present time, inebriates are committed to the altogether inadequate facilities at Staunton.

Mere Sobering-Up Station

"In practice," this merely amounts to a sobering-up station for these unfortunates."

The council pointed out that this was not intended as criticism of the management of the Staunton Hospital, but "only another commentary on the tremendous deficiency in funds available for the operation of such institutions."

The council was authorized by the extra session of the General Assembly early this year to study and report on inebriety in Virginia. It was to report on whether a separate institution or institutions should be established for the rehabilitation of inebriates.

The study was assigned to State Senator J. Hoge Tyler, 3d, of Norfolk, and later a committee was formed including Garland Gray of Waverly, William P. Ames, Arlington, Dr. Joseph E. Barrett, State Commissioner of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals, and F. W. Gwaltney.

5 Clinics Recommended

Five clinics were recommended —in the Tidewater area, in the Richmond area, one in northern Virginia, one in the Charlottesville-Staunton area and one in the southwest portion of the State.

A recommendation was made that the General Assembly consider the appropriation of funds to rehabilitate Petersburg State Colony to be used as an industrial farm or institution for the care of inebriates at such time as the State Colony moves to its new location east of Richmond.

Handyman Jailed For Slaying Rival

Elkton, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—A 12-year prison sentence was imposed today on Frank Weglarz, 29-year-old, one-armed handyman convicted of second-degree murder last months in the slaying of a rival for the affections of his common-law wife.

Mrs. Dorothy Colbourn, 22-year-old waitress from Stanton, Del., pleaded guilty at the same time to a charge of giving perjured testimony in the case and was given a one-year reformatory sentence, which was suspended on the condition she leave Maryland and never return.

Weglarz was convicted of shooting Leon Kist, 22-year-old war veteran to whose home Mrs. Colbourn had gone after a quarrel with Weglarz. She testified she had lived with Weglarz a year. Judge Floyd J. Kintner of the Second Judicial Circuit imposed the sentences.

Setter Owned by 2 D. C. Men Wins Shooting Dog Stakes

The owner team of Ringgold Hart and Frank Symanoskie won the Thomas P. Baldwin Memorial Trophy in the shootng dog stakes of the National Capital Field Trial Club for the fourth time yesterday with their setter entry, Hart's Frank.

It was also the second victory for Hart's Frank in the 15 trials since the sterling silver punch bowl was placed in competition in 1940.

The contest was the feature of the closing day of the club's thirty-fifth annuel field trials held on the Burhartford farm near Poolesville, Md.

Hart and Symanoskie are both Washingtonians, the former living at 662 Maryland ave. ne., and the latter at 701 D st. ne.

Second place in the stakes went to Mickey, a setter owned by W. F. Burrows, Bethesda. Wahoo's Buddy, a pointer owned by John H. Stadtler, 4131 Yuma st. nw., was third.

The National Capital Kennel Club will hold a dog show at 10 a. m. today at Meadowbrook on East-West hwy., between Silver Spring and Bethesda. An entry list of 572 dogs is expected.

2 Fliers Die In Air Crash At Glen Burnie

Glen Burnie, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—A veteran B-29 Superfort pilot, sitting helplessly as a passenger in the rear cockpit, and a private pilot rode to their deaths today in the crash of a primary trainer plane.

George A. Thalberg, 25, who piloted giant B-29 bombers for the Army Air Forces, was killed instantly when a PT-19 trainer spun to the ground on a takeoff, said Robert E. Whipp, manager of the Glen Burnie airport.

Paul Dahns, 23, a private pilot at the controls, died on the way to a hospital.

Dual controls, with which trainer planes are generally equipped for student training, had been removed, Whipp said, and Thalberg sat in the rear seat unable to help pull the plane out of a full-power spin.

Whipp said Dahns climbed to 200 feet over the runway here, turned to the left, climbed to 500 feet, "went into a steep right climbing turn, and spun off to the left."

The plane crashed "with full-power on" into a back yard about a mile from the airport, Whipp said.

Thalberg of Curtis Bay, Md., and Dahns of Baltimore were both employed as aircraft mechahics.

Meanwhile two other pilots escaped today when two P-47 Thunderbolts crashed over Tolchester, Md., in a 12-plane training formation of the 104th Fighter Squadron, Maryland National Guard.

First Lieut. Charles F. Schaefer of Baltimore bailed out at 9000 feet and landed in a wooded area uninjured, said Maj. E. C. MacCubbin, deputy commander of the squadron.

Second Lieut. John H. Stienmetz of Baltimore brought his fighter plane back to the guard base at the Municipal Airport and landed without incident.

Major MacCubbin said Schaefer momentarily lost sight of Stienmetz's plane in the late afternoon sun and the latter's propeller cut through the tail section of Schaefer's plane.

Beetles Damage Soy, Snap Bean Plantings

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Soy and snap bean plantings in the Norfolk area suffered considerable damage last month from an unusually heavy outbreak of bean leaf beetles, the Virginia Truck Experiment Station reported.

Entomologist Lauren D. Anderson said the beetles, smaller than the spotted cucumber beetle, but similar in appearance, caused losses in fields where insecticides were not used. Recommended control agent is 25 pounds of a 5 per cent DDT dust or 40 pounds of a 3 per cent dust per acre, Anderson said.

Crisis Arises In Maryland On Sick Care

Baltimore, Oct. 18 (AP).—The State of Maryland is facing a dilemma over care of its sick.

Already confronted with overcrowded facilities while new hospitals are being built, the State has been notified by two private institutions that they are finding State-supported patients a burden.

Johns Hopkins Hospital officials here have informed the Governor they would soon ask both the State and the city to increase appropriations for indigent patients. Otherwise, the hospital will have to give up caring for them at a loss, they said.

The Seton Institute has bluntly told the State and Baltimore they will have to get 96 patients out of the institution by October 31. William L. Galvin, attorney for the institute, said it also was losing money on the charity cases, but that was not the reason for asking their removal.

Galvin reported the institute merely feels that public assistance cases should be cared for in public institutions.

Dr. George H. Preston, State health commissioner, readily admitted that "we don't know what to do" about the 96 patients. He said the State Board of Mental Hygiene was working on the problem.

Governor Lane said he was awaiting the outcome of the board's study before considering action.

Flash Flood Hits Galax, Va.; Seven Houses Wrecked

Galax, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Seven houses were washed away and 150 families were forced from their homes early today as a flash flood tore down narrow Chestnut Creek into this southwest Virginia town, causing damage estimated by Mayor Ross C. Penrey at from two to three million dollars.

No casualties were reported. The flood knocked out the town's pumping system and by early afternoon the 3000 residents were without drinking water.

The flood swept up costly lumber from the yards of furniture factories that line one bank of the creek. Some observers disagreed with the mayor's estimate, placing the damage at nearer the million-dollar mark.

The Norfolk & Western Railway canceled service between Galax and nearby Pulaski and sent emergency crews into the flooded area to repair damaged rails and weakened bridges. Red Cross workers moved in early in the day and set up headquarters to care for the homeless, and volunteer squads began the job of clearing the streets.

The water receded rapidly, and by mid-morning it was back in its banks.

Va. Launches Research in Farm Housing

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—A program has been launched at Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station that specialists hope will fill the gap caused by an almost total lack of past research on farm housing.

Agricultural Engineer P. B. Potter, pointing out that improved farm housing is considered one of the greatest of present rural needs, said the program under way here would include research in design, construction, methods, and materials.

Researchers will tackle such basic home problems as wet basements, simpler heating systems, and the need for simple, built-in equipment.

Remarking that surveys have shown about 70 per cent of farm homes were constructed without architects' plans, Potter said the program's first objective would be production of designs that are efficient, labor-saving, economical, and attractive.

An attempt will be made to achieve low-cost building largely through cost-reducing construction wrinkles rather than by cheapening materials costs, he stated. He said indications were that farmers must continue to a great extent to be their own builders.

Only 1 Consumer Attends Hearing On Milk Increase

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Only one consumer, a Fredericksburg businessman, appeared before the Virginia Milk Commission here today to oppose an increase in retail prices of milk requested by more than 30 dairy farmers in this area.

In a two and a half hour hearing in City Hall, O. Marvin Hester, an accountant, repeatedly questioned the necessity for the requested increase. Answering a dairyman who had likened the farmer to the "goose that laid the golden egg," Hester declared: "Maybe the public is a goose, too. Please don't cut him open for another two cents."

Commission Chairman Tipton Snavely read a petition by 31 dairy farmers asking the price increase because "the present price is insufficient to insure a fair and reasonable return."

Several farmers presented evidence the boost is necessitated by higher costs of feed, labor and herd replacements. Some 35 persons, predominantly dairymen, attended the hearing.

Three Would Build In Md. Waters

Baltimore, Oct. 18 (AP).—The Baltimore engineers of the Army Department today announced receipt of three applications to permit construction in Maryland waters.

The Hartge Yacht Yard, Inc., of Galesville asked a permit to construct additional boat slips in West River at White Stake Point in Anne Arundel County. The engineers will receive objections until October 25.

Crockett Brothers of Oxford wants approval for a bulkhead and dredging operations in Town Creek in Talbot County. The Sassafras Boat Co., Inc., of Georgetown proposes to construct an addition to an existing wharf and to install mooring piles in Sassafras River at Fredericktown in Cecil County. Objections to these two plans must be received by October 27.

Cats to Have Week November 2 to 8

The American Feline Society, Inc., which loves cats and wants everyone else to do the same, has proclaimed November 2-8 as National Cat Week.

In a release to newspapers, President Robert Lothar Kendell said "cat lovers everywhere are urged to join the society to further this great humanitarian task."

The society's membership has spread into 39 States, Canada, Costa Rica and Switzerland, Kendell said.

Boys Club Drive May Be Extended

With only $5000 of the $10,000 goal realized, the Trinidad Boys Club may extend its fund drive beyond the scheduled closing date of November 1, Fred E. Nalley, jr., executive director of the club, said yesterday.

Nalley said $10,000 is needed to finance the club's activities because its membership has doubled since last year and is now 300. Grownups will be made honorary members of the club with contributions of $1 or more. The club is at 1119 Wylie st. ne.

Still Fighting Talk

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 18.—The name of a Northern general is still fighting talk in this area. A group of residents recently petitioned to have the name of Port Republic rd. changed, and suggested "Sheridan" as a substitute. Members of the town council didn't care for the suggestion. They told the residents to choose from the names "Hilcrest," "Summit" or "Sherwood."

P-TA Elects Attorney

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 18.—Albert F. Anderson, Leesburg attorney, has been elected vice president of the Loudoun County Parent-Teacher Association. Anderson will serve the unexpired term of Mrs. N. B. Hawthorne, resigned. Mrs. Harry Sommers, Paeonian Springs, is president of the organization.

Campus Fund Goal $3000

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 18.—The annual Campus Chest Drive at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia here opens Wednesday for one week. A goal of $3000 has been set for the consolidated campaign for all funds except for the Red Cross.

Children's Show To Be Television Station Feature

A television show designed especially for children will be launched at 5 p. m. Wednesday over Station WNBW.

Marionette shows, charades, riddles, games and handicraft lessons will be featured on the new "Playtime" series, to be prepared by the Junior League of Washington.

"Popit," described as "the personification of a child's imagination," will work with her friend, "The Guessing Girl," in trying to keep the young ones amused.

Mormons Open Va. Mission

Newport News, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Creation of a new mission on the Eastern Seaboard of the United States for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormons) with headquarters in Roanoke, has been announced by George Albert Smith, president of the Salt Lake City Church, the first presidency.

The new mission will include Virginia and North Carolina, with the exception of that portion of the Old Dominion which is located in the Washington (D. C.) stake and will be created by a division of the present East Central States mission.

West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee remain in the East Central States mission and the new division will be known as the Central Atlantic States mission. Creation of the new mission will be under the direction of Elders Albert E. Bowen and Henry D. Moyle of the Council of the Twelve, who will arrive in Roanoke Tuesday.

Also announced by the First Presidency is the appointment of J. Robert Price, president of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Stake to head the new mission.

9 D.C. Pastors to Preach at G. W. U.

Nine District pastors will preach at George Washington University weekly chapel services Thursdays from 12:10 to 12:30 p. m. at Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H st. nw.

Dr. Lawrence D. Folkemer, director of the university's religious activities, spoke last Thursday at the services, sponsored by a student committee.

Scheduled to speak this fall and winter are the Revs. John W. Rustin, Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; Edward L. Elson, National Presbyterian Church; Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Reformation Lutheran Church; Charles Stewart McKenzie, Western Presbyterian Church; Edward Hughes Pruden, First Baptist Church; J. Warren Hastings, National City Christian Church; Seth R. Brooks, Universalist National Memorial Church; Clarence W. Cranford, Calvary Baptist Church, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Food Saving May End Easy Party Pickings For Hungry Hordes

By Marie McNair

FOOD for free is going to be scarce this winter.

If other hostesses follow the example set by Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, habitual partygoers will no longer be able to keep their own grocery bills down by gorging at lavish buffets.

For years it's been a local disgrace at receptions and cocktail parties the way hungry hordes pick ham and turkey bones clean; mop up plates of salads, go back for second servings of ice cream.

Indications are, the picture will be different now.

Entertaining of course, will go on. In official circles, it's an obligation. But already, at most formal dinner parties, the menu has been cut down to three courses and is worked over first with the view to conservation of scarce foods.

Clever Helle Bonnet has set up her own stern program at the embassy. "No more big parties this winter," she says. "The one for M. Bidault, our Foreign Minister, was the last."

NO Appetizers at French Embassy

NOW, guests invited for dinner at the French Embassy, will get cocktails first, but NO appetizers with them. "Appetizers are silly," says Mme. Bonnet, "because you sit down to dinner almost immediately anyway."

There will be a soup course, one entree and dessert which will often be a fruit salad. If for variation, a sweeter dish is prepared, it will utilize those foods which would not be shipped abroad.

And here's a tip, ladies, for a delicious dessert which Mme. Bonnet makes herself with chestnuts.

Boil them in milk until soft, put through a sieve, work with butter until creamy, then add sugar and vanilla, to taste. Line a mold, fill center with whipped cream and top with chocolate icing.

When the Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet are dining alone they subscribe to a program of five meatless days a week, including Tuesdays and Thursdays. For cocktail parties there will be champagne from France, thereby sending dollars to France, and the hors d'oeuvers will consist of nuts, olives and thinly sliced pumpernickel bread which contains no wheat flour.

White House Sets Example

YES, President and Mrs. Truman's decision to omit the state dinners from the program of official entertaining at the White House is definitely having its effect on the social picture for the coming season.

There will be no large parties at the British Embassy this winter and whatever is done, says Lady Inverchapel, will be most informal with the simplest of food. The austerity program has been in effect at the embassy for months and the White House program is being scrupulously followed.

Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General, says what entertaining she does will be small and simple. Mrs. J. William Fulbright, wife of the Senator from Arkansas, believes that everybody will cooperate. Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, wife of the General of the Army and Chief of Staff, plans to substitute slivers of raw vegetables for stuffed eggs and the usual cocktail canapes, when she entertains, which she says won't be often now.

The Fulbrights eat fish on Tuesday and Friday, serve chicken during the middle of the week. With two growing girls in the family, Elizabeth Fulbright believes and rightly, too, that they require a certain amount of red meat in their diet.

So-o-o now and then there's a roast to grace the family board.

Hunt Season Begins

THE huntsman's horn sounded promptly at 10:30 yesterday morning down at Spring Glade Farm, Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith's country place near Vienna, Va., as the Fairfax Hunt opened for the season.

Washington friends of the Smiths were on hand to see the hunt get off and to stay for the buffet breakfast which followed.

As the huntsmen and hounds assembled stirrup cups were served from a buffet under a great oak tree, demijohns were lifted up to those in the field.

The Madeira School girls who rode were fortified from their special buffet with cokes and doughnuts.

Afterward, the hunters trooped off for a hunt breakfast at the home of Col. and Mrs. Henry T. Elgin.

TOWN TOPICS

Mrs. Robert Dunlap's house was one of the few remaining private residences on that once fashionable block of K st. between Connecticut ave. and 18th st.

Now Mrs. Dunlap has bowed to the march of progress, sold the home where she lived for so many years and before November 15 will move to 3102 Q st., a modern house in old Georgetown which she's owned for several years but never occupied. It looks out over Tudor pl. from the front and over neighbors' expansive gardens in the rear.

Bullitt's Walls Are Bulging With Murphys

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

FORMER Ambassador Bill Bullitt is back from China where he had a look-see for Henry Luce. Last week's Life featured the Bullitt journalistic stint. Meanwhile, the former Ambassador's house has been bursting seams. Guests include the Bob Murphys and daughter Catherine, straight from Berlin, and Frankfurt's Aladdin, Carmel Offie. Bob Murphy, who made headlines during our North African campaign, is United States Political Adviser in Berlin; Offie is his Man Friday.

Two of the three Murphy daughters stuck to their Berlin jobs: Mildred works on the Stars and Stripes. Rosemary, who's a talented amateur actress, runs a series of Army Post Exchange beauty shops.

Carmel Offie, who is unimaginatively listed as "Foreign Service Officer attached to the Office of the United States Political Adviser on German Affairs," is really a combination Brain Truster and Grover Whalen of Frankfurt. All interesting V.I.P.s passing through Frankfurt tuck in at Carmel's.

Powerful V. I. P.'s (Very Important People, in military parlance) return hospitality with edibles—langouste, say, from France or a spot of Black Sea caviar to add allip to the Army commissary cuisine.

Wartimes, Offie was courted assiduously. As Deputy Political Adviser to Ambassador Alec Kirk in Italy, he was the character who had planes, jeeps and hotel suites at finger tip, who sheared red tape with joyful abandon. In pre-war days, as Foreign Service Officer, he acted as private secretary to Bill Bullitt in Moscow and Paris. Short, dark, voluable, he has run fast—is still a bachelor. Recently, Offie sold his Georgetown house. Friends are wondering where he'll park the heterogenous knick-knacks he picked up jaunting through darkest Europe. Incidentally, the male Bullitt guests will be off to London tomorrow.

SPEAKING of Henry Luce (Life, Time, Fortune boss) he's struggling with a fascinating literary experiment. Whether the opus, when and if completed, will be exposed to the myriad Luce readers, is moot.

Eichelbergers To Be Honored At Dinner Party

By Bessie Hackett

WHEN Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold entertain at dinner at their War College quarters Wednesday night, guests of honor will be that tough soldier from the Pacific, rugged Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger and his tall, gracious wife, "Miss Em."

Here for conferences of the selection board for generals, the famous commanding general of the Eighth Army and Mrs. Eichelberger arrived from Tokyo about 10 days ago and have been staying at Fort Myer. On her first return to this country in more than a year, attractive Mrs. Eichelberger is having a grand time "reunioning" with friends and relatives, already has been down to Asheville, N. C., to say hello to the family.

General Arnold, who commanded the fabulous Americal Division, served under General Eichelberger, and other old friends and wartime buddies will be among the guests.

Incidentally, that sailboat which reposed in the Arnold's back yard during the past few days has been launched and will be skimming over the Anacostia River this weekend. Bought in Chicago this summer by young Howard Arnold following several sailing victories, it arrived here by freight the other day but its rightful owner, freshly enrolled at Cornell, is trying his

Irish Leader and U. N. Delegate Are Entertained on Visits Here

By Elizabeth Maguire

ENTERTAINING among diplomats this week will be on the quiet side, in a lull before the season really gets under way. Several distinguished visitors in town are being feted at small gatherings, and inevitable farewells are being said to a few.

F. H. Boland of Dublin, Ireland, secretary of the Department of External Affairs, is here for discussions of the Marshall Plan, and Olafur Thors, former Prime Minister of Iceland, and Mme. Thors are also in town, visiting the former's brother and sister-in-law, the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thor Thors. The two brothers are delegates to U. N.

One of the leading families in Iceland, the name of Thors is outstanding in business and diplomacy in that northern country. The Minister's father, Thors Jensen, was a Dane who became top businessman in Iceland's prime industry of fishing. The Minister's mother was Icelandic from way back, tracing her ancestry to the Vikings who settled Iceland in 874. The daughter of his brother Olafur is married to Peter Benediktsson, present Icelandic Minister to Paris and Moscow.

Yesterday Mme. Thors was hostess at a cocktail party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Olafur Thors.

THE cocktail party given by the Indian Ambassador and Mme. Ali yesterday afternoon was attended by the Pakistan Charge d'Affaires and Mrs. Baig. Other guests, from the Department of State, the Library of Congress and the United States Office of Education, included Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, former United States Ambassador to India, George Merrill, and his daughter, Miss Ruth Merrill, and Sir John and Lady Balfour of the British Embassy.

About 150 guests in all attended the fete. Many met the Ambassadress for the first time. Her costume was a simple cotton sari, which she wore with no jewelry.

A VISITOR at the Danish Embassy is the Danish Foreign Minister, Gustav Rasmussen. He will be in town today and tomorrow, as the house guest of the Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffman. There will be a small tea in his honor tomorrow afternoon attended by embassy staff members, and in the evening the Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffman will entertain for him at a dinner.

November 7 is the date the Russian Embassy will celebrate the October revolutions. The Ambassador, Nikolai V. Novikov, may return from Moscow in time to attend the party.

Your Questions on Homemaking

1. How can I remove some frozen chocolate custard from a green rayon jersey dress without removing the color?

2. I plan giving a kitchen shower for a friend who is being married in October. Will you please give me some ideas for entertainment and refreshments at the shower? D. P. L.

1. Sponge the spot with carbon tetrachloride to remove greasy part of stain. Dry thoroughly, then sponge with warm water and dust with pepsin powder. Work powder into cloth, let stand 30 minutes or longer, then sponge with water.

2. Since the shower centers around the gifts, some interesting way should be arranged to present them and also add to the evening's entertainment. Perhaps this will give you a starting point. As the guests arrive, give each a small green umbrella tied with ribbon having a numbered tag. The bride-to-be is seated and given a white umbrella with handle tied with ribbon and streamers. Attached to the streamers are as many numbered tags as there are guests. The honor guest is told to call any number she chooses. The guest whose number is called, goes forward with her wrapped gift. She assumes the attitude of a salesman, entering the door and describes her gift without mentioning it's name. She must extol its charms, dwell on its usefulness, its beauty and bring in the slogan used to advertise it. Presently she pauses to say "If you will name the article, Madam, it's yours." The salesman must continue his sales talk until the article is "sold."

During the evening, one of the ways to entertain the guests might be to have each woman embroider her name in the corner of a dish towel and give to the guest of honor. These can be already cut and the guests spend the evening hemming them. So that the names be in each guest's handwriting, write them on in pencil before embroidering them.

Another entertainment is the making of a bridal scrapbook. Pictures pertaining to each title may be cut from magazines and put in a large envelope. The girls select the picture most appropriate and paste it on the scrap book page which has been provided. Suggested titles might include: his childhood, her childhood, the courtship, the engagement, etc.

For evening refreshments, you could serve assorted sandwiches and a molded salad topping it off with a bridal cake and coffee or tea. Or, instead of sandwiches, hot biscuits with sliced ham filling. Make the biscuits in advance and bake them just before serving.

Please tell me the proper procedure for laying a fire in an indoor fireplace so that one can just strike a match to it in the evening—if that is possible. J. T. C.

To lay a fire, first place crumpled newspapers on the floor of the fireplace. Onto this pile some kindling—pine wood is best. Arrange the kindling in a cone shape on top of the paper. Heavier logs should not be placed on the fire until this kindling has become well-ignited. In the evening, light the paper, and when it has burned and the kindling is burning well, lay on the logs, smaller ones first.

I spilled a little nail polish on a tablecloth and would appreciate your telling me how to remove it. I tried to remove it immediately with nail polish remover but it didn't work. B. S.

Wet stain well with carbon tetrachloride and apply a drop of banana oil. Brush lightly with soft cloth, using an upward motion to pick up dissolved polish. For heavy stains use drycleaning soap with the banana oil. To remove any color remaining after the polish itself has been dissolved, apply a household bleach.

Could you help me to find some odd pieces of flat silver in my pattern? So far I can find nothing but two orange spoons in the shops. The pattern in Rogers, Lunt and Barton's Early American sterling. I particularly need dinner knives and teaspoons. I'd like to buy them or trade for dessert spoons or other pieces in different patterns. D. S. M.

Why don't you take one of the pieces to the Swap Shop, 1669 Wisconsin ave? There you may be able to get some to match it, or make a trade for others you can use. Or do any of our readers have some to dispose of?

A quick rinse in a dye bath is all that's needed to give a smart dark shade to your faded summer hose, now that a manufacturer has come out with four fall colors in stocking dye for use at home. Even mismated hose can be restored to a life of usefulness and beauty by stripping color from two of them with dye remover, then redying in the same new, dark colors.

Market Memo

By Lucia Brown

HERE'S cheerful news! There will be no lack of such goodies as nuts, preserves and dried fruits for the holidays this year, in spite of the tight food situation.

Mixed nuts will be plentiful . . . with large crops of walnuts, almonds and filberts in the Far West . . . a big crop of seedling pecans in Texas and Oklahoma . . . and plenty of Brazil nuts imported. Paper-shell pecans from Georgia are about the only ones that will be scarcer this year.

As to sweet treats, an increase of nearly 50 per cent in the making of jams, jellies and preserves by commercial companies has been reported. Most abundant will be cherry preserves, apple and grape butters and jellies, and products made from peaches, plums, apricots and citrus fruits.

There'll be lots of dried fruit for Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas cooking . . . prunes, peaches, apples and raisins. Prices are better than last year on most of them.

Baby makes three in many of the veteran prefabricated houses on American University's campus where "student-dads" lend a hand to child care-taking, between classes. Above, in a neighborhood group are Stanley E. McCallister, Mrs. Donald Hillock, Mrs. Adrian McDonough and Marvin Jernberg, with youngsters, Gail Ann Hillock, Carol and Gayle McDonough and Betty McCallister

Known as the "Tomboy of the Maryland U. campus", when a graduating student there last year, Jacqueline Richards is now an instructor in physical education

Search for Knowledge Grows Keener

By Marjorie Binford Woods

THE days of "snap" college courses are over.

Today's students who are lucky enough to get a foot in the doorway of crowded classrooms can't wheedle an "A"—from teacher with an apple, nor do any of them expect to be pampered for their perspicacity.

"It's survival of the fittest—and after working hard even to gain admittance into these teeming halls of learning, we know we'll have to work harder to stay put." That's the consensus of the modern masses who are burning the midnight oil over study tables at local universities, where competition for education runs high.

Though there's a tendency on many a campus to place the responsibility for the universal congestion of colleges on the broad shoulders of the G. I.'s, university authorities say it's not so. Mass education had become an almost unmanageable giant before the war, they explain—so it can't all be blamed on the G. I. Bill of Rights.

The former serviceman's maturity of mind and purpose, however, has caused a sharp rise in scholastic levels, all agree.

"Why, we fresh-out-of-high-school coeds are having to compete with grown men in some of our classes——but we're showing them that we we can do it," expostulated an eager-eyed freshman.

Praise for Veterans

AT AMERICAN UNVERSITY there was high praise for the hundreds of World War II veterans who jam its halls.

"I don't know how they do it, but many of the vets have daytime jobs, go to school at night—and those who are married help with the housework, do baby-sitting while they study and still make topnotch grades," vouched a young nonveteran who admits he has to hump to keep up with such competition.

"We have too much at stake not to make good in school," explains former G. I. Stanley E. McCallister, a senior in business administration who hopes to make international commerce his profession after graduation. "Also, don't forget that in many cases, our wives are helping to carry the load and keeping us bucked up," he pointed out.

With "baby making three," the McCallisters live on-campus in a handkerchief-sized, one-bedroom prefabricated house where Daddy acts as chief cook, bottle washer and nurse to 8-month-old Betty, while Mrs. McCallister works during the day.

"It makes for dishwater hands, but it's a good arrangement since my classes are all at night, and my wife enjoys her Government job," he explained.

Helpful neighbors in Prefabricated Row tend the baby when he goes marketing in the family jeep. Stanley studies while his offspring sleeps or takes her daily sunning.

Campus Nursery

"THERE are so many children on the campus that we mothers have started a small nursery school and take turns supervising," Mrs. Adrian McDonough, wife of a former G. I. and mother of two youngsters, said as she pointed out the playground adjacent to the row of cottage homes.

Rents vary from $25 to $40 a month for campus housing at American University, where there are 48 prefabricated units and eight Quonset huts. An average of 25 per cent of a family's income is charged as rental for these diminutive living quarters and veterans approve the fairness of the computing methods.

New this fall in the university's College of Arts and Sciences are specialized courses in television, radio, broadcasting and music, to which students are flocking by the hundreds.

'We're quite excited over the establishment of our new radio station, WAMC, which has been accepted as a trial member of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System," announced former Seabee Bill Aikin, who will act as news editor of the station, scheduled to go on the air for the first time on November 17.

Talent scouts already have lined up more than 130 students qualified to participate in broadcast work, stated former GI Ralph Wiener, WAMC manager, who served in the Signal Corps during the war.

At present many interested hands are pitching in to help renovate and redecorate the tiny building which will house the radio station in American University's Art Center.

104 Families at Maryland

AT MARYLAND University, where student enrollment is running well over 11,000 as compared to 8800 last year, former GI's number around 6500. Approximately 40 per cent of the veterans are married and there are 104 families occupying housing units on the campus.

The vets as a whole rate high with Maryland University instructors and nonveteran students alike.

"Their interests extend beyond the classroom and obviously they do not work for grades alone," declares Dr. Peter P. Legins, sociology professor, who has found GIs especially alert to juvenile delinquency problems of today.

"Former GIs make more interesting dates because they've been around and have wider interests than the average Joe College," remarks a senior at the Kappa Alpha Theta House.

"In spite of all I've read about the boys who have been to war being misfits as college students, I haven't found it true here," declares Shirley Rouse, a sociology student. "If there are any frustrated vets in school today they're certainly not on Maryland's campus."

Building Paces Enrollment

CONSTRUCTION work is at a high pitch at Maryland U. The school attempts to keep pace with its growing enrollment, President H. C. Byrd points out, and ground is about to be broken for a new barracks which will be erected this year. The new College of Agriculture building is nearing completion, as is the long recreation building which will provide club rooms and a snack bar for between-class "loafers." A spectacular wind tunnel also will soon be christened for use as part of the Glenn L. Martin College of Engineering.

Automobile traffic is heavy on the winding campus trails out Maryland way as commuting students travel to and from classes.

Miss Rachel Benton, director of women's physical education, counts among her best students several veterans "on the distaff side" who are training to be athletic teachers in high schools and colleges.

"Just like the men veterans, they are a bit more serious minded and eager about their work than the nonveterans, but they still have plenty of fun," she adds.

Practising for a hockey match are Maryland University students Mary Grove, Ruth Malburg, Jane Zinck and Imogene Robinson. All are training to be future high school teachers

Guests at the Willard Hotel include Lieut. Col. L. A. Herrington, Albrook Field, Canal Zone; Miss Sally Gaines, Ancon, Canal Zone; Dr. Ramon Fournier of San Juan, Puerto Rico; Rufino D. Antonio of the Philippine Embassy, Manila. Members of the RAF delegation from London at the hotel include E. G. Jones; A. D. Mitchell, J. M. McNeill, D. F. W. Atcherler, H. Burton, P. Louis, N. S. Allinson and G. W. Lathbury.

Rebecca Davidson Is Married

In a simple home ceremony yesterday, Miss Rebecca Davidson, daughter of Mrs. John C. Davidson and the late Mr. Davidson became the bride of B. Franklin Vaughan of Providence, R. I., and New York, son of the late Mrs. Herbert A. Wheeler of Detroit and the late Benjamin R. Vaughan of Providence.

The Rev. William F. Bruening read the service at 4:30 and a small reception for the family and close friends followed.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John H. Davidson. She wore a beige crepe frock with brown accessories and a shoulder spray of brown orchids. Mrs. Sidney Thomas, her sister's matron of honor and only attendant, was in green crepe with brown accessories and a corsage of green orchids. Mrs. Davidson, the bride's mother wore a gray crepe gown with black accessories and a purple orchid.

Benjamin F. Vaughan, jr., was best man for his father.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan will make their home in Georgetown.

The bride attended Gunston Hall School and Garrison Forest, Garrison, Md. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Vaughan was graduated from Pomfret School, Pomfret, Conn., and from Moses Brown School in Providence. He served in the Army Air Forces during the war.

Latest in Literary Experiments Is Profile of Devil for Life

For some time Mr. L's been searching for someone capable of profiling the Devil.

Whether the word portrait is to be incarnate or a synthesis of evil, we wouldn't know; but British author. Evelyn Waugh is doing the puzzling. Anyway, it's an interesting idea—following Clare Luce's conversion to Roman Catholicism.

ARMAND BERARD, he's the French Embassy Minister-Counselor, lunched a handful of the State Department's cerebral ivory tower lads to meet Pierre Lapie. Member of the French Parliament, United Nations delegate, he was wartime Governor General of the Chad District in Africa, mainly responsible for turning over this rich colony to the Free French.

Blonde brisk M. Lapie speaks English a la Americain, having practiced with our aviators in Brazzaville and such equatorial metropolises.

THE Ian Wilson-Youngs are selling their London house, transferring to the Argentine where he'll be British Minister. A Washingtonian while she studied for a career in our foreign service, the former Charlotte Brown was first married to the late Conde Nast's son, Coudert. And she's a sister of the State Department's Donald Brown.

LIEUT. GENERAL Al Wedemeyer, trig and rested, has been up from his Baltimore headquarters with petite Mrs. Wedemeyer. Though the General is mum about his still unpublished report on China, a suggestion of gloom occasionally escapes his closely buttoned lips.

OPENING session is November 9th, so members of the Ice Club of Washington are busy blade sharpening. Cautious would-be members, who want to try out the Uline rink before joining, are being invited for a pre-skate November 9th and 11th. Heading the Board of Governors is Charles F. Brown with Mrs. John Auchincloss as Secretary.

A MOTHER of a Washington bridegroom-to-be was buying a hat for the wedding, demurred when the milliner clucked delightedly over a brown numero, because she owned no matching accessories. At an adjoining mirror, a pretty customer offered to lend gloves and handbag, deliver them the day before the ceremony. The harassed parent accepted gratefully, forgot to ask the lady's name. The saleslady whispered, "that's Mrs. Kenneth Royall." Gloves and bag arrived on the dot in the Royall's limousine.

THIS AND THAT: Emily Price Post, arbiter of finer nuances in social behaviour, is about to ring up another fortune. The more photogenic aspects of etiquette are being filmed in a series of movie shorts. Done with humor, they could be delicious . . . Mrs. Geoffrey Gates, until recently Mrs. Harry Hopkins, is whipping up a new apartment. She's doing the dining room in navy blue and white . . . John Mitchell, a member of hush-hush Central Intelligence Agency, whisks secrets out of his hair by a novel vacation. He and a pal are spending two weeks striding up and down New England's mountains and highways. He has been doing it for years.

Carroll Rider, Hollywood astrologer, has been entertaining Washingtonians this past week. Marlene Dietrich, Maria Montez and dozens of glitter girls and boys, never make a move without his say-so. He even doubles as stork, tells them when to have babies. The The Montez-Aumont infant is one of his "clients," bye-the-bye. Recently, he has been working as consultant in "The Sign of the Ram."

In case anyone's interested, this department's sign is Gemmini, its symbol air! We should get along dandy, says Mr. Rider, with fire symbols! . . . Mrs. Truxtun Beale's back in Decatur House after a too-long hegira touching European and African countries . . . Jan Ciechanowski, former Polish Ambassador, is off to our Western reaches on a lecture tour.

The Children's Art Center on Eye st. had "vernissage" last week. One interesting effort was a Palestine refugee's painting of an armed guard. The kid caught, an expression of brutality with remarkable skill. Putting down his fears on paper untensed him, the teacher said. If your progeny need untensing, the Center is open afternoons from 3 to 5 for children of any race, creed or color. Mrs. Dean Acheson and other artistic socialites take an active interest in the Center.

Dinners Precede Friday Night Club

Before the Friday Night Supper Club Friday evening there were a number of small dinner parties. Mr. and Mrs. George Y. Wheeler 2d, entertained at their home, and Mr. and Mrs. Lauristan Hardin, jr., gave a dinner party jointly with Mr. and Mrs. James J. Wadsworth.

At the Chevy Chase Club, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hight, jr., entertained for Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Guy, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. John de Sibour, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Almirall, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Boss, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Price of Philadelphia and Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax Randolph of Richmond.

Virginians Are Visitors

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Buckley of Lynchburg, Va., are spending three weeks in town, stopping at the Hamilton. They entertained at dinner Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jackson O'Neal.

Miss Horner Is Married to Chas. Reiche

Miss Lucy Glen Horner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Horner of Washington and Stonington, Conn., was married yesterday to Charles E. Reiche, of Washington. The wedding took place in the sanctuary of Foundry Methodist Church.

The Rev. Frederick B. Harris performed the ceremony, and the bride was given in marriage by her father. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Army and Navy Club.

Mrs. E. Horner Miles of New York was her sister's only attendant. Chester E. Ingraham, jr., of Fairfield, Conn., served as best man.

The bride wore a wool dress of winter white with matching feather hat and brown accessories, and she carried a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Reiche attended the Brearley School in New York and was graduated from the Greenwood School in Ruxton, Md., and Smith College. She spent her junior year abroad, studying at the University of Florence. During the war, she was with the Office of Strategic Services in this city.

Mr. Reiche is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl A. Reiche of Bristol, Conn. He attended Governor Dummer Academy and Harvard University.

Mrs. Wm. H. Pouch Honored at Dinner

Mrs. William H. Pouch of New York City, National president of the Society of Patriotic Women of American, Inc., was honored Friday evening by the D. C. State Council at a dinner at Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Margaret Louise O'Brien, State president, presided, and guest speaker was Joseph Palmer, jr., of the Justice Department.

Mrs. Angelina Montano Chisholm and William Groff of the Washington Opera Guild were guest artists.

To Be Married

MISS GWENDOLINE PARKER
. . . Engagement announced

The engagement of her daughter, Miss Gwendoline Parker, to Harris Lee Wayland has been announced by Mrs. Albert Horace Parker. Mr. Wayland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford O. Wayland of Alexandria, Va.

Miss Parker attended Immaculata Seminary, and was graduated from St. Agnes' Episcopal School, Alexandria. She is the daughter of the late Captain Parker, Royal Artillery. Mr. Wayland attended the University of Virginia.

Miss Shryock, Mr. LaMotte Are Engaged

Col. and Mrs. Thomas J. Shryock, jr., of Orchard Hill, Rockville, Md., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anne Elisabeth Shryock, to Louis Howell LaMotte 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Howell La Motte, jr., of Harkaway, Potomac, Md.

Miss Shryock is a great granddaughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. Thomas Turner of St. Louis and Washington, and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hedley V. Cooke of Orange, N. J., and Washington. Her paternal grandparents were the late Gen. and Mrs. Thomas J. Shryock of Baltimore.

The bride-elect made her debut at the First Monday German of the Bachelors Cotillion in Baltimore in 1945, and received her education at the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, Pa., and at the Chevy Chase Junior College, Washington.

Mr. LaMotte attended the Worcester and Foreman Schools. He enlisted in the Army in 1941, and after serving in the Pacific theater, was discharged as a first lieutenant in 1945.

The wedding will take place in the early spring.

Huguenot Society Will Have Service

Huguenot Society of Washington will inaugurate the new season's activities with its annual Day of Remembrance Service at 3 p. m. today at National Cathedral of Washington. The Rev. Gardner Monks will conduct the service.

The society's theme for this year is "Education and Increased Emphasis for Understanding World Problems." In this connection a world affairs study group is being organized by J. P. DeJournette which will offer discussions of history, science, economics and comparative religions. Mrs. Elgie Gilbert Purvis is president.

Philippine Ambassador Entertains

The Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin M. Elizalde, entertained at a dinner at the embassy last evening in honor of the Philippine delegates to the United Nations General Assembly.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Carlos P. Romulo were in the company, and Emilio Abello, executive secretary to President Manuel A. Roxas, and Mrs. Abello. Also, the Philippine Secretary of Finance and Mrs. Miguel Cuaderno, Senator and Mrs. Tomas Cabili, Senator Vicente Sotto, Counselor Teodoro Evangelista of the Philippine Department of Foreign Affairs, the Philippine Minister and Mrs. Narciso Ramos, David T. Boguslav, Tagakotta Sotto, the First Secretary of the Philippine Embassy and Mrs. Gamboa, the Military Attache and Mrs. Velasquez, and the Press Attache and Mrs. Valencia.

Tricks for Teens

By Nancy Pepper

"It's so long, short skirts" and "sew long skirts," now that you've had to give many of last year's skirts to your kid sister. You certainly wouldn't want to be caught baby sitting in one of those above-the-knee numbers you wore last fall—and you certainly can't afford to buy a whole wardrobe of skirts all at one time. So, what do you do? Sew!

ON THE CUFF—Lots of you are making slim, pegged skirts in the longer lengths, and, to identify them further as 1947, you add a turn-back cuff of self fabric to the hem. The cuffed skirt is about to become a new high school fad, and, if you don't know how to wheedle a needle, you can buy a skirt ready made. You'll like it best in gray men's wear flannel.

REED PLEATS—Another easy-to-make pegged skirt has a knife-pleated flounce, about six inches deep, all around the bottom. Just have your neighborhood tailor pleat it for you; then sew it around the bottom of your skirt. And, again, if you're not Nimble with a Thimble, hie yourself to your favorite teen department and buy a ready-made skirt with flowers.

'ROUND AND 'ROUND—Those swirling Gibson Girl skirts can be made without a pattern, did you know that? The whole secret lies in cutting a perfect circle, then scooping out a hole in the middle to mount on a waistband.

STRETCHY STUFF—Have you seen the tubular jersey sack dress length with elastic shirring around the middle? Have you thought of making a skirt out of it by cutting off the fabric above the elastic and just hemming an inch or so back for a neat waistline finish? The elastic shirring provides all the waistband you need. If you can't make one of these in a half hour, you're slower than the Harmonicats' recording of "Peg o' My Heart."

Well, get sharp with your scissors and neat with your needle, if you want to be Ready for Freddy.

GLAMOUR GAGS

Every magazine or newspaper you open gives you pretty much the same beauty hints. By this time, anyone who can read knows that she must brush her hair and see her dentist twice a year unless she wants to look like Boris Karloff. But it takes this column to give you some repulsively different facts about beauty. It takes you to try them out.

FOAM-MADE HAIRDO—So your curls won't stay in, no matter how tightly you wind them on socks or curlers? As soon as you take them down, they go drippier than the "Bloop Bleep" song. Well, if you moisten them with stale beer (yes, you read it right) before you put them up, they'll keep their spring much longer. Our teen-age informant assures us that you won't smell like something to serve with pretzels.

WITH HEAD BOWED DOWN—Did you know that the best way to brush your hair is to lie on a bed with your head hanging over the side? Then, when you brush, you stimulate circulation in your scalp. Just turn on a Frankie Laine recording, throw yourself across the bed in a swoon and brush right through the second chorus. Then, Rise and see how you Shine!

Hem Lines

The difference you cannot miss
'Twixt this year's frocks and last year's gowns;
The long and short of it is this:
My wardrobe has its Ups and Downs.

WITCHES' CURSE

Check back over the last few years and you'll find that every season had its own favorite expression. Remember when every other word was "Are you kidding?" Or when you'd say "Hubba hubba" at the slightest provocation? (Providing, of course, the provocation had broad shoulders, a wide grin and football letters.) We won't even mention Kilroy or Richard, because they're too recent. But we shall dwell lovingly on your current favorite—"Drop dead."

Variations on a Theme—Instead of "Drop Dead," you're using these popular alternatives: "Go Die, Die Dead," "Take a Drop Dead Pill."

POEM WITH A PURPOSE—You like this little ditty: Violets are Blue, Roses are Red; Do Me a Favor—PLEASE DROP DEAD. How artistic can you get?

skill on Cayuga's waters. Also, he is so engrossed at being initiated into Chi Psi, that it isn't likely he'll be down this way for some time. In the meanwhile, Howard's sisters, Betty and Emily, have joyfully claimed the boat, which has been christened Vimi 3d.

BACK from three weeks in Georgia, Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower brings home glowing reports of that recently married young couple, Lieut. and Mrs. John Sheldon Eisenhower, whom she visited in Columbus. The newlyweds are happily established in a little apartment in the lovely old Southern style home of Mr. and Mrs. John (Jack) Ellis. John leaves at 7 each morning for his mortar course at Fort Benning and until he returns 12 hours later tall, dark-haired Barbara busies herself with housewifely tasks or darts around seeing old friends or visiting familiar scenes. No stranger to Columbus, she attended school there as a child when her father was stationed in the Southern city.

There was also a lovely, lazy 10-day period at Savannah Beach. John and his bride came down for a weekend, General "Ike" joined his family at the resort, and Gen. and Mrs. Henry B. Sayler and Gen. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Caffey also were in the congenial group of old friends.

BRIG. GEN. Louis R. Jones, USMC, and Mrs. Jones have been wearing big smiles ever since last Sunday—when they heard they had become grandparents for the first time. The baby, a girl, was born to their daughter, Mrs. Edwin C. Godbold, down in Louisville, Ky., where Lieutenant Colonel Godbold is an instructor at the University of Louisville. Mrs. Jones didn't wait to hurry down to see her granddaughter and namesake, Rhita Virginia, but General Jones had some prearranged speech-dates in Boston this weekend. While her parents are out of town, 16-year-old Mary Jones is the houseguest of Mrs. Opal H. Stephenson and her daughter, Violet Jane.

JOTTINGS: Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Claude B. Ferenbaugh, Col. and Mrs. Bruce Easley, and Col. and Mrs. H. B. Powell of Fort Meade piled into their cars Friday night and headed North. They're spending the weekend with their old friends, Col. and Mrs. Theodore A. Seely in Harrisburg, Pa. . . . The U. S. Military Academy class of 1919 is planning a reunion for October 31—Hallowe'en night—at the War College Officers' Club. The party, a cocktail supper, will be from 6 to 8. Comdr. and Mrs. Charles C. Windsor are spending about a week at their Philadelphia home . . . Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry Aurand returned Thursday from a brief trip to England . . . Radio listeners who turn their dials to station WTOP at 9:30 this morning will hear Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations. Scheduled to appear on D.C. Dateline's "Pilots on Guard," she will encourage women's support of the Naval Reserve training program.

Minister Purchases New Home

A new residence has been purchased by the Austrian Minister, Dr. Ludwig Kleinwaechter, at 2220 Wyoming ave. The minister and his family moved from the Brighton Hotel to their new home on Thursday.

Two delightful parties attended by the younger diplomatic crowd last week were the smorgasbord party given Tuesday by Miss Aino de Rettig-Bendz and the cocktail party yesterday given by George Baker.

Miss Rettig-Bendz is the daughter of the Swedish Agricultural Attache and Mme. Bendz. Her smorgasbord party was from 7:30 on, and at midnight a barbecue was served in the garden. Mr. Baker's party was at his home in Georgetown, in honor of Vicomtess de Bellaigue, visitor from Paris.

Biro—Dulaney

Miss Margaret Mary Dulaney and Rudolph Paul Biro were married yesterday in St. Francis Xavier Church at 10 a. m. The Rev. Harry Echle officiated at the double ring ceremony, which was followed by a nuptial mass. Mrs. Biro is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Barrett Dulaney and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph C. Biro.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a period style gown of white satin and a veil of illusion, which fell from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress.

Miss Marie Bauer, maid of honor, wore a gown of delphinium blue faille with matching headdress of ostrich tips, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of mixed flowers. The bridesmaids were costumed like the maid of honor in different colors. Miss Mary Biro, sister of the bridegroom, wore moss green faille; Miss Mary Louise Cady wore antique gold and Miss Kathleen Vogel was gowned in American beauty rose.

All wore matching headdresses. Miss Jean Anne Nalley, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, clad in yellow taffeta and net.

George C. Dulaney of Jacksonville, Fla., brother of the bride, served as best man. The ushers were Paul R. Dulaney and Richard C. Dulaney, also brothers of the bride; Ralph McNeill, Robert Kendrick and Stanley Kinsbury.

Green—Stuart

At the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament in Chevy Chase yesterday, Miss Valerie Corinne Stuart became the bride of Robert Joseph Green. Mrs. Green is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harry Allen Stuart of Washington, and Mr. Green is the son of Mrs. Robert Green of Baltimore and the late Dr. Green.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an off-white satin gown fashioned on simple lines with a high neck and tight bodice.

Mrs. Thomas Joseph Wacker, matron of honor and sister of the bride, was gowned in heavy gray faille, fashioned with high neck, tight bodice and full skirt. She wore a hat of gray tulle and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums edged in American Beauty roses.

Miss Janet Pusey of Richmond, maid of honor, was gowned like the matron of honor. The bridesmaids, Miss Ruth Franklin of St. Louis, Mo., Miss Laurie Green of Baltimore, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Elaine Crosby of Bethesda and Miss Barbara Wise of Washington, were dressed in mint green.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorcee With Three Children Is Comfortably Situated With Her Congenial Parents, But She Longs for Self Confident Role of Wife Again

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight years ago my brief uphappy marriage ended in divorce. My three small daughters and I moved home to my parents and have been here ever since. My girls are now 9, 11 and 13 and are very fine children, I think.

Our home life is pleasant. My parents are very congenial. They enjoy life and want us to do so, too. I am employed and enjoy my work a great deal. My salary is sufficient to provide a fair livelihood for my daughters and myself.

We have the same food, clothing and luxuries that most families in our surroundings do. All in all, I have been much more fortunate than many young mothers whose marriage has failed.

She Has Skittish Bachelor Admirer

NOW for my problem: Four years ago I met Jim, who is two years younger than I. He has never been married. We were definitely attracted and have been "going steady,"—if I may use that homely phrase. We have many friends, many invitations to parties and social affairs and always have lots of fun together.

However, Jim never seems to think about settling down, and until recently I, too, was content to drift; but now I find that I am beginning to want the feeling of self confidence that only marriage can give a woman. Jim wants to wait until the girls are a little older, but I feel that if we don't settle things now, we never will. Am I asking too much?

Jim is a good wage earner and I'm willing to work until we've established a good economic foundation. Provided I get the chance, do you think I'd be foolish to take my girls away from my parents' home, which has given them such love and security? Please advise.

L. C.

Children's Needs To Be Considered

DEAR L. C.: As your brief unhappy marriage came to an end eight years ago, unquestionably the children felt some of the melancholy repercussions associated with the shift to your parents' home.

In consequence, another change of circumstances fairly early in life, which drastically revised the cast of leading characters in their daily routine, might be expected to have a vaguely disturbing effect on them again, at least transiently, even if the business of being transplanted were to proceed under most favorable auspices.

Moreover, they are now of an age to feel conscious intense loyalties and preferences, and to place great personal importance on continuity of association with persons, places and events that spell enjoyment of life to them.

Hence if they are thriving where they are, and if your primary concern is to prosper their welfare, you should be very circumspect about marrying again.

Present Beau Isn't Worthy

ASSUMING you made a good marriage which brought them under the aegis of a devoted stepfather in a new home that was comfortable and happy—in terms of love, economic security and group solidarity—the change would do them no damage, of course.

They might for a time experience some difficulty in getting emotionally accommodated to separation from grandparents, whose warmhearted constant companionship has been part of their existence since they can remember. But on the other hand, there would be compensatory profits to them and to you in developing a normal-type closely knit parent-child relationship.

However, as to Jim: His reluctance to settle down and especially his skittish attitude towards your offspring make amply clear that he'd never be a constructive helpmeet to you. Even if you could engineer it, marriage to him would be a change for the worse from your present setup, in my opinion.

Careless prayer

By James J. Metcalfe

I pray each morning and each night . . . But every now and then . . . I say my prayers so quickly I . . . Should say them all again . . . I whisper them mechanically . . . Without sufficient thought . . . Although I realize that is not . . . The way that I was taught . . . It must be either weariness . . . or laziness of mind . . . Or possibly a goodly share . . . Of both of them combined . . . I know that it is anything . . . But proper and polite . . . To tell the Lord unthinkingly . . . Good morning or good night . . . And so I hope hereafter I . . . Shall say a better prayer . . . Because I want the Lord to know . . . How much I really care.

Jr. League to Give 'Playtime' In Broadcast for Children

For weeks now members of the Junior League have been busy making puppets and marionettes to be used in the league's new venture—television.

Mrs. George Y. Wheeler 2d is Junior League chairman for the project which will have its first broadcast on Wednesday at 5 p. m. over Station WNBW.

The program, designed for children's entertainment and instruction, is to be called Playtime, will be an hour-long weekly feature of the station.

With the aid of an advisory committee made up of leaders in Washington's educational organizations, the Junior League is arranging the feature that will be included in the first and future programs. They've come up with a character called "Popit," a young lady representing the personification of a child's imagination. Popit and her friend, Guessing Girl, will present games, riddles and charades. Popit carries an idea balloon, which "pops" each time Popit is ready to introduce a new portion of the program.

Serving on the advisory committee are Mrs. George Littlehales, Children's Art Center; Robert Forward, Boy Scouts of America; Miss Ethel Bubb, children's division of the Public Library; Miss Elizabeth Rupprecht, Potomac School; Mrs. John Bresnahan, Girl Scouts; Miss Elizabeth Lane, Children's Protective Association and a representative from the P-TA.

Busy Hands, a demonstration feature of the program, will show children how to make and do things at home; a special events division of Playtime, will bring other guests to instruct youngsters, with appearances scheduled by Frank Lowe, headkeeper at the Zoo; Dr. Herbert Freidman, curator of the division of birds at the National Museum, and a Christmas carol program by the choir of Beauvoir School.

Panama Evening to Be Celebrated

The Panamanian Commercial Counselor, Julio Ernesto Heurtematte, is chairman of the Panama evening to be celebrated tonight at the United Nations Club. The affair will be a dinner dance, featuring native food and entertainment.

Mrs. Catherine Schoen and Mrs. Henry Williams Morgan, jr., co-chairmen for the evening, will be assisted by Miss Margaret Nairn, Miss Dorcas Leachman and Benjamin H. Dorsey, jr. Hostesses will include Miss Betty Arnold, Miss Emily Arnold, Miss Edwina Wadden, Miss Mary Lee Lonergan, Miss Anne Lonergan, Miss Janet Gilchrist, Miss Susan Sweetzer, Miss Anne Gillespie and Miss Frances Dear.

Annapolis Festivities Include Football Games

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18.—Navy's football games are headliners of the week's events here. Many residents followed the team to Baltimore last weekend for the game with Duke. The team is playing Cornell at Ithaca, N. Y., this weekend. For the stay-at-homes there was a game today between the Navy junior varsity team and the Naval Air Station team from Jacksonville, Fla., at the Naval Academy.

Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, a former Superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Fitch, with Mrs. John Nicholas Brown of Washington were greeted by scores of their Annapolis friends at the Navy-Duke game. Admiral Fitch, now retired, has recently accepted a position as vice president of the General Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio, but the family plans to maintain their residence in Washington.

Miss Sarah Jefferson Rawlins, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Charles Henry Rawlins, jr., and David Arthur Aylsworth, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Aylsworth of Baltimore and Jacksonville, Fla., were married at 4 p. m. Saturday at Calvary Methodist Church here.

Dr. J. Luther Neff officiated at the service and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

Sister Is Matron

Mrs. Alva Manly Bowen, jr., of Norfolk was her sister's matron of honor, and the maid of honor was Miss Celeste Bowen of Baltimore and Calvert County. The bridesmaids included Mrs. W. George Matton, jr., of Norfolk, Mrs. Daniel W. Miller of Jessup, Miss Doris Brockmeyer of Baltimore and Miss Betty Tyler Roberts of Annapolis.

Paul H. A. Biziat of Baltimore was best man and the ushers were Robert C. Brown, Alan Glover, Frank Weitz, all of Baltimore, Charles Broadhead Rawlins, brother of the bride, and Ensign Bowen of Norfolk.

Now on their wedding trip in the Poconos, Mr. and Mrs. Aylsworth will make their home in Baltimore upon their return.

Following their wedding rehearsal on Thursday evening, the bridal couple and the members of their party were entertained at a buffet supper given by Capt. and Mrs. Frank T. Ward, at the Commandant's Quarters of the Naval Academy.

Capt. and Mrs. Richard S. Stout held an "at home" Thursday afternoon, at their quarters for the members of the Naval Academy Department of Seamanship and Navigation, of which Captain Stout is the new head. Captain and Mrs. Stout are recent arrivals here from Coronado, Calif., where Captain Stout served as chief of staff to Admiral I. N. Kiland. In 1938 the Stouts spent some time in Annapolis, while Captain Stout was attached to the Department of Ordnance and Gunnery. Mrs. Stout, a portrait painter of note, held several exhibitions at that time and was affiliated with the Annapolis Sketch Club.

Gov. W. Preston Lane of Maryland attended the University of Virginia-Harvard football game last Saturday at Charlottesville, Va., as a guest of Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia and Colgate Darden, president of the university.

Governor Lane is a graduate of the University of Virginia, class of 1915, of which he was president. His daughter, Miss Dorothy Lane, accompanied him to the game.

The annual fall tea for new candidates of Tau Omicron Phi, Navy junior sorority, was held Thursday in the alumni house when the members greeted the new girls.

Mrs. Wm. Crismond Gives Tea Party For Mrs. Palmer

Mrs. William P. Crismond of Alexandria entertained at tea yesterday for about 200 guests in honor of her aunt, Mrs. Christie A. Palmer of Washington, on the occasion of her birthday anniversary.

Receiving with Mrs. Crismond, who wore a crepe and lace gown, and Mrs. Palmer, whose gray costume was accented with an orchid corsage, were Mrs. Palmer's son, Dr. Louis Franklin Palmer, who came from Cincinnati for the event. Also welcoming the guests were Mrs. F. M. Weber of Washington, daughter of the honor guest; William F. Hellmuth and Col. Everett A. Hellmuth, nephews of Mrs. Palmer.

There was a pink and white birthday cake on the buffet table which was decorated with sweetheart roses. Taking their turn at the tea table were Mrs. Everett Hellmuth, Mrs. William Hellmuth, assisted by Miss Evelyn Weber, Mrs. Norman Roberts, Mrs. Louis Falmar and Mrs. S. Gordon Green.

Walter Tuckermans Visit Grandchild

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman have returned from Philadelphia, where they went to make the acquaintance of their new granddaughter, Edith Kelsey Kauffman, born October 9 to Commodore and Mrs. Draper Laurence Kauffman, the latter formerly Miss Peggy Tuckerman.

The baby was named Edith for her maternal grandmother and Kelsey for her paternal grandmother.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman visited Clement Biddle for several days and were overnight guests of Vice Admiral and Mrs. James Laurence Kauffman.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

A wedding of interest throughout Virginia took place at 12:30 p. m. yesterday in Alexandria when Miss Anne Cliffe Carter of Alexandria and Peter Knowles of Washington were married at the home of her mother, Mrs. George Carter.

Miss Carter is the daughter of the late George Carter of The Plains, Va., and granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Carter of The Plains and the late Judge and Mrs. John B. Hannum of Chester, Pa. Mr. Knowles is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Knowles of Pensacola, Fla. The wedding was a quiet affair, with only her mother and their sisters and brothers and their wives and husbands attending. When they return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Knowles will live in Washington.

Celebrate Anniversary

The largest party of the week in Middleburg was the dinner party given on Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. James B. Skinner at their home in celebration of their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary. The 50 guests were seated at small tables arranged about the lower floor and on the inclosed veranda.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Houghton Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Read, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Harper, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Milton McCoy, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tartiere, Mr. and Mrs. William Hulbert, Col. and Mrs. William Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crabites, Mr. and Mrs. Duval Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young, Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard, Mrs. Jack Skinner, Mrs. Arthur White, Miss May McCauley, Miss Amory Perkins, Miss Clarissa Fleming, Miss Elizabeth Lemmon, Mrs. Gertrude Warner Benton, Miss Virginia LeLong, Miss Happy Lelong, Col. Frank Hayne, Marion Lelong, Harry Frost, William F. Hitt, Count Richard d'Espremil, Harry Tiffany, and Mr. and Mrs. Chaffrinx Lelong of Richmond, and Mr. and Mrs. Holland Potter of Centreville, Md., who were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Skinner for the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Scott Hardin entertained at a dinner party at their home, Newstead, Upperville, on Saturday evening, after the Trinity horse show.

Miss Edith Carter and Miss Rebecca Carter entertained at a cocktail party on Saturday afternoon at their home, Meadow Grove, in honor of their brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Carter of St. Louis, Mo., and their niece, Miss Eleanor Carter of New York City, who have been visiting the Misses Carter for a week. Mrs. Carter and Miss Carter left for New York early this week and Mr. Carter is staying on for another week.

Horse Show Today

The Fredericksburg horse show will be held today at Mary Washington College, of the University of Virginia, at Oak Hill Stables, 2 miles west of Fredericksburg. It is sponsored by the Hoof Prints Club of the college.

Beginning at 1 p.m. there will be 14 classes of the usual horse show type.

Officers include Donna Mathews, president; Shirley Conn, vice president; Betty Lou Shelhorse, secretary; Anne Bartholomew, treasurer; William R. Walther, sponsor. On the advisory committee are A. W. Mitchell, Aldrich Dudley, jr., Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, sr., Dr. Thomas B. Payne, John Comer, John Freeman, Vernor Snellings, Mrs. Dorothy Rowe, George Alles, Albert Lindstrom and George Benoit.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tayloe of Upperville spent several days in Baltimore this week as the guests of her mother, Mrs. R. Julian Roszel.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Greenleaf of New York arrived on Monday to visit Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin at her home, Scalby, in Clarke County. Mrs. Gilpin entertained at a cocktail party on Monday afternoon in honor of her guests and at a dinner party on Monday evening. The Greenleafs are motoring to Dallas, Tex., for several weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Bolling Walker Haxall 3d of New York arrived in Virginia on Wednesday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, at Benton. Mrs. Sands entertained at a dinner party in their honor on Wednesday evening.

One Out of 10 Fails

Banks Wary of Loans As Many GI Business Ventures Go in Red

By Conrad P. Harness

WORLD WAR II veterans were better combat men than they are businessmen. Or so records at the local VA loan guarantee office indicate.

About one out of every 10 business enterprises begun with GI loans has gone in the red, through one reason or another. The situation has reached the point where some banks want nothing to do with GI business loans.

Morgan Callahan, loan guarantee officer for the local VA office, charged that many bankers flatly state "no GI business loans."

He has appealed to lending institutions to reach a happy medium. "Lots of veterans are still good propositions for loans," he added.

The local VA office has processed 1266 GI business loans. Of these, 115 have been reported in default. Of the 115 defaults, 57 have resulted in claims. With VA stuck for $52,000 as the agency made good amounts on the loans.

Cabs and automotive equipment have been the nemesis of many a veteran. The situation recently prompted Callahan to make the following report to the VA central office:

"A great deal of grief has been experienced by our leaders with respect to loans secured by automotive equipment and those for working capital, the latter in most cases being totally unsecured. This office fully realizes the seriousness of this potential drain on the Government and has by inference attempted to educate the lenders to screen these business loans more in keeping with prudent banking practices and still afford the same degree of availability to the veteran borrower who seeks to engage in business."

Slick Characters

"BAD ACTORS" was the term used to describe many of the vets who skip on their responsibilities. C. F. Glover, an assistant to Callahan, works full time attempting to salvage the dozens of defaulted loans, both business and homes, reported to his office.

Many of the embryo business men started off in grand style and then became "unavailable" when failure appeared certain. One former serviceman had some fancy cards printed showing his qualifications as a pharmacist and talked a bank into a $2100 loan to set up a drug store, with VA backing up the bank to the tune of $1050.

An investigation revealed he was not an experienced pharmacist; he couldn't even dish up a passable chocolate sundae. The man was described by Glover as a "big-time operator who enjoyed fine cigars and berating customers who could afford only low-cost items in his store."

At last report the veteran was somewhere in Louisiana and VA had paid $906 on his loan, the bank taking the loss for the rest.

Leafing through the VA's voluminous files on each case history where a default occurs shows banks lent to some men whose background revealed traits opposed to thrift and good citizenship, to put it mildly.

Army Didn't Want Him

ONE MAN who defaulted had been kicked out of the Army for fraudulent enlistment.

Another lost his floor sanding business, on which he borrowed $1200 for truck and equipment, after police arrested him for robbery. VA paid out $415 as its share of the loss.

Scores of claims resulted from veterans who couldn't show a profit from driving cabs purchased with GI loans. "Too many cabs on the street for a man to make a salary, plus enough additional to keep up loan payments," commented Glover. "Many made an honest effort but just couldn't pull through."

Defaulted loans include every type of business. Three attorneys are on the list. A concessionaire at a carnival purchased a second-hand auto and trailer. Business must have been terrible because only one payment was made on a $3000 loan, with VA soaked for $1475.

A brother of one of Washington's largest auto dealers is one of the "bad actors," as VA describes them. He managed a $1472 loan for a cab and working capital. His dossier showed he incurred large repair bills on the cab and then couldn't or wouldn't, meet his payments.

When VA checked the case they called up the man's brother who described his brother as "worthless and irresponsible" and expressed surprise that a bank had financed the loan. VA was out $736.

Many businesses have gone on the rocks due to bad breaks received by the veteran-owners. VA cited the case of a veteran who borrowed money for a station wagon and working capital to set up shop as a vegetable huckster.

The car was destroyed by fire and a new loan of $820 obtained. His brother received a $730 loan to buy into the business. A third brother allegedly left for parts unknown with the partnership's working funds and on January 1947, a final loan of $500 was granted.

Defaults started the following month, hurried by these events; the truck was mired in the snow, breaking its transmission. One brother ruptured himself trying to push the truck out. Left on the street overnight, all the vegetables froze and the boys were out of business. VA was out $1645.

Bright Side to Story

WHEN a loan goes sour and VA makes good, the lending institution making the loan usually writes it off its books as a bad debt. VA then asks the bank to sign over the veterans' note to them. Thus, the veteran is still liable for his unpaid balance.

But, it appears, it is VA policy not to dun the veterans who have defaulted. No court action is taken to compel the veterans to pay up.

There's a bright side to the story, however. Hundreds of successful businesses have originated from GI business loans. Success stories appear from every field, from physicians who have outfitted offices to gift shop owners.

In between are valuable restaurants, cigar stores, frozen food marts, drug stores, frozen custard emporiums, bakeries, tailor shops, furrier shops, etc., all started from GI loans.

VA officials point with pride to the case of Sue Ann and Sadie E. Grossman, former Air Corps Wacs. The sisters borrowed $6500 and started the "Sandy Sue Kiddie Shop" at 6 Elmira st. sw. It showed a healthy profit after only one year. Sales have improved each month. The girls now plan a second shop.

Or take the case of Fred, Emmett and James Brinson. The three brothers started a small variety store in November, 1945, in Arlington. Fate smiled and a second store was opened. Now the dime store tycoons are planning a chain of stores.

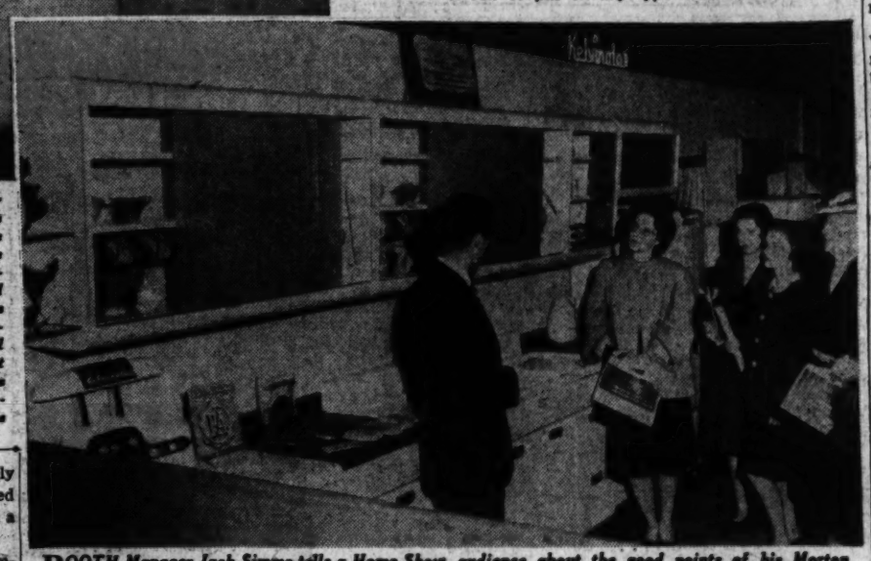
Ulysses D. Bridgeman was on a Pacific minesweeper during the big battle, but he's now the owner of a money-making service station at 2021 K st. nw. He opened it in May, 1946, when it was operating at a loss, and soon put it in the black.

The same success story has been repeated here hundreds of times. But, as Glover pointed out, "there's a few bad apples to spoil every barrel."

Plastic Tile, Unique Cabinets Draw Crowds

MRS. Jimmie Dittlinger observes one of two exhibits featuring plastic tile at the Home Show. This kitchen is in the exhibit booth of United Distributors, Inc., distributors of United Plastic-Tile. Manufacturer says cost of plastic is about one-fourth less than conventional tiling. Product is heat-resistant under temperatures as high as 175 degrees F. and is flame-resistant and nonfading, it is claimed

MRS. G. B. LEET, 900 S. 22d st., Arlington, Va., gives the plastic wall tile exhibited by Capitol Contracting Co. a thorough examination. The tile is interlocking and can't work loose or fall out of the wall. Made of styron, it can be put on any type of wall



BOOTH Manager Jack Simms tells a Home Show audience about the good points of his Morton kitchen units. Cabinet are of steel, with sliding glass doors and fluorescent lighting. And no swinging doors to caress one's head when dishwashing time arrives. Home Show closes tonight at 10:30

Housewives Warned on Insect 'Experts'

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—A warning was issued to Virginia home owners today to beware of racketeering insect eradication "experts" who find termites where there are none.

G. D. Kite, associate agricultural engineer for the Extension Services, cited instances where persons claiming to be specialists in termite control have investigated homes for termite damage and blamed on termites what in many cases was actually the work of beetles.

Exorbitant prices often were asked for eradication, Kite said.

He also urged individuals to check carefully on the efficiency and qualifications of persons soliciting such business.

Naylor Sale Opponents Set Meeting

Naylor Garden residents opposing the sale of the multiple-housing development to Veterans Cooperative Housing Association have completed a series of conferences with Federal housing officials and plan to discuss the findings at a meeting at the Naylor Garden Community House at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Gordon E. MacTavish, chairman of the Naylor Gardens Association housing committee, said yesterday that his group had been assured by Raymond Foley, Housing and Home Finance Agency Administrator, that they would be given an opportunity to appear in opposition to any request for an extension of VCHA's contract agreement with Defense Homes Corporation.

VCHA, according to the contract, must have "substantially 300 member occupants," plus a down payment of $512,000, by January 10, 1948. It now appears impossible for the veterans' group to have 300 of their members occupying apartments in the project, although VCHA leaders say they will easily have more than 300 members in their association.

Vacated apartments are filled by VCHA members but the vacancy rate is not high enough to enable the group to reach the 300 figure.

An official of the RFC, which financed construction of the project, anonymously predicted last week that the contract would be amended to allow VCHA to take over on January 10, 1948, regardless of the number of member occupants.

Leasees Buy Club At Virginia Beach

Virginia Beach, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Taking up their purchase option on the Surf Beach Club, the operators who leased the property last season have acquired it for $225,000, Harvey L. Lindsay, representing the former owners, has announced.

The new owner is the Surf Realty Co., Inc., Jack Kane is president and Murray Kossman, secretary and business manager. The sellers are Mrs. Audrey H. Darden and Mrs. Katherine D. Lindsay.

Bad Wiring Costly

Faulty use of electricity caused 47,000 fires in the United States last year with a loss of about 40 million dollars.

D. C. Home Show Ends Tonight

THE first annual National Capital Home Show Exposition will close tonight at 10:30 o'clock after a successful nine-day stand at the National Guard Armory.

The big event of the day will be the announcement at 10 p. m. at the Armory of the winning jingle number. The prize is the model home built by the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington on 14th st. across from the Department of Commerce.

The winner must present the numbered stub from his jingle entry, together with identification and proof of entry, not later than next Thursday noon at the association offices, 426 Investment Building.

The winner will then be given an additional 10 days to remove the home to his properly zoned lot, which must be within 10 miles of the present site of the exhibit house.

Attendance Good

An estimated 80,000 spectators had attended the Home Show through last night. Another 10,000 were expected today.

Three judges, Warren Francis, president, National Press Club; John A. Reilly, president, Washington Board of Trade, and H. M. Talburt, president, Gridiron Club, will pick the winning jingle from one of nine selected by a committee of 10 school teachers who have judged entries daily, selecting the best entry each day.

Donal L. Chamberlin association president, said the board of directors of his organization would meet this week to discuss a similar show for 1948. Chamberlin termed the show "an unqualified success."

He told of one kitchen cabinet exhibitor who had taken orders totaling $10,000 in one day. One garage door firm sold 200 of its products in a short time, while a refrigerator distributor took orders for 200 future deliveries.

Chamberlin said he had talked with more than 50 exhibitors and all expressed a desire for more space at the next show.

Over 150,000 visitors have inspected the exhibit house on 14th st. The jingle contest closes at 8 p. m. tonight. Chamberlain said mail deliveries would be picked up at the postoffice this morning at 10 o'clock by his organization.

Fire Prevention Experts Urge Periodical Home Check

Every home should be inspected periodically for possible fire hazards, fire prevention authorities emphasize. They add that homemakers should be on guard constantly against the perils which may lead to disastrous fires.

The fire experts stress the importance of checking for the following hazards in every home:

1. Worn electric cords and appliances.
2. Matches in the hands of small children or stored in combustible containers.
3. Combustible roofs, which are a constant invitation to trouble. They should be covered with a fireproof material such as asbestos cement shingles.
4. Accumulations of rubbish in the cellars, attic or closets.
5. Defective furnace pipes and flues.
6. Careless disposal of cigaretts, a primary cause of fire and tradegy.
7. Careless use of kerosene and gasoline in the home.
8. Careless disposal of ashes. They should be put in covered galvanized steel cans, never placed in wooden baskets or barrels.

Special care should be exercised during holiday seasons. Statistics show that Christmas, Halloween, the Fourth of July and other festive periods always mark a sharp increase in the number of destructive blazes.

Asbestos Protects House From Garage

A garage which is a part of the house should be separated from it by a fire-resistant wall. A simple way to provide this protection is to line the attached wall with asbestos cement board. Access to the garage preferably should be from the outside only.

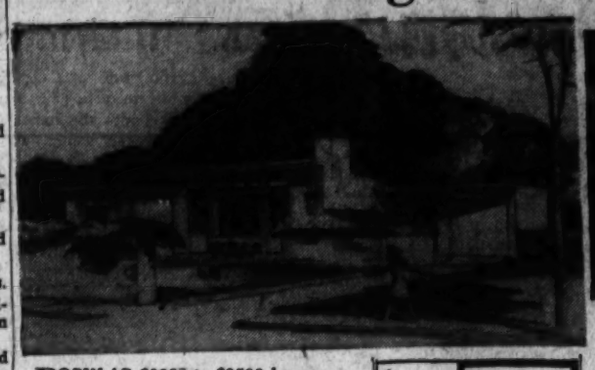
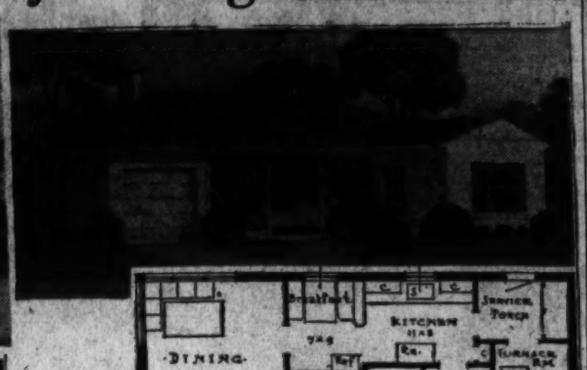
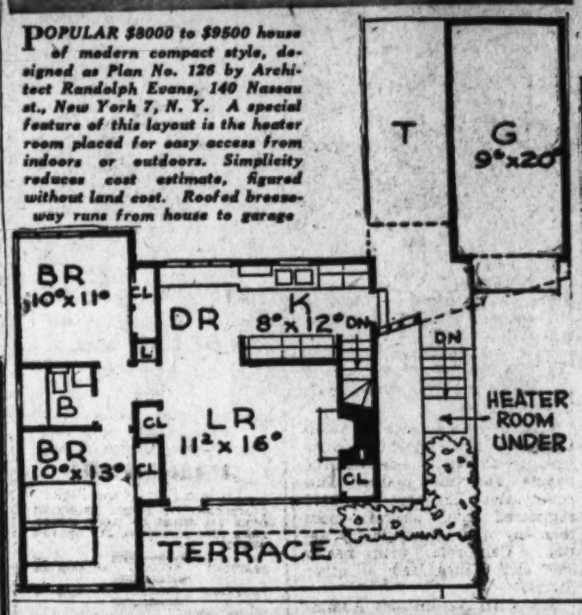
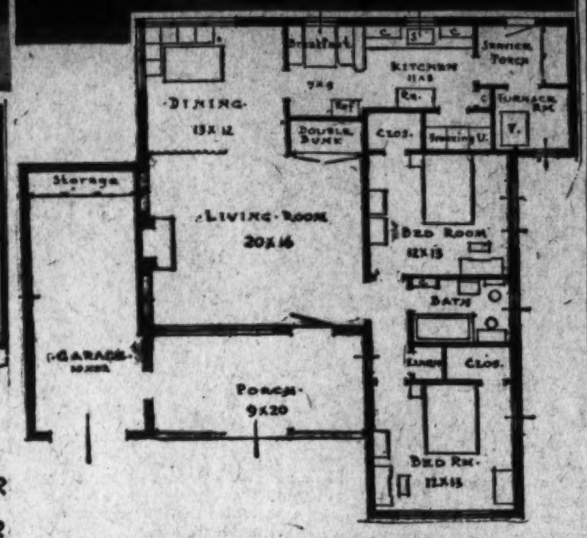
Two Interesting Plans for Bungalow Lovers





POPULAR $8000 to $9500 house of modern compact style, designed as Plan No. 126 by Architect Randolph Evans, 140 Nassau st., New York 7, N. Y. A special feature of this layout is the heater room placed for easy access from indoors or outdoors. Simplicity reduces cost estimate, figured without land cost. Roofed breezeway runs from house to garage





COMPACTNESS features this plan, No. A-502, by W. H. Schumacher, Oklahoma City architect. The service area in the rear of the house includes a freezing unit room, furnace room, service porch with closets, kitchen and breakfast nook. A double bunk in the livingroom, for emergency accommodations, provides alternative storage space

Realtors Told Of 'Threats' In Congress

A "formidable array of threats" will face the Nation's organized realtors when Congress reconvenes, Morgan L. Fitch of Chicago, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, warned Friday. He spoke before the annual convention of the Oklahoma Real Estate Association in Oklahoma City.

Eighteen bills relating to housing, all introduced during the first session, will be up for legislative action, he pointed out. Included is one bill to provide one billion dollars for public housing, Fitch stated, and the Donohue bill which invents "subsidy loans for housing, plus the Baldwin bill which seeks Federal subsidies to States for housing."

"The giant among them," he said, "is the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. It already has approval by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee."

"The issue of the continued rent control is a pending one only in a political sense. Legislation on the subject, which was given final action in the first session of the 80th Congress, provided for the ending of all rent controls on February 29, 1948. However, some leaders in Congress have indicated that they do not consider the matter closed, that they do not feel that this disposal plan of Congress is necessarily fixed, that pressures for continued rent control may prevail.

"It has often been pointed out that World War I rent control in France and other countries has remained to this day."

Professional Building Opens In Silver Spring

Opening of the Professional Building tomorrow at 8710 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., was announced yesterday by Van Vleck Properties, Inc., owners.

The building will house professional men in the Silver Spring area. The structure was remodeled from a large residence. The exterior is in asbestos shingles painted white. Parking for 50 cars has been provided on the premises.

The developers plan to construct a larger office building on vacant ground adjacent to the newly opened structure.

Sunroom Features Corner Flower Bar

The sunroom in a California home has white walls and a tomato-red floor. The white furniture is upholstered in turquoise. A feature of the room is a flower bar located in one corner. There is a lavatory where flowers may be cut and watered and shelves above for extra vases and bowls. Drawers underneath hold garden implements and shears for trimming the plants.

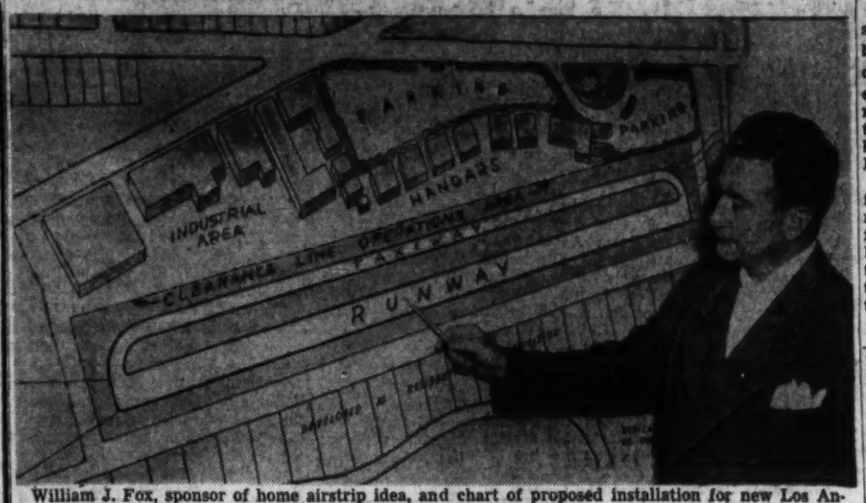
Dream for Private Flyers

Free Backyard Airports Eyed



William J. Fox, sponsor of home airstrip idea, and chart of proposed installation for new Los Angeles County subdivision

By Ralph Dighton

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18 (AP). A free airport practically in your own back yard—that's the newest dream of public planners in Los Angeles County, which tops the Nation in private flying.

County supervisors are studing a proposal to encourage builders to provide landing strips in the heart of new subdivisions.

Builders like the idea, because they believe the airstrips would enhance the commercial value of the surrounding land. Some home owners, they concede, would not want airplanes overhead at all hours of the day. But then, they wouldn't be likely to buy homes anyway in a subdivision dedicated to private flying.

If, for some reason, they did, here's the clincher: The fact that the airstrip belongs to the public would tend to reduce the chance of "public nuisance" suits against the airport.

Inventor of Idea

CREDIT for the idea goes to William J. Fox, Regional Planning Commission chief and wartime Marine flyer. The board of supervisors has given Fox a go-ahead, and asked for a full report on the legal aspects.

Fox says there is a better than even chance the plan for "back yard" airports can be worked out with existing legislation, and points to the operation of a similar subdivision (Sierra Sky Park) at Fresno, Calif.

Personal planes in Los Angeles County, says Fox, have increased 500 per cent, while the population grew 70 per cent. To make matters worse, he says, landing fields have diminished 48 per cent. He argues:

"This plan would go a long way toward eliminating some of the worst obstacles facing private flying. It gives the plane owner an opportunity to base his plane close to his home. It tends to cut the high cost of hangaring and maintaining personal aircraft, because operation of the tax-free public strips would be paid for out of taxes on aviation gasoline.

Contending that major airports discourage private flyers, Fox pridicts that landing facilities for small planes will disappear by 1960 unless some plan such as his is adopted.

"When the airport for personal craft disappears," he declares, "so will the market for private aircraft."

New Industries, Jobs

FOX looks at his dream realistically, in terms of new industries for the county.

"Builders will benefit, naturally," he says. "But so also will the makers of personal flying craft. Their business will boom, once the people have a convenient place to keep the planes they'd like to buy.

"With mass production of planes would come lower prices, and more people could buy planes."

New jobs would be created, too, says Fox, because of the need for more airport and factory personnel.

"California should lead in this program," he says, "because we have the climate, the terrain, the people and the planes. This county alone has more than 3500 registered civil aircraft—more than any other county in the Nation. California, with nearly 8500 civil planes, leads all other States."

The Civil Aeronautics Administration confirms Fox's figures. Just for the record, Cook County, Illinois, is closest to Los Angeles County, with 1266 registered civil planes. Texas trails California with 7798.

Good Material Supply Spurs Home Building

Increased production and consequently a more uniform flow of building materials into the hands of distributors in recent weeks has enabled home builders to slightly reduce their costs, it was revealed today after a Nation-wide survey by the Construction Research Bureau of New York.

One of the biggest savings comes from the fact that with material more plentiful, a builder is not faced with expensive delays. A house can now be completed in the normal 3 to 5 months instead of the 9 to 11 months required during the years of scarcity.

Furthermore, this improved supply has slightly reduced handling costs and other overhead charges faced by distributors when they had to deal in small quantities. In many sections of the country such savings have been passed along to the builder, the bureau declared.

As a result of the better production and supply situation, coupled with a resumption of new home buying by the public, building activity throughout the Nation has shown a marked increase during the past few weeks.

A pick-up in sales of new homes is reported from most areas, and as these houses are sold, builders begin work on more homes. New dwelling units are now being started at the rate of 756,000 a year.

Nails, Lath Scarce

Material Shortages Slowing Record-Breaking Home Output

The record-breaking rate at which homes are being built is still increasing, the National Association of Home Builders has announced, but material shortages are again plaguing builders.

The association pointed out that homes were being erected at such a fast pace that builders were outstripping the supply of some materials. Nails, rock lath and some lumber items were reported to be in short supply.

September Record

Reports from home building associations throughout the country indicate that the all-time number of houses started in August was exceeded in September, marking the highest record month for home building in the Nation's history. The normal seasonal decline occurs at this time of year, the association added.

"Home builders in September exceeded the number of units they started in August, when they put 83,000 new houses under way," the group said. "This means that we are building at a rate of more than 100 houses per hour, every hour of every day. On an 8-hour day basis, this means something like 330 houses every hour."

Construction was started during September on 24,073 new dwelling units financed and built under the program of the Federal Housing Administration, close to the record volume of 25,167 units started in August, Commissioner Franklin D. Richards announced today.

Continued high activity in home building is indicated by applications for new construction mortgages received by FHA field offices in September covering a total of 32,844 dwelling units, as compared with 30,957 in August.

A new all-time record of 14,066 was established in mortgage insurance applications covering existing one to four-family houses under provisions of Section 203, National Housing Act.

Building Pace In Arlington Sets Record

Arlington County Building Inspector Andrew Jensen added up the values of building permits issued last month and came up smiling. The figure showed September's total of $4,503,414 was the best building month in Arlington County's history.

The total was $3,359,000 higher than the same month of last year and $1,717,000 better than the August figure.

The report showed permits issued for erection of 12 apartment buildings containing 407 units, 122 dwellings and a church, to cost $165,000.

Permits valued at $8,711,000 have been issued by Jensen's office since July 1.

Modular Plan Is Applied to Brick, Tile

Brick and tile manufacturers have jumped on the "Industry-Engineered Housing Project" bandwagon, it was announced yesterday. A plan book showing six homes designed in accordance with the cost-reducing principles of the modular construction program have been prepared by the Structural Clay Products Institute, national association of brick and tile manufacturers.

"The plans, developing the adaptation of brick and tile construction to engineered homes, show two, three and four-bedroom houses, including elevations and plans," Ray A. Shipley, Institute president, stated.

The model exhibit house on 14th st. opposite the Department of Commerce Building is the first home in the Nation to be built under the modular program. It was built as a feature of the Home Builders Show at the National Guard Armory, which concludes today.

"The plan book will be distributed to the public through materials manufacturers, builders and contractors, and materials dealers, starting in November," Shipley said.

"Both brick and tile are available in all parts of the country in the new modular sizes utilized in the engineering housing program.

"In addition to house plans, the book contains an explanation of the principles of the Industry-Engineered Housing Program and of the economies it makes possible in home building.

"Working drawings of houses shown in the plan book will be made available to builders, contractors and dealers at a later date.

"The six houses include two variations of the basic one-story, L-shaped house, one containing two bedrooms, the other three bedrooms; a two-story, two-bedroom house, and three others with three and four bedrooms."

Unfinished Cellar Ceilings Hazardous

Basements in many existing houses do not have covered ceilings. When such a condition exists the home owner can increase the safety of his house by finishing the ceiling with a fire-resisting material such as plaster board.

When the basement is used for recreational purposes as well as utilitarian purposes this improvement will be doubly appropriate.

Bad Ashcan Is Invitation To Danger

The thoughtless practice of storing hot ashes in cardboard or wooden containers is adding to the number of fires throughout the country. Even ashes which apparently are inactive often smoulder for several hours after being removed from the stove or furnace. Placing them in combustible containers often has been the start of disastrous blazes.

To eliminate this fire hazard, all ashes should be stored in covered metal cans. Galvanized steel ash cans generally are used because they eliminate the possibility of a fire spreading beyond the can. Moreover, they are designed especially to withstand the elements as well as hard usage.

Fire prevention authorities advocate placing the steel containers in specially designed shelters. A fire-resistant shelter can be constructed quite easily by applying asbestos cement board to a simple frame. By doing this, you can be reasonably assured that no gust of wind will come along to knock the receptacle over and spread smouldering ashes about.

Country Home on Commanding 2-Acre Knoll with adjoining acreage (2 to 50 or more acres) available if desired

Buyers Busy As Fabric Prices Rise

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—Buyers continued to press for such popular fabrics as print cloths, sheetings and broadcloths in the cotton textile market during the past week despite the fact that prices again headed upwards.

The first offering of print cloths for third quarter 1948 delivery was made, but most merchants felt that was too far ahead to sell, and buyers generally were cautious about distant commitments because of current high prices.

Limited quantities of print cloths sold for spot and forward delivery and fairly large sales of sheetings were reported, extending into the first quarter of next year. Drills and twills also were sold from time to time.

In wool goods converters wanted more worsteds and fine woolens, but mills already have alloted practically all of their production for spring lines. A record number of buyers from the cloak and suit industry were in the market lining up goods.

Rayon goods continued to be scarce. Buyers who had restricted orders last spring were scouring the market in an effort to build up inventory. Fourth quarter allocations of gray goods by mills were almost completed and finished goods prices were higher.

Home Savings Reach High of 115 Years

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Savings associations will reach a 115-year high this year in the volume of dollars provided for the building of new homes, the United States Savings and Loan League said this week. "Between three-quarters of a billion and a billion dollars will flow from this source into the pockets of building tradesmen and the bank accounts of building material dealers now producing more houses than they have since 1925," it was stated.

Silver Used as Solder in Xmas Tricycles

New York (AP).—"Silver-jointed" tricycles are among the toys now being readied for distribution by Santa Claus this year.

Literally, the parts of the frames are stuck together with silver. It is another illustration of a technique expanded during the war; wider and better industrial use of silver brazing alloys.

Melted at relatively low temperatures, the alloys flow almost like water. Capillary attraction pulls the binding fluid in between the most closely matched surface. The solder is so strong that a film a thousandth of an inch or less is enough to bind joints second only to welding in strength.

Assuming well-machined surfaces, as much silver as is contained in a dime probably would be enough for the dozen joints of a tricycle.

Old Wallpaper Serves Well as Painting Base

If old wallpaper is in thoroughly good condition, repapering or painting over it will give very satisfactory results; but if it is not, all traces of the old paper or calcimine should be removed from plaster walls that are to be redecorated. Any defects must be repaired. Plaster cracks, if they are more than hair cracks, should be cut out and filled with plaster of paris. Gouges and scratches should be treated similarly.

The repaired spots should be given a reasonable time to dry out and then they should be sized. The type of sizing will depend somewhat on the kind of finish to be used.

If the old finish was oil paint, and the paint is in good condition and shows no signs of letting go, it need not be removed if the new finish also is to be paint.

Remedies Outlined For Floor Squeaks

Squeaking floors are often annoying and should be checked as soon as they develop. The exact places where the squeak occurs should be marked.

If the joists on which the floor is laid are exposed on the underside, it is possible to locate the squeaky areas from below. Where cracks occur between flooring and joists, small wedges driven between the subfloor and the joists will prevent further noise. It may be necessary to jack up and level any sagged or defective joist and then reinforce it with planks spiked to either side.

Protector for Pipes

When the tile is to be laid on a bathroom floor, any water pipes that pass through the concrete base should be covered by an arch of expanded metal to allow the pipes freedom to expand and contract without cracking the concrete.

Realty Round-Up

THE Mortgage Bankers Association has made public the answers to 8 of 15 questions submitted to them by Richard Cadwallader, outspoken, fiery chairman of the American Legion's national housing committee. The remaining seven queries were packed with so much dynamite that the association has appointed a special committee to study them and produce answers. The other questions asked the bankers' stand on rent controls, public housing and other controversial issues.

The eight questions answered, however, provide interesting comments on vital problems facing the whole housing industry. The queries and answers are outlined below. Some statements have been shortened for brevity's sake.

Q.—Is sufficient interim construction money available today?

A.—Yes, but unsound projects will find construction money difficult to obtain. Financing is facilitated when builders obtain FHA commitments, especially since lenders are apprehensive about fluctuating building costs.

Q.—Are housing costs too high? If so, what steps should be taken to adjust them?

A.—The increase in building costs is not seriously out of line with the over-all price picture. However, costs are higher than they need be, because the demand for materials, labor and the services of subcontractors exceeds the normal forces of competition, under which our system works most effectively, are often lacking.

Q.—Do monopolistic and restrictive practices exist within the housing field? If so, what are they?

A.—We are not aware of monopolistic practices. It is alleged that there are "restrictive practices," particularly in "feather-bedding." The cure is improvement in supply to restore normal competition.

Q.—Are you satisfied with the present operation, organization and activities of the Housing and Home Finance Agency?

A.—Yes. We are pleased with the appointment of Raymond Foley as administrator.

Q.—Should FHA receive additional Title VI authorizations (to insure more financing of rental housing projects)?

A.—As soon as FHA can recognize "current costs" as "stabilized value" we favor the elimination of Title VI. However, we don't believe current authorizations will be adequate to carry through until such time, and we recommend further authorization under Title VI.

Q.—Do you believe in 100 per cent loans in veterans' housing?

A.—Yes, when the appraisal represents a sound value, the borrower is able to demonstrate a good paying record, sound employment prospects and ability for long-term payments. However, 100 per cent loans aren't feasible to all veterans in the purchase of all houses. Some 100 per cent loans which could have been properly made have been unable to find lenders. In some communities the situation is most serious. We feel the situation will improve.

Q.—Are present provisions for rural and frame housing adequate?

A.—No. The National Housing Act should be broadened and simplified to meet this problem.

Q.—Are interest rates too high? What should they be?

A.—No, current rates are fair.

WASHINGTON Home Builder Clarke Daniel added his voice today to the continuing battle of verbal blasts under way between the supporters of public vs. private housing.

The bone of contention is over the construction merits of the 200-unit Stoddert dwellings on Ridge rd. se. The project, completed in March, 1942, at a cost of $908,000 is now undergoing extensive repairs due to rotted timber in many units. Water collecting under the homes is said to have caused the deterioration.

Last week, Joseph H. Deckman, speaking for the National Home and Property Owners Foundation, said its "deterioration was typical of conditions existing in hundreds of homes constructed by public housing bureaucrats.

A quick answer came from John Ihlder, director of the National Capital Housing Authority, which manages the units. In a three-page statement to newspapers he defended the project.

In the second round of the battle, Daniel, as chairman of the Public Housing Committee of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, fired this blast:

"Mr. Ihlder asks what private housing was being provided at that time (1941-42) at anything like the cost of Stoddert houses. I checked with four private builders who were building at that time and who said that they had produced over 1500 units at less than $4500 each for both white and colored without 'stripping the plans in every way to bring the cost down' as Mr. Ihlder seems to have found necessary. All were in conformity with local building codes and FHA requirements and included all costs. They are in excellent condition today."

We expect an answering communique from NCHA any day now, and we'll keep you posted, blow-by-blow.

SHORT TAKES: Karl Nations and Chester Kneller of The Washington Post advertising staff entertained the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board Thursday with a sound slide film demonstrating how real estate brokers can obtain better returns from their advertising dollar . . . The AAF Board, by the way, is contemplating use of the multiple listing bureau system . . . The NAREB Realtors' Washington committee has stated that decontrol of rents on February 9, in accordance with the pledge of Congress in the Housing and Rent Act, is the next imperative step to lick the housing shortage . . . Realtors may be paying $15 dues per year if a motion to increase dues passes at the coming San Francisco meeting . . . Most of the exhibitors interviewed at the Home Builders Show said the even was very successful from their point of view, and expressed a desire for another next year . . . Washington real estate and building bigwigs have been conspicious by their absence at congressional hearings probing the high cost of housing . . . Many builders are screaming because manufacturers of home appliances, such as ranges and refrigerators, are favoring their retail outlets with available output, at the expense of builders.

NAREB Market Comiment:

September Sales and prices showed a tendency to stabilize at high levels—a more pronounced trend than observed in August. Brokers saw no marked variation from August sales volumes or prices for any type of real property in Salt Lake City, Indianapolis, Birmingham, Orlando, and Roanoke, Va. A similar market performance was noted in Oklahoma City and Reading, except that in

Combined Study, Library, Office Displayed at Show

A combination library and study, which could pinch hit as a business office, is displayed by Knoll Associates, Inc., at the Home Exposition in the National Guard Armory. The firm designs and produces modern home furnishings and office equipment.

On display for the first time is a new tripod table of Swiss design with a birch top and three black ebony legs. The unit is easily dismantled and put together again.

Other items in the exhibit are a double pedestal desk of birch with walnut legs. Knoll desks have no hardware, drawers open from the side and the base is clear for easy cleaning.

Richmond Bradshaw, an interior designer, is local representative.

Consider Exposure In Painting Walls

In painting the walls of a small room, light colors should be considered, because they tend to increase the apparent size of the room. Dark or bright tones seem to make the room look smaller.

For a room with a southern exposure, the light wall color should suggest coolness to offset the bright sunlight which enters. Some tint of blue or green might be used with advantageous effect.

Beware, Wood Chewers!

He Gives Termites Permanent Lockjaw

IF LOCAL termites know what's good for them, they'll take a permanent bivouac in their wooden palaces until W. B. Hill leaves town.

Hill is nationally known as the termites' nemesis. He's spent the last 20 years figuring ways to war on the pesky little wood lovers and has made a nice living from his hobby-business. He's been in Washington for the past week putting on a one-man show, complete with live termites, at the Home Builders Show at the National Guard Armory.

The piece de reistance in Hill's booth is a scale model of a home's innards, complete with wooden framing, joists, sills, etc. A live colony of termites is feasting on the pine—right before an average of 10,000 curious spectators per day.

Hill, from Memphis, Tenn., is the owner of a patented system of termite control. His method consists of installing a series of slotted pipes at time of construction in all inaccessible areas, including dirt filled porches, sun parlors, stoops, steps, fireplaces.

Then annually the Hill system man slips a perforated pipe into slotted pipes and all inaccessible areas are treated with a powerful chemical toxic blown through openings in the pipes. Hill says his treatment gives the wood chewers a one way ride to bug heaven.

His colony of termites has just begun tasting his sample model. In ten days, he added the little rascals will be organized for a real banquet.

Already, termites "engineers" have laid out tunnels over the framing and rafters: Visitors can watch through a clear plastic covering and see the rascals as they stop for a tasty snack.

Wall Plug Tip

Placing electric receptacles for lamp connections at a height of 18 or 20 inches above the floor is advantageous in two ways. It eliminates the necessity of cutting the baseboard, and it helps to keep the cords off the floor.

On Mortgage Insurance Applications

If the Plan's No Good, Uncle Sam Will Say So

THE examination of plans and specifications is a benefit not always fully understood by the public when home purchases are financed with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

When an application is received for insurance of the mortgage on a dwelling, an FHA underwriter examines the plans and specifications to determine that they meet FHA minimum requirements as to size and arrangement of rooms, methods of construction, and plumbing, heating and electrical installations.

The analysis follows a uniform method and is made for each individual property eligible as security for a mortgage insured under the National Housing Act. During the course of this examination a conclusion is reached as to the quality or deficiency of various factors which affect the comfort, convenience and continuing satisfaction of a home owner in his investment.

Appearance of the property as a whole is examined from the standpoint of its exterior design, suitability of the dwelling to its site, and the design of the interior. This analysis is based upon the attractiveness of the property to home seekers over a period of time, and the suitability of the character of the design to its local environment and climatic conditions.

In judging livability of the property, consideration is given to its practical usefulness, convenience and comfort. Usefulness of a property depends largely upon location of the dwelling and any other buildings to provide ease of access, outdoor living and other usable space, and possibly utilization of natural features.

Livability of a house depends upon the convenient and practical use of space, size and relationship of rooms, desirable privacy, and location of rooms and exterior openings to take advantage of prevailing breezes and sunlight. Adequacy of closet and storage space, efficient arrangement of the kitchen, the extent to which summer and winter comfort are improved by use of insulation are other factors looked for by FHA underwriters in their examination.

Home owner satisfaction over a period of time is influenced greatly by quality of construction. Workmanship, suitability of materials, and quality of the structural design are basic to good construction. Therefore, a critical review is made by FHA underwriters of the design of the foundations, walls, partitions, and floor, ceiling and roof construction from the standpoint of good engineering and building practice. Construction quality has a bearing not only on structural safety, but also upon the durability of a dwelling.

The comfort and convenience of today's homes are largely dependent upon the heating, plumbing and electrical installations.

The analysis of plans and specifications by FHA is not intended to replace the services of an architect, but to assure that the property is good security for an insured mortgage.

Rebuild Lawn During Fall's Cool Weather

Autumn is regarded as the ideal time to produce next summer's lawn. The cool weather before the ground becomes frozen permits grass to attain vigorous growth.

Virtually every lawn requires renovation each year because plant food has been taken out of the ground all summer. A lawn often deteriorates in the hot months because of insufficient watering, rapid growth of weeds and too close mowing.

Weeding and fertilizing are the first steps before fall seeding. Much of the labor of weed removal is now eliminated by use of chemical weed killers. These 2,4-D sprays are easy to use but the chemical must not come in contact with shrubbery. Weeds so treated die within two to four weeks.

It is not necessary to wait for the weeds to die before applying fertilizer. Most lawns need a complete fertilizer, known commercially as a 4-12-4 or 5-10-5 mixture. This is applied 3 to 5 pounds to each 100 square feet and soaked with water to penertate the soil. If the area has not been limed within two years, lime should be applied.

Finally comes the seeding. Thin spots should be vigorously raked. Hard soil may require light spading and raking. A common mistake is to sow seed too thick. Light seeding and thorough watering is best. The same mixture of grasses as in the rest of the yard should be used.

After seeding, only a lightweight roller should be used so the soil will not be tightly packed.

Aluminum Paint Good for Exteriors

Aluminum paint has high resistance to water penetration. It is, therefore, an excellent paint to use for exterior priming or for any other place where a surface needs such protection. If it is possible within the building budget to have the backs of all clapboards or other wood wall covering painted before erection, it will prolong the life of the outside paint.

Simple Rules Make It Easy to Grow Hyacinth

By Alfred Puts

THE production of first-class hyacinth bulbs is a highly specialized business, which not only requires skill, but is dependent on rather exacting conditions of soil and climate. For more than a century virtually the entire world supply has come from Holland, where culture of the bulbs is a major industry because growing conditions are especially favorable to the development of strong stock.

These will produce their glorious flagrant flowerspikes under far less congenial circumstances. This is because bulbs of blooming size offered for fall planting contain the embryo spikes besides a good quantity of reserve food to start them on their way. Proper growing temperatures and a uniform supply of water will do the rest.

They are perfectly winter hardy in our climate if covered with five inches of soil measuring from the tip of the bulb to the soil surface. The gardener who is interested in enjoying them for several years should give them a light but rich soil. Good drainage is very important, yet there must be a uniform supply of soil moisture to keep the slender fragile roots in a good healthy condition.

Require Organic Matter

THEY demand a soil rich in organic matter. Plenty of leafmold, peatmoss or well rotted manure is needed. Fresh or partly rotted manure never should come in contact with the bulbs or the roots which grow from the base of the bulbs downward and sideways to quite some distance.

Mix the organic material well with the soil to a depth of not less than a foot. For extra good measure, add bonemeal at the rate of one cupful for each dozen bulbs spaced eight inches apart in each direction. Because it is the soil below the bulbs which is permeated by the roots the bonemeal application should be concentrated there.

Take special care to cover the bulbs to a uniform depth, otherwise they will not all bloom at the same time. This, however, refers to a single variety only because some varieties flower earlier than others even if planted at the same depth.

Plant Tie Up

THE best time to plant the bulbs is after the first frost, but they are not overcritical in this respect. Late fall planting usually delays the blooming season slightly and the spikes are not as full and heavy because of reduced root formation. Have the soil moderately moist at planting time, so subsequent watering will not be needed. There is danger in having the soil too wet when the bulbs begin to make roots, which they do soon after planting.

Beginners in gardening must make sure that the bulbs are planted with the slightly pointed tip facing upward. Set the base firmly upon the soil below and compact the soil above lightly after the planting has been completed.

Every gardener has his own idea about bulb arrangement in the garden. Some like solid beds, while others prefer to group them in the foreground of the perennial border, using from six to r dozen bulbs to each clump.

For this purpose they may stand out in a single line, an arrangement which seems least desirable.

87 Injured By Accidents In D. C. Homes

A child of 2 received severe burns last week when her bed caught fire from an electric heater which had been placed nearby.

The youngster, who was admitted to Providence Hospital for treatment, was one of 87 residents injured in home accidents, according to a report made public yesterday by the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service.

Burns figured in several other accidents, the survey showed. Three children spilled boiling water on themselves; a baby girl received severe burns from hot coffee which she had overturned; a man and woman suffered hand and facial burns when two gas stoves exploded.

In other mishaps: two adult women incurred cuts when beverage bottles exploded in their hands; a child of 6 months had her arm sprained and dislocated when her mother picked her up by the arm; a young man fell from a ladder while painting and fractured his wrist; a women accidentally fell from a second story window but escaped serious injury.

One dogbite case was reported.

A breakdown of the injuries, which brought the total for the year to 3903, follows: falls, 37; burns, 12; safety pin swallowing, 1; cuts, 18; bruises, 3; miscellaneous, 16.

No deaths were listed.

If Noise Bothers You, Don't Retire to Farm

By Fred Sailor Harvey

THE house was quiet. Everyone had gone to buy ice cream cones. I had declined—wanted to finish a story. It was about a man who made a great fortune in the city. He had said that when he reached his first million he would retire to the farm where he had been born. When he finally left for the farm he took his chauffeur, valet and cook. I wanted to find out how it feels to come back to the farm after making millions in the city.

I was so sure that it would be a wonderful feeling—that it was quite a shock to read what he told the chauffeur after the third day.

"All day and all night I keep waiting for something to happen, keep listening for the throb of real life, and I hear nothing. It's like being dead but not buried. No, it's worse than that, it's like being buried alive in a great tomb where everything else is dead. Just listen, Henry, and what do you hear? Nothing; everywhere, nothing."

He was a smart man, the story said, I stopped reading because it had me worried. It had never occurred to me that a farm could be as quiet as all that and I thought I'd better go outside and check up. "A great tomb where everything else is dead." It gave a man the shivers.

Rural Symphony

OUTSIDE in the dark, with no moon, but I felt my way along the back lane down to the oak tree where the children have their rope swing.

It's almost the middle of the farm and it seemed like a good place to sit and listen. It was one of those nights when gray-white sheets of mist are spread out in the air and act as sounding boards, which made it an especially good night to listen.

When I sat in the swing the rope squeaked and the oak leaves rustled overhead. Some birds roosting overhead took wing, followed by a tweet-tweet as they circled around the tree and finally settled again higher up.

I was settling down comfortably to listen when interrupted by a familiar crunching from the lower pasture. I shouted, "Nellie, Daisy, stop that." Then I threw a round stone across the dark pasture where it fell with a dull thump, followed by a snort from the horses. With all the green grass in the world right under their feet, those crazy mares will stand around a nice elm or maple tree and tear its bark to shreds.

The stone must have fallen close to the mark for the hollow clump, clump of their feet beat slowly on the ground as they moved toward the spring. A minute later the light sharper thud of Big Red's steel shoes trotted after them. One shoe had an ominous click, click and I made a note to check it the next day and call the horseshoer if needed.

Apparently the movements and hoofbeats disturbed the next field. A deep, long drawn out stomach-grunt rose into the mist and spread out so it seemed to be coming out of the darkness from all sides.

I could see Lily the Holstein lift up her hindquarters. Then with a lighter grunt she got off her knees. She sucked in a long, sobbing breath and sent it bellowing out again across the pasture toward the barn lot. Her moon-eyed calf must have been asleep behind the haystack, for his bawling answer came indistinctly from miles away, growing louder and more mournful as he moved across the lot toward the gate.

Rip, the sheep dog, resents having his sleep disturbed by such sounds in the night. His rumbling growl came from the best porch chair, where he is forbidden to sleep. Then his hoarse bark echoed back from the layer of mist. He got a shrill answer from the snappish little spitz who lives a good half mile to the east and a deep-throated challenge from the stiff legged police dog 200 acres to the west.

What About the Radio?

I KEPT waiting for them to stop so it would be quiet enough to listen, but the racket had disturbed the chickens and the noise grew. An old rooster crowed in the hen house and a young cockerel tried bravely to answer from the range house in the clover field. His voice broke in a silly squeak and there was an unsettled cackling from the young pullets, followed by the beating of many wings as first one and then another lost balance on the perches.

For just a minute there was a pause. Everything stopped. But a light breeze sprung up and rattled the dry leaves on the corn stalks as though a thousand readers were turning the pages of old books at the same time. And when the breeze fell off I was conscious for the first time of a steady buzzing and humming all around me. It rose and fell in waves and was nothing but crickets and katydids and everything that lives in the grass, on the bushes and in the bark of the trees.

Maybe that was the kind of quiet which the man in the story meant, but on my farm even that lasted for only a second. There was the sound of a motor and squeaking brakes near the house and three or four voices were all talking at once. "No, sir; that's mine. You ate yours. I did not. Give it to me now or I'll bust—"

I hurried toward the house. Some day when everything is favorable I'll try again to hear that tomb-like silence which the man was talking about. I'm also wondering if too many years in the city might not have deafened him just a little.

Reds Rebuild 861,187 Homes In Two Years

Moscow, Oct. 18.—Some four million persons whose homes were destroyed during the war in the rural regions of Russia have been provided with new homes and the remaining 400,000 in temporary shelters will be permanently housed by the end of this year, according to V. D. Ivanov, chief of the Russian Rural and Collective Farm Administration.

In the last two years, he reported, 861,187 new homes were built, in addition to 64,000 barns and granaries and "thousands" of schools, clubs, hospitals, reading rooms and children's homes.

Ivanov said another 79,000 homes are under construction and that work will soon begin on others to care for 29,989 families still in hotels and 88,826 families sharing homes.

The construction chief reported that homeless collective farmers already have been moved out of makeshift shelters in Moscow, Leningrad, Kalinin, Rostov, Grozny and the Crimean regions.

Commenting on the reconstruction program, Inanov said the state provided free lumber to families of servicemen, orphans, war invalids and others requiring assistance.

The agricultural bank, he said, granted long-term building loans totaling 500 million rubles, the maximum loan to a family being 10,000 rubles, payable in seven years.

(The official exchange rate of the ruble is 5.3 to $1. And the diplomatic rate, 12 to $1.)

During their occupation of Russian rural regions German troops wrecked 1,017,000 homes, 280,000 barns and granaries, 850,000 other farm buildings and 30,000 schools and hospitals.

Tax Refunds Ignored

New York (U.P.) — Unclaimed checks for nearly three million dollars in refunds on Federal income taxes are going begging at New York Internal Revenue offices. The tidy fortune is in 98,000 checks, averaging $30 each, which were not delivered because the payee moved and forgot to leave forwarding addresses.

Realty Round-Up

both cities sales and prices of used houses fell below August levels.

In Savannah only new houses moved away from the previous month's trend. Both sales and prices were up. Tulsa reported a general decline in transfers with prices firm for all property.

NEW HOUSE sales in Cincinnati are ahead of the August volume without advancing prices, with a slight tightening in the mortgage market on high percentage loans as many lenders came to full portfolios. Stepped-up sales with prices holding firm were also reported in St. Louis, Louisville, St. Paul, Syracuse, Tacoma, Jersey City, Houston, Charleston, W. Va., and High Point, N. C.

Sales and prices held to August levels in Cleveland and Akron. The market advanced in both respects in Chicago, Youngstown, Kenosha, Rockford, Ill., Kansas City, sales were off a bit without a decline in prices.

MORE TRANSFERS of used houses during September, with no price advance, were reported in St. Louis, Denver, Cincinnati, Tacoma. Some price softening accompanied a higher volume of sales in Syracuse. No apparent variation from August conditions in the story in Chicago, Kenosha, Cleveland, Canton, St. Paul, Louisville, Jersey City, Harrisburg, and High Point, N. C. In Bridgeport there is some buyer resistance, but thus far prices do not reflect it. Sales and prices were off in Kansas City and Houston. Prices held firm in Youngstown and Rockford, Ill., with a drop in sales volume; gave a bit in Akron and Charles Town, W. Va., with steady sales activity.

STABLE PRICES for commercial property, with sales volume comparable to August business, prevailed in Bridgeport, Kenosha, Kansas City, St. Louis, High Point, N. C., Lousville, Fort Wayne, Rockford Ill. and Denver. Advancing prices and more sales were reported in Cleveland, Youngstown, Akron, and Charles Town, W. Va. The commercial property market in St. Paul, Tacoma, Jersey City, Houston, and Canton went ahead with increased sales volume and steady prices with prices firm, Chicago sales were not up to the August volume.

Save Costly Garden Tools By Checking Winter Rust

Garden tools are precious in this inflation era. Wise gardeners will take care of those they have, knowing that to replace them will cost far more than in prewar days.

Since the greatest deterioration comes when tools are idle, careful cleansing this fall and dry storage over the winter are necessary precautions.

The greatest enemy of tools is rust. This attacks the metal parts during the winter when the tools are in storage and does more damage then than in the summer, when they are in constant use.

To check the rust, first clean all outside metal parts by washing thoroughly. Caked mud should be softened and removed. Then dry, and cover the metal with a thin film of lubricating grease, or oil. All bearings of wheel tools should be oiled. It is possible to obtain new handles, where the old ones have broken, and these should be set in place this fall.

Spraying and dusting equipment should be cleaned thoroughly of all old spray materials. Take the nozzles of sprayers apart and clean. Oil the pumps of sprayers, and set them away without screwing down the tank caps, so that the rubber gaskets are not compressed. Dusters should be cleaned and the outside metal parts oiled, but instead of oil, powdered graphite should be used on the inside.

Make a resolution when your tools have been cleaned, to keep them clean in the future. This will prolong their lives, and make a substantial saving. A rack in which every tool has its place will be found well worthwhile.

Fire Toll Is High

Recently compiled statistics show there were 1,700,000 fires reported in the United States in 1946, with a property loss estimated at more than half a billion dollars.

Insulated Pipe Retains Heat, Reduces Cost

Insulation of the piping and boiler will reduce fuel cost and will make the heating system perform better. Such insulation may be obtained in sheet or block form for insulating the boiler, in which case it is applied directly to the boiler surface and secured by wire and then covered with a coating of plastic asbestos cement while the boiler is hot. A small amount of Portland cement may be added to the final coat to produce a smooth, hard finish.

Pipe covering is obtainable in split lengths with a light covering of canvas cemented over the insulating material. The fittings may be covered with a plastic asbestos so as to bring the surface of the fittings even with the pipe covering. At the end of each length of covering a light gauge lacquered metal band with a patented fastener is secured to improve the appearance and keep the covering in place.

Rather than leave the pipes and boiler uncovered on the theory that they help to heat the basement, and therefore contribute toward the comfort in the house, it is better to insulate the equipment thoroughly and at the same time see that the cellar windows are tight-fitting and that basement walls exposed above ground are reasonably well insulated.

Any necessary heat in the basement can be obtained by installing a radiator, either on the basement ceiling or wall. Frequently the cause of the failure of a radiator to heat properly is due to the fact that the pipes leading to this radiator are excessively chilled in passing through a cold basement.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1947

Poverty-to-Pelf Tells Story Of American Theater Guild

By Richard L. Coe

IT'S QUITE UNINTENTIONAL, but you could say there's something symbolic in the Theater Guild's latest hit, "Allegro."

This Rodgers-Hammerstein musical traces the life of a doctor up to his thirty-fifth year, telling of his rise to affluence in the big city and how finally he turns his back on it to return to his native town as a country doctor.

It just so happens that "Allegro" is the Theater Guild's first offering in its thirtieth season on Broadway. If you can think of anything in the theater world that's risen from simple poverty to such affluence as the Theater Guild of 1947, you've got some imagination.

The idea of the sprawling Guild, however, turning back to the simplicity which calls "Allegro's" doctor is highly unlikely.

Sprawling? The word doesn't do the case justice.

Only last week the Guild announced it had signed a contract with NBC to produce a series of six plays via television on a sustaining basis this winter.

Its Sunday night radio shows have an enviable Hooperating (tonight: Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady in the Dark").

In 20 subscription cities across the country, there are 125,000 subscribers—with Washington, by the way, proportionally at the top of the list, a situation which makes all Guild offerings stay at the National a full two weeks.

Strictly Top Stuff

AND CERTAINLY those proud ads every week in The New Yorker are something no other producers can approach. From its commanding, top-of-the-page position you read:

The Theater Guild Presents—

"Allegro," at the Majestic, New York.

"Oklahoma!," at the St. James, New York.

"Oklahoma!," at the Theater Royal Drury Lane, London.

"Oklahoma!" at the Colonial, Boston.

"Carousel," at the Shubert, Chicago.

"This Time Tomorrow," at the Selwyn, Chicago.

"The Fatal Weakness," at the Lyceum, Minneapolis.

"The Winslow Boy," at Ford's Baltimore.

"O Mistress Mine," at the Cass, Detroit.

Nor is that all. Though produced under other banners, this season, "Another Part of the Forest" and "Lady Windermere's Fan" are touring the Guild subscription lists.

And now Guild cables and the famed Shaw penny postals are exchanging views on the Guild's Shaw Festival, which will present three of his plays within the next few years. Of these, "You Never Can Tell" is planned for this season.

What a rise it has been. Back in 1914, a few enthusiasts put on Lord Dunsany's "The Glittering Gate" in the backroom of the Washington Square Bookshop. Its success brought them together as the Washington Square Players and finally an invasion of Broadway in 1917. The war stopped their activities, but in 1919, the dogged band was back this time as the Theatre Guild—with theatre spelled "re."

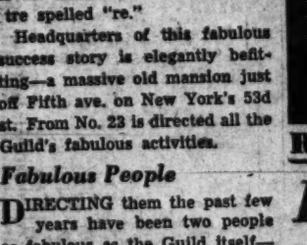
Headquarters of this fabulous success story is elegantly befitting—a massive old mansion just off Fifth ave. on New York's 53d st. From No. 23 is directed all the Guild's fabulous activities.

Fabulous People

DIRECTING them the past few years have been two people as fabulous as the Guild itself—Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner. Originally there were six, but during the recent years of prosperity those two have been at the helm. (Again, for the record, those other four directors were Lee Simonson, Helen Westley, Philip Moeller and Maurice Wertheim.)

Terry Helburn, striking-looking with her white, wavy hair, is a native New Yorker. She was educated in a big way—Bryn Mawr, Radcliffe and the Sorbonne. At Radcliffe she was able to study under George Pierce Baker's fruitful "English 47" in his Harvard period. She became drama critic of The Nation and joined the Washington Square group before it became the Guild.

Langner is almost a Washingtonian. Though he's a theater man first, his avocation is patent law and he was here a good part of the war. A Welshman, he fell for the theater as a youngster and became an errand boy for Ben



LANGNER — HELBURN

Greet. But the elder Langners didn't like it and pushed him into the office of a patent attorney friend. The theater won out, though his legal side keeps him busy still. He's also written a couple of plays, the most successful with his wife, Armina Marshall, being that comedy on bundling, "The Pursuit of Happiness."

"What?" you ask, "no movies?" Yes, there was some talk of movies a decade ago, but somehow that got sidetracked. What more do you want, anyway—Technicolor?

"Rose Marie" opens two full weeks of operettas tomorrow night on the National stage, with "The Merry Widow," performed by the same company, set to follow "Rose Marie's" opening week. The company includes Nancy Newton, below, Nina Olivette, Malcolm Lee Beggs, Billy Sully and Nat Burns.

Taking his time with his drink in "The Unsuspected," is Claude Rains, but Audrey Totter doesn't seem flustered. They'll share the leads with Joan Caulfield, Constance Bennett, Hurd Hatfield and Michael North in the mystery yarn at the Warner

Movie Industry Faces House Unit Tomorrow

By Raymond Wilcove

HOLLYWOOD goes on trial tomorrow before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

A star-studded array of witnesses will testify on charges that the Communists have "infiltrated" the movie industry.

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the nine-member group, says his committee is prepared to substantiate the charges during an anticipated two weeks of public hearings.

Some of the Nation's most prominent people have been subpenaed to appear. Among them are such stars of the screen and stage as Charles Chaplin, Gary Cooper, Robert Montgomery and Robert Taylor; Screen Writers and Authors Clifford Odets, Rupert Hughes and Joseph E. Davies; Producers Louis B. Mayer, Samuel Goldwyn, Jack L. Warner, and Walt Disney; and Movie "Czar" Eric Johnston.

Paul V. McNutt has been engaged by the Motion Picture Association of America, of which Johnston is president, to act as its counsel during the hearings. He is a former United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, former War Manpower Commissioner and Federal Security Administrator.

McNutt was a national commander of the American Legion and former Governor of Indiana.

Some Are, Some Aren't

IN announcing the list of witnesses, Thomas declared that some of them are "friendly to the committee's purpose" while others are "undoubtedly hostile."

One of the star witnesses for the committee is Adolphe Menjou, dapper screen star, who was said to have made an intensive study of communism in Hollywood, as well as abroad.

Charles Chaplin is regarded by the committee as one of the chief "hostile" witnesses. Representative McDowell (R., Pa.), a committee member, said of Chaplin that "there's no question but that he is friendly to the Communist cause." McDowell added that the committee had no evidence, however, that Chaplin was a Communist Party member.

Thomas has kept as a closely guarded secret the evidence that will be presented to the committee by Robert E. Stripling, its chief investigator.

It is known, however, that the basis for the hearings was laid during an investigation made on the West Coast in 1945 and closed hearings held last May in Los Angeles by a subcommittee.

The report on the 1945 investigation has never been made public. The investigators express the view that Communists have made great inroads among screen writers, but that the producers, with possibly two exceptions, were "loyal."

'To the Letter'

THE REPORT states:

"It is estimated that 514 writers in the motion picture industry either belong to the Communist Party or follow the party line to the letter . . . The Communist Party has infiltrated heavily into the screen story guilds and the playreading departments of the various studios."

It adds:

"If the industry itself continues to do nothing about it, the great majority of the persons in the industry performing work of a creative nature will, within the not distant future, be either Communist Party members or close sympathizers following the party line. The industry will then be dependent upon this radical group for its output."

The report charged that the Communists have organized schools in Hollywood to train writers for the movies. It also accused the Communists of being active in disrupting the movie industry through jurisdictional labor strikes in Hollywood.

The investigators declared that the Communist Party began in

Radio in Review

Let's Just Bury This Show

By John Crosby

"THE BETTER HALF" (Mutual) has one curious distinction; it was selected for immortality in the "March Of Time" film short on radio as one of the horrible examples of contemporary broadcasting. All things considered, it was an excellent choice.

As a matter of fact, I suggest they bury this part of the film in the Time Capsule in Flushing as a sort of permanent record of at least one phase of our life and times. The program contains most of the ingredients of all the other audience participation shows—quizzes, wild practical jokes, gags, and, of course, uproarious laughter. No record of our time would be complete without something of this kind.

"The Better Half" is a sort of quiz contest between husbands and wives in which the loser is forced to pay a penalty. At least I think that's the idea. The other day a husband was blindfolded and then asked to kiss a pretty girl who turned out to be his wife. A dirty trick.

"Ridiculous, Isn't It?"

TINY RUFFNER, the master of ceremonies, keeps the uproar moving briskly with a certain rough humor, most of it on the topic of matrimony. "How long," he will ask, "have you two been living as cheaply as one?"

"Twenty-one years."

"It's ridiculous, isn't it? I mean trying to live as cheaply as one."

As a quiz master, Ruffner is almost too kind-hearted; wherever possible he arranges that all the contestants win. The band, for example, played "Sunrise Serenade" and a bewildered wife who was supposed to guess the title, suggested "Swanee."

"That's close," said Mr. Ruffner, on what grounds I wouldn't know. "What rises in the morning?"

"Sun In The Morning," said the lady wildly.

He gave her a dollar anyway.

Two Men and a Girl

TONY MARTIN, I understand, has quite a following among young, impressionable girls who collect baritones as we used to collect birds' nests. However, the sponsors apparently don't entirely trust the drawing power of Martin's voice; they have packed the Tony Martin show, WTOP-CBS 9:30 p. m. EST Sundays) with a number of other goodies designed, I guess, to draw in the rest of the family.

Martin, who has borrowed vocal tricks from almost everybody but Dinah Shore, has a self-conscious, rather stilted voice which sounds large when he gets close enough to the microphone. In its lower registers, it's a bass viol; in the upper octaves, when it isn't strained too hard, it's a flute.

Ultimately one of these baritones with the ample assistance of a microphone will come up with a voice that reproduces the whole orchestra from the string section to the woodwinds. Then, since musical instruments were originally designed to reproduce and extend the range of the human voice, we'll be right back where we started from.

As a singer, to get back to earth here, Martin is pleasant, technically expert and so extraordinarily virile that it isn't hard to see what gets the girls in such a swivet. If he sounds a little stuffy in my corner, you can set it down to masculine jealousy.

Had Expensive Help

UNTIL recently the Martin show was bolstered with a succession of the topflight guest stars in the business. A few of the persons who appeared on the program include Bob Hope, Eddie Cantor, Burns and Allen, Red Skelton, Abbott and Costello, Jimmie Durante, Ed Gardner, Danny Thomas, Frank Morgan, Jack Haley, Bob Burns, Cass Daley, Ozzie and Harriet, Hal (Great Gildersleeve) Peary and Judy Canova.

Alan Young, who used to have a show of his own, appeared four times and finally retired the cup. He's been signed on as regular comic and the guest stars have been eliminated.

Martin plays straight man in a diffident, fatherly way. He never lets you forget he's the star of the show and he wants it clearly understood he's only helping out a little, like a good fellow. He holds the comedy lines at arm's length, as if they were somehow beneath him. This attitude is likely to make listeners vaguely uncomfortable, as if they'd caught Mr. District Attorney playing basketball.

In addition to Mr. Martin and Mr. Young you'll find Evelyn Knight, and what a girl she is! Miss Knight is a husky, throaty singer who sings as if she'd thought up the lyrics herself. She gives the impression she's looking some damn man square in the eye and laughing at what she sees. Appropriately enough she sings such things as "The Gentleman Is a Dope" in a bitter, disillusioned voice with more personality than any singer quite deserves.

Revivals Crowding Moderns

Nostalgia Rules Stageboards

By Charles Honce

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—Is it nostalgia—that groping for the illusive rainbow of the past—that is back of all these "revivals"? Or did the boys of an older generation have something that can't quite be duplicated today?

There is no profit in trying to answer such questions. But let's see what the record shows.

George Bernard Shaw, still very much alive and busy with his pen at 91, conjured "Man and Superman" out of his playbag almost a lifetime ago (1903).

It's news again today because an astute producer had the happy inspiration to revive it. The revival, last week, turned out to be so good that Brooks Atkinson recorded in the New York Times that "by the simple device of dipping back half a century in dramatic literature, Maurice Evans has given the season its first crackle of brilliance." Other critics were equally enthusiastic.

But it is not only in the theatre that the dear dead past is being evoked. Even the juke boxes have a tale to tell, or, more to the point, a song to sing—as witness the renewed and vigorous youth of "Peg O' My Heart," and other melodies of earlier day tunesmiths.

Then, again, vaudeville is showing new stirrings of life, while the amateur radio show, popularized by the late Major Bowes, is on the comeback trail.

They Will Stand Up

THE TREND is not so pronounced in the bailiwick of books—at least no outstanding novel of a past generation is currently battling for top place on the best-seller list. However, an interesting fact is that in literature the great and near great books of mankind's discernible past never die and therefore need no specific revival.

Edition after edition of works that have stood up under the weathering of time come out year after year. Mark Twain is just as popular now as he was in the day when his books were plumping fresh from the presses. Dickens, Balzac, Shakespeare, Poe and others on a list as long as your arm continue as steady sellers.

Nevertheless, there is at least a hint of the "revival" idea in the book trade. One publisher has just brought out a volume by that one hundred per cent mid-Victorian—Anthony Trollope (1815-1882)—and another has produced a book housing three "Victorian" novels. There will be plenty of nostalgia there for some.

Henry James (1843-1916), the tortured stylist of American realism, likewise has suddenly come to the front. Several of his novels currently have been reprinted, a couple of books have been written about him, and the atmosphere of his period and of his writing was duplicated in a newly produced play, "The Heiress," based on his novel, "Washington Square" (1881).

Another interesting straw in the wind is the fact that a new edition of "Three Soldiers" (1921), authored by John Dos Passos shortly after World War I, has just hit the book stores at a time when the first flush of interest in World War II books is beginning to wear off.

Never the Modest One

THE SHAW revival is one of the most provocative items in the picture. The Irish dramatist, who never has been crowned for modesty, always has maintained that he is just about the greatest playwright in the world and is to be classed only with a fellow named Shakespeare. The fact that his close to a half-century-old drama could come back to Broadway and capture audiences and close-to-rave notices in the newspapers is evidence that the old boy undoubtedly has something there, particularly as the play was staged at the tail end of a dismal succession of turkeys by modern-day dramatists.

The current Shaw success follows a similar pattern of other recent Shaw revivals, including "Candida" (originally produced in 1898) and "Pygmalion" (1912). In the same boat were last season's well applauded revivals of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" (1899) and "Lady Windermere's Fan" (1893).

The stage also has produced evidences of nostalgic appeal on the American side of the fence in the recent long runs of Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill" (1906) and "Sweethearts" of 1913 vintage.

The sharpest impact of the revival undoubtedly is the field of popular music and by way of two fairly modern inventions, the radio and the juke box.

In addition to "Peg O' My Heart" (1913), three other songs—"I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" (1909), "When You Were Sweet Sixteen" (1898), and "Heartaches" (1931) have been assaulting America's ears for weeks.

Nobody Has the Answer

"NO ONE," says Douglas Gilbert in the New York World-Telegram, "has advanced a reason for the sudden popularity of the old-time tunes. That they are pleasing melodies, new to the current crop of listeners, may be one explanation. That their lyrics express a contrasting and comfortable sentiment to the tailspin world we live in may be another."

Certainly these songs have quite simple melodies and lyrics as contrasted with the more complex rhymes and rhythms of today. That means that both words and music are easy to remember and thus can be hummed, sung, whistled or crooned by people who find that some present-day songs, while sounding comparatively simple in the hands of an orchestra, are pretty difficult to negotiate when tried out solo in the bathroom.

Gilbert also finds that these revivals have had an unusual economic effect:

"A number of the younger writers," he relates, "virtually have been forced out. Some of these are cynical, some blase, most are reasonably intelligent, skeptical of June-moon rhyming, and disdain simple tunes of only two or three harmonic changes. The youngsters, one publisher complains, still are writing for swing bands when they should be trying for singable tunes with guileless lyrics, the vogue now."

But Not Opera or Ballet

ART, like literature, finds its masterpieces appreciated through the aeons. No one has to "revive" Rembrandt, Raphael or Rubens. However, there often are subcurrents of renewed interest in painters of a generation or two back, and this is in evidence today in the attention paid to Thomas Eakins (1844-1916), Winslow Homer (1836-1910) and others of their period. In the case of these artists the interest undoubtedly has a tinge of nostalgia since they flourished in a period known and loved by many people still alive although presently not too agile.

There are two fields in which it might be said there never is a revival—because of the persistence of a pattern.

One is the opera and the other is the classic ballet. The routine of the ballet has changed but little from the day an individual first found it was possible to dance on his (or her) toes or leap in the air and land without falling on his nose.

And, if you subscribe to an opera season, you invariably know just what to expect.

Maurice Evans' revival of Bernard Shaw's great comedy "Man and Superman" has captured the New York playgoers. This is a scene from the play about "the predatory female"

Starts Tuesday

King-Smith to Offer Sartre's 'No Exit'

"NO EXIT," the controversial drama by Jean-Paul Sartre, will open the King-Smith Studio Theater season Tuesday night in the group's small playhouse at the rear of 2118 Massachusetts ave. nw.

This will be the first Washington performance of the play by the Parisian whose existentialist philosophy created a good deal of comment last season.

Beatrice Newport, who appeared in King-Smith's production of "The Return" last season, returns to play one of the three roles. Since her last appearance here, she has been playing at the Honolulu Community Theater, where she acted the title role of "Joan of Lorraine."

Directing Sartre's story of three lost souls in a comfortable hell—whose grimmest terror is imprisoning three people together for eternity—will be Mary Hunter. For many years, Miss Hunter was "Marge" on radio's "Easy Aces." Now she is on the executive staff of the American Theater Wing School.

The other two roles in the play will be taken by Boris Tumarin and Barbara Joyce. The play's engagement will be for two weeks, Mondays excepted, and added performances on November 4 and 5.

Dance Series Set At Guard Armory

Sammy Kaye, his orchestra and his "So You Want to Lead a Band" feature open something new for Washington next Saturday night—a series of monthly public dances in the District National Guard Armory, 20th and East Capitol sts. ne.

KAYE

The armory will be the scene of this monthly series of Saturday night dances lasting from 9 until 1 o'clock Sunday morning. The Capital Transit Co. is cooperating with the venture by maintaining bus service until 2 a. m. to all major points. For those with cars there will be free parking space.

Sponsoring the venture is a new concern, Name Bands, Inc., which promises Johnny Long, Vaughn Monroe, Tommy Dorsey and Tex Beneke for future months.

Three hundred girls, who have been active in bond drives, Community Chest, Red Cross and March of Dimes programs, will act as hostesses. Prominent military figures have accepted invitations for the opening dance.

For his "So You Want to Lead a Band," Kaye will draw lucky tickets, with amateur leaders who receive the most audience applause getting prizes.

Bright Stars Will Open In Week's New Plays

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP).—Impressively featured in this week's premieres, such stars as Judith Anderson, John Gielgud, Florence Reed, Thomas Mitchell, Melville Cooper and Leo G. Carroll will be seen in the three melodramas which make up the serious concern of the week's first nighters.

On Monday, at the National Theater, Miss Anderson, Miss Reed and Gielgud will be the notable acting attractions of "Medea," an adaptation of the Euripides drama freely prepared by Robinson Jeffers. Subordinate cast members include Richard Hylton, Don McHenry, Grace Mills, Hugh Franklin, Marian Seldes, others. Gielgud directed.

Tuesday, at the Booth Theater, "An Inspector Calls" will have at Broadway with Thomas Mitchell making a New York return. Melville Cooper, Doris Lloyd, John Buckmaster, Jack Merivale and Patricia Marmont, will back him up in a J. B. Priestley drama played in London in 1946 by the Old Vic repertory troupe. Sir Cedric Hardwicke is the director. The action is set in 1912 and concerns a servant girl whose degradation as the result of cruelty in a wealthy home is discovered by the "inspector."

Wednesday, at the Morosco Theater, John Van Druten's latest play, "The Druid Circle," premieres with Leo G. Carroll featured in a cast which also includes Boyd Crawford, Walter Starkey and Susan Douglas. Alfred De Liagre is the producer and the author is directing.

Incidentally, "An Inspector Calls" won its tenancy at the Booth because of the swift demise of "Duet for Two Hands," a casualty after seven performances. Next scheduled opening: "The Winslow Boy," by Terence Rattigan, October 29, a Theater Guild presentation.

Movies Going on Trial

1925 its efforts to "capture" the movie industry, but that the drive did not gain momentum until 1936.

"Since then," the report stated, "through its tireless, well-defined, and coordinated efforts, the Communist group in the motion picture industry has become one of the most influential forces in the industry."

Police Action Cited

THE investigators contended that communistic propaganda is inserted in "many" movies, especially short films and "message pictures." The latter were described as films containing scenes "wherein some communistic or social thought is intended to be conveyed." As examples, they cited police action against pickets and shots of police brutality.

The report charges that in New York a "message play" was financed by the American Government. It was the play "One Third of a Nation" which was enacted by the Federal Theater Project. The investigators declared that the play "attempted to show that one third of the people of this country were born in poverty and lived and died the same way."

The investigators maintained that this message was conveyed through the play, namely that "perhaps too many people live and starve in poverty under our system of Government."

Young Film Aspirants Try a New Trick

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (AP).—Two young film aspirants tried a new method of breaking into films. Reginald Pope, Jr., and Earl O. Griswold flew over the studios dropping pamphlets reading:

"Attention, all movie studios. Calling all talent depts. Pope and Griswold are here. We want a movie contract. Give us a chance—will ya?"

Nothing has been heard of Pope and Griswold since.

Alan Mowbray Makes His 250th Movie

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (AP).—Alan Mowbray is Hollywood's latest proof that life begins after 40.

His 250th movie, "The Main Street Kid," is soon to be released. He's just completed writing "The Lucky Ones" for Broadway production in November, and is putting finishing touches on a book of short stories, "More Fun Than Movies."

When he isn't busy, he gathers material for his own forthcoming radio show.

Catholic U. Offers New Play

NEW faces and old will balance out in the acting company of Catholic University's new play by Victoria Kuhn which opens October 26. Formerly known as "Metternich," the drama has been newly christened by the author "Rebel's Empire."

The role of Metternich will be enacted by veteran Dick Sykes, and that of Victor D'Urzi, Italian patriot, will be played by Arthur Conescu, previously seen in "Much Ado About Nothing," "The Zeal of Thy House" and "Now You See It." Robert Dietz, Robert Kirby and John Marzocco, who handle the remainder of the male roles, have all been seen before by University Theater audiences.

Newcomers to the stage include all the actresses in the company. Claire Quay plays Antonia, Metternich's wife, and Nadya Crushetsky appears as the chancellor's mother. Jean Heller, Kay Bettenbender and Mary K. Lundberg complete the company.

The production is being staged by Father Gilbert V. Hartke and Dr. Josephine Callan. Settings were designed by Don Gilman and are being executed by Technical Director James Waring.

Started as Extra

Hollywood. — George Marshall, Paramount director, is a veteran of 23 years' experience in Hollywood. He started his career as an extra.

Director Solves Problem of Braces

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (AP).—Thirteen-year-old Ted Donaldson feared braces on his teeth would stand in the way of his winning the title role in "Christopher Blake." But Director Peter Dogfrey took the braces on Master Donaldson's molars in stride.

He wrote them into the script.

Words in Script Give Producer Bad Time

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (AP).—"End of the Rainbow" is being shot at Republic, which is noted as the home of action pictures.

Bill Lundigan noted producer Allan Dwan frowning over the script one day and asked, "What's the matter—is the next scene a tough one?"

"It sure is," Dwan shot back. "It's got words in it."

Work, at Phillips, Reflects Solitude

Midnight Pervades Poe Mood

"Agate Rocks," water color by Elisabeth Poe, on exhibition at the Phillips Memorial Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

WHEN a person paints from inner compulsion, the work reflects a drive that is never evident in facile painting. Elisabeth Poe had no academic training to unlearn. She wrote constantly about other people's work, but there were no outside influences in her own.

Sunday painter is a term often applied to self-taught artists who take to easel and brush in their spare time. It suggests a holiday mood and setting—a painter comfortably settled on a green river bank on a warm spring day, with perhaps an admiring audience. It would be more apt to describe Elisabeth Poe as a midnight painter, which she was literally and figuratively. Her dark improvisation in water color dwelt constantly on solitude and the mysteries of an unknown, uninhabited world. The minor key was sustained throughout.

It seems most appropriate that the Phillips Memorial Gallery would be the setting for a show in tribute to her memory. Elisabeth Poe might never have pursued her painting at all if it were not for the encouragement of the late C. Law Watkins, former director of the Phillips Art School. When she died last month at the age of 60, she had only been painting in earnest for a little over a decade. She would have been utterly lost in a hard-boiled milieu dominated by art dealers and self-seeking professionals.

Thanks to the kind of leadership that is found at the Phillips Gallery, a strange talent such as this has a chance for recognition in Washington. In a community where attempts to unify art activity are constantly being wrecked by divisions of opinion, it is well to remember that there is less concern here than in most places for what one ought to think.

IN ADDITION to the Poe exhibition, the Gallery is showing some early water colors by Robert Gates, who is now teaching at American University. Besides landscapes of Washington and vicinity, there are studies made during a stay in the Virgin Islands and on a subsequent trip to Colorado, where Gates worked one summer with Henry Varnum Poor. The small group really serves as prelude to a forthcoming one-man show at the United Nations Club, when the artist's more recent paintings will be exhibited.

Even if you are a habitue, do not leave without a survey of the permanent collection, rearranged and with many new additions. Conspicuous are works by the modern British artists, Henry Moore and John Piper, and the canvas of tigers by the Arc de Triomphe by the late Christopher Wood. Henry Moore's sculpture, cast in bronze, is a typical figure composition of the type that caused raised eyebrows at his New York show. The Piper, in chalk white, black and tan, is an effective ghostlike study with considerable impact.

The British, incidentally, are having an outstanding success with a distinctly unorthodox and progressive show of contemporary art now touring the United States. This seems ironic in view of the fact that United States shows of similar character were officially halted from distribution abroad.

The Phillips Gallery is also showing an arresting oil by Joseph Gerard, a little known American artist whose work was purchased from the Corcoran Biennial of last spring. On loan are recent oils by Hans Moller, a German artist introduced to this country by Karl Nierendorff.

THIS month the Arts Club is honoring six if its members with a special exhibition giving generous representation to each. The show consists of oils and waters and pastels by Charles Bittinger, Clara Saunders, Gladys Milligan, Henry Olson, Theodora Kane and Omar Carrington, all of whom are well-known painters in the District.

Bittinger's oil of the atomic bomb explosion at Bikini, previously shown by the Navy, is included in the group. Omar Carrington's romantic landscapes and Henry Olson's incisive water colors offer pleasing contrast.

Gladys Milligan and Clara Saunders have a number of portraits, in addition to still lifes and landscapes. Most of Theodora Kane's paintings recall her recent trip to Mexico.

Mrs. Kane also has a show at the United Nations Club, her first in several years. Again the subject-matter is almost wholly Mexican and familiar themes recur. Those who remember the painter's earlier work will note much greater freedom in the current exhibition.

Notes on Area Art Activity

NEW EXHIBITIONS in Washington include paintings, drawings and modelings by pupils of the Children's Art Center, and animal painting and sculpture by contemporary artists at American University, Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. The Barnet-Aden Gallery has a one-man show by Charles White, distinguished Negro painter. White, winner of an Art Institute of Chicago scholarship in 1937, was artist-in-residence at Howard University here in 1945. He is now living in New York.

"OPERATION PALETTE," an exhibit of Navy art by Navy combat artists, will be on display at the Trans-Lux Theater as part of Navy Day observances. The theater will be virtually transformed into an art gallery for the exhibition.

An "open house" free exhibit will take place next Sunday from 10 a. m. until 1 p. m. Some 60 paintings by Navy combat artists will be on display.

SMARTEST-LOOKING gallery in town is the new Bush and Weeks establishment at 2010 S st. nw., where William Calfee and Pietro Lazzari share space in the opening exhibit. While both artists have done more subjective work, particular stress is laid here on the decorative and sophisticated. The show lives up to its setting. It is hard to see how it could have been better selected or installed.

New solo exhibition at the Public Library is by Beryl Garrott. Her work examplifies her belief in color and movement, rather than drawing, as the basis of modern art, though one questions whether she means the complete divorce implicit in her statement. Many will dispute her view that drawing is merely the "mechanical" basis of art, "the background for the creative emotional appeal of form and color." In any event, the water colors seem by far the most successful section, several having the stimulating effects of a good tonic.

Show Begins Tonight

Straight Reporting, No Hoopla Is Bob Allen's Goal on Radio

"STRAIGHT, impersonal reporting with no hoopla" is what Robert S. Allen prides himself in, and that's the approach he plans to use for his air series which begins tonight at 7:45 over WINX and WINX-FM. (After the football season closes, the broadcasts will be scheduled during the afternoon.)

ALLEN

The 15-minute weekly series on "significant national and foreign news" will bring Allen's voice back to listeners all over the country after a five-and-a-half-year silence, since it will be transmitted "live" to WOR in New York and sent by transcription to more than 50 other stations.

Ed Hart, who ships his own "Is Congress Doing the Job?" shows around the country, will handle the Allen distribution.

ALREADY firmly reestablished in the newspaper business and as an author ("Our Fair City" and "Lucky Forward") after brilliant war service, Allen gets back into the third phase of his activity with enthusiasm.

In spite of the fact that he still gets most satisfaction from seeing a story in print, Allen feels that "radio has a terrific impact."

"You just lay it in the audience's lap," he says. "There's no effort required of the listener—no pages to turn."

"There's a much larger potential audience and a faster and more powerful impact possible with radio," Allen says, and cites the effect that Walter Winchell, Drew Pearson and Raymond Swing have.

Without disparaging the showmanship used on some radio shows, Allen says he won't go in for "the razzle dazzle." No little black books, no Morse code tickers, no predictions of things to come. "No punditing," he says with a smile.

But he does plan to use his famous "exclusives."

The Washington Philatelist

Philately Gaining In Public Libraries

By William M. Stuart

PUBLIC interest in philatelic literature has been increasing lately. The daily press, after years of careful examination, finally decided stamps should be classified as news, as well as specialized information. Aside from weekly and monthly philatelic magazines, more than 700 newspapers carry stamp news. Hundreds of books have been written about stamps; others are coming out monthly.

All this is important to advanced philatelists, as well as to collectors, but more important is the evidence of increased interest in stamps by libraries. Of course, all collectors are unable to acquire a philatelic library, but many cities are now adding philatelic literature to their established libraries.

This fact is emphasized by acquisition of the famous library of the late Eugene Klein by the Free Library of Philadelphia. The Klein library is quite large and includes standard handbooks on stamps of the United States and British and French colonies, as well as catalogues, old pamphlets and works in foreign languages. The Library of Congress has a valuable section on stamps and the Washington Public Library a philatelic list to be proud of.

Belgium has issued two high value semipostal air mails. These were in honor of the Bastogne Memorial to be erected with funds derived from the stamps. The two denominations have been overprinted in black, "Hommage a Roosevelt." The stamps are 17.50 francs plus 62.50 fr., very high values. The colors are dull gray and dull brown.

The philatelic division of American Airlines, 100 East 42d st., New York 17, N. Y., has issued a list of first-flight covers, F A M 24, and collectors may receive a copy by writing the division. Many fine covers are still available.

Air mail service will be inaugurated November 1 at Mansfield and Zanesville, Ohio, and Richmond, Ind., on route A M 2, and at Springfield, Ill., on route A M 4. Special cachets will be provided for Mansfield and Zanesville but none at Springfield, as a cachet has previously been furnished.

Election at Pentagon

THE Pentagon Philatelic Society has elected the following officers: President, Lieut. Col. L. F. Shull; vice president, Maj. James T. DeVoss; secretary, James H. Bower, 1320 Fort Stevens dr. nw.; treasurer, Capt. W. G. Shaw; governing board, Robert P. Alexander, Lieut. Col. Crawford L. Donohugh and Rolston Lyon. The next meeting will be held November 6 in the General Officers Dining Room, Pentagon.

The 3-cent commemorative stamp honoring the frigate Constitution will be released at the Charlestown Navy Yard, Boston, Tuesday. There will be six plates numbered as follows: 23 710, 23 711, 23 712, 23 713, 23 714 and 23 715. The plates are electric eye convertible.

A new 3-cent commemorative stamp honoring the Everglades National Park in Florida is due in December on the occasion of the dedication of the Park.

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, Ellery Denison presiding. The Bourse was the favorite spot for the members and many new issues were readily sold. There seems to be a let-up on sales of Roosevelt stamps at this time. At the meeting on Tuesday evening an auction will be held and all collectors are invited to attend. Manager Casey asks that material be turned in as early as possible. The meeting will be held in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

The George Washington Carver 3-cent commemorative stamp will be issued January 5 at Tuskegee, Ala.

Luxembourg will issue on October 24 two sets of commemorative stamps honoring Gen. George S. Patton. There will be four values and two designs. Five sets will be the minimum sold.

Battle of the Girl Disc Jockeys

It's Glamour vs. Humor

By Sonia Stein

First candidate for the Nation's most glamorous disc jockey, Natalie Towle is WINX' "Weekend Dance Party" hostess

Who's the Nation's most glamorous disc jockey?

Natalie Towle, WINX' new lady platter spinner, has been chosen as first nominee by Radio Best in that magazine's first issue. And the magazine offers a five-by-five inch glamour picture of Natalie's nicely molded face and shoulders to back up its nomination. It will take some slick pictures of some slick punkins to compete with her.

Yet right here on home base, at WGAY in Silver Spring, there's another girl disc jockey who has already been given a title hands down.

"Florence, the Girl Disc Jockey," has been elected "Miss Electron of 1947" by the students at Bliss Electrical School. "The definition of an electron seems to suit her personality," said the boys. Definition: an electron is a small, negatively charged particle extremely dynamic when in motion.

Miss Ammunition Dump?

FLORENCE also claims, but cannot prove, that she was the Army's choice for Miss Ammunition Dump during the war.

As cute as the proverbial button, and as earthy as Natalie is ethereal, Florence bypasses glamour for fun.

"I have changed the way I wear my hair," she announces to her audience. "The way it was before I looked like an old lady. Now I look like an old man."

This particular Florencism, delivered with her delicious sense of timing, piled two hysterical listeners into the ditch one morning as they drove to work.

For Florence is a morning man, er—woman. From 7:30 to 9 a. m. she brightens the dim dawn.

She gives even the hardy perennial, Arthur Godfrey, a run for his money. Like Godfrey, she's redheaded and the audience knows all about it.

FLORENCE

"What has he got I haven't got?" she demands.

"Godfrey's got red hair. I've got red hair.

"Godfrey plays records. I play records.

"Godfrey was in the Navy. I was in the Navy.

"Godfrey makes $8000 a week. I have red hair."

She's No Bergman

FLORENCE has the kiss of Brooklyn on her every word. Born in Baltimore, she was "bred and buttered" in Brooklyn and, as her current boss told her, "is not exactly the Ingrid Bergman type."

This was a crushing blow to Florence, who was "desirous of being a dramatic actress." But it is part of what makes her sound both wise and wistful when she sighs over a record of "Je Vous Aime" and says:

"Gee, I wish I could understand French." And then taken unaware by the idea, "Gee, I wish I could understand English!"

Natalie, on the other hand, was born in Brooklyn but bred by a Boston mother and has a voice like cream.

While Florence always wound up as the sound effects man in her dramatic classes, Natalie was minoring in radio and drama at Stanford University. (And majoring in archeology, no less.)

She had finesse enough to be fashion commentator for an exclusive Palm Springs women's shop and fine enough diction to be hired as reader for a famous professor of philosophy whose sight was failing.

On the other hand, lest you think she's "la-de-da" as she expresses it, she's loaded 100-pound sacks of mail for the Pennsylvania Railroad and processed fruit in a cannery. (And been a nightclub singer, and a social service worker, and a switchboard operator and a radio director of an advertising agency and television actress and . . . Catch on?)

And She Had an Ad

Perhaps most indicative of all is the fact that she and a fellow worker at the Army Signal Corps during the war inserted THE advertisement of the year in The Washington Post.

"Awfully personal, terribly in earnest. Wanted: Purchaser for 11 rolls of bright green toilet paper. It does not go with our iridescent seat. Two abashed amateur interior decorators."

They not only got a purchaser, but some highly amusing letters.

Natalie got into the disc jockey business through another Post ad. Member of a little theater group which dredged up a WWDC disc jockey as an actor through an ad, Natalie became his secretary, then music librarian, copy writer, etc.

The same glamour picture that won her Radio Best magazine's nomination was one of the factors in convincing WWDC she'd be a good disc jockey. Kind of by indirect reasoning you might say.

And, curiously, it's the picture in the magazine that reminded Natalie's onetime sponsor on WWDC that he had a good thing there. So in cooperation with another sponsor, he put her on WINX with a Friday and Saturday night dance party show.

Dead o' Night

NEVER fear, those soft and silky tones of Natalie's aren't unwrapped until the sun's well down. She airs for WINX from midnight to 1 a. m. those two nights.

The records she chooses are strictly for a dancing party. Both her sponsors fit right into the party idea. One of them sells records and the other will bring party food, right to your door at the flip of a telephone dial.

Natalie keeps her comments brief and to the point. Right to the point of the commercial. There's little other chatter, but that leaves more time for the records, she figures.

(On the subject of commercials, I keep wondering. If I were a hostess with some soggy cottage cheese and water cress sandwiches in my refrigerator, would I dare let my guests listen to a program offering fried chicken and hot biscuits?)

Currently, Natalie is working by day behind a magazine and cigar counter in a hotel (Your purchase free if we forget to say thank you) and sells the magazine with her picture in it. Nobody has recognized her.

Switch Jockey, Too

BY DAY, after Florence gets her show on the road, she takes over WGAY's switchboard and clerical duties. In fact, that's how she got her foot in the door.

Spurned as a dramatic star—partly because WGAY produces no dramas—Florence was prevailed upon to act as a secretary because the station was desperate. Hired on May 11, Florence had so endeared herself to her bosses by June 11 that they gave her an afternoon show to play with. On August 11 they promoted her to the tough but exciting morning show.

"Who knows what'll happen on November 11?" chuckles Florence. "Anyway," she muses, "my typing has improved a lot."

WGAY, which obviously doesn't think all of Florence's skill lies in her fingertips, has spent money and effort publicizing "Florence, with the hair on top."

Clucking over her scrapbook she says, "With all this tremendous build up—everyone knockin' themselves out—I just wish I had talent."

Well, if it's not talent she's got, it's a ripsnorting substitute.

Bidu Sayao Sings Today

"HARVEST OF STARS" will grow to twice its usual size today to accommodate the special program planned in honor of International Harvester's "100 Years in Chicago."

Walter Huston will narrate a documentary drama on the company's Chicago history, and Bidu Sayao, Met soprano, will join Tenor James Melton in "Libiamo" from "La Traviata." The 60-minute show will be heard at 2 p. m. over WRC-NBC.

Parkyakarkus returns to the air tonight at 9 over WOL-Mutual with Betty Rhodes, Sheldon Leonard and Elliott Lewis as support.

Col. Robert S. Allen returns to the air tonight, after a five-year absence, over WINX and WINX-FM at 7:45. (See page 3, column 4.)

The "Quiz Kids" contest on "What America Means to Me" begins this afternoon at 4 over WRC-NBC. Approximately $20,000 in scholarships and cash are involved.

WTTG to Telecast 'Small Fry' Program

"Small Fry," the famous variety program for tiny tots with television sets, will be broadcast from WTTG Wednesday night. A daily WTTG-DuMont feature, it is usually broadcast from New York.

"Big Brother" Bob Emery will be host to as many members of the local "Small Fry Club" as can be wedged into the WTTG studio in the Hotel Harrington, Wednesday at 7 p. m.

Bales to Begin New Music Tour

Richard Bales begins another guided tour "Inside of Music" tomorrow night at 10 over WOL. Conductor of the National Gallery of Art concerts, and the National Symphony summer concerts, Bales believes that knowledge of music's construction and history increases the listener's appreciation. "People who are watching a football game understand the plays," he points out.

This is Bales second year on WOL with his informative program which uses musical selections to illustrate the material narrated by the young conductor.

Bales, a native of Alexandria, was one of five musicians named in 1940 to study under Koussevitzky.

WWDC Gives Air Time to Other Stations

EVER HEAR of a radio station plugging another station? WWDC's "Salute to Radio", which goes into its third session this afternoon at 5:15, comes awfully close to it.

Dreamed up by Rick La Falce, public relations man for the station, the series consists of 13 transcriptions from other stations around the country. The programs selected are representative of the area from which they come. This afternoon's show will be a dramatic program taken from a Chicago station.

La Falce has been asked by a number of stations if they may have the series as soon as he has finished with it, and he is now making arrangements to pass the discs around. It will be an expense to WWDC, but "It's our baby and babies cost money," he says.

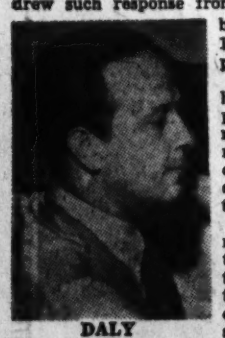
Tuesday night at 8:15 another WWDC show of almost diametrically opposite purpose gets under way. "Designed to capture the personality of people and places in Washington," the new show will be called "Our Home Town."

Producer Bert Libin will use human interest stories about people in odd jobs, little-known stories about historic shrines, etc. Much of it will be picked up outside the studio on a wire recorder.

Suggestions from listeners for typically Washington story possibilities are welcome. This show will alternate with Fred Hoffman's "District Forum" in the Tuesday period.

CBS Is Bringing Back Its Replays of History

"CBS WAS THERE." It went, but now it's here again. The eight-week series of historic events presented newscast-style which CBS used as a summer replacement, drew such response from the public that it is being brought back Tuesday night at 10:30 over WTOP-CBS on a permanent basis.



DALY

When the last of the summer broadcasts was over, letters poured in saying: "The show must go on." Some were indignant, some pleading. Some calmly assumed it would, of course, be on again and wanted to know when.

The technique is to take a microphone and announcers to the bridge of Columbus' flagship, the inside courtyard of the Bastille, the courtroom in Salem during the witch trials, the coliseum of Pompeii during the eruption of a volcano. The narrator (John Daly is narrator in chief) describes the incidents as they happen—many long years ago.

This bit of radio legerdemain makes what the fan mail calls "exciting" entertainment.

The staff works madly under the direction of Producer-Director Robert Lewis Shayon, to make the half-hour scripts as accurate as possible, but it expects to hear from some of the population after "The Battle of Gettysburg," which will take place this Tuesday night at 10:30, your school book notwithstanding.

ABC IS rumored to be lining up a Monday night two-hour period with Charles Boyer, Joan Crawford, Eddie Bracken and Donald O'Conner dividing the time . . . Mickey Rooney is dickering with sponsors about a traveling show which would be broadcast from a different college campus every week.

Jeff Morrow, radio actor, has killed his wife 43 times. In the part of Dick Tracy, Morrow has encountered his actress wife, Anna Karen, 200 times. Every time she's been the villainess and 43 times he's had to do her in.

On just one broadcast over WOL-Mutual, the emcee of "Heart's Desire" read a letter from a woman in Palisades, Colo., asking help in getting a bell for the new church. The emcee suggested each listener send in a penny. "Heart's Desire" collected 15,000 pennies.

Leo Durocher is said to be considering radio offers . . . There's a new producing firm which will prepare comic strips for use on television . . . Eddie Cantor's cast has been notified to learn to memorize scripts so they can tackle television later this season.

Raymond Swing will broadcast his WMAL-ABC commentary programs from different cities throughout the country as he makes a four-month lecture tour.

Guy Named Joe To Test Himself With Whiteman

Would a rose by any name smell as sweet?

Most entertainers know that the reputations they've built over the years produce almost as much of the applause as their actual performances do. One local singer got curious to see what kind of reception he'd get under an assumed name.

So, choosing Paul Whiteman's "On Stage America" as his favorite of the network shows now offering a showcase to professional performers ready for the big time, "Joe Grayson" will be heard over WMAL-ABC tomorrow night at 8.

Now appearing daily on a local station, "Grayson" has had plenty of network experience and he doesn't need the recording contract that frequently results from appearances on Whiteman's show.

He's just awfully curious to see if the record company that now has him under contract will come running to sign him up under a different name.

Let There Be Some Light!

By Paul Hume

THERE seems to be some correspondence on various subjects which needs cleaning up and today is as good a day as any to do it.

HUME

To be touched upon briefly are the following: the relative greatness of Tschaikowsky and Beethoven; the qualifications for music criticism; Washington's lack of adequate concert halls and auditoriums; the shortcomings of one of the music critics of The Washington Post.

If after all this you have any further light to shed upon these or other allied ideas, shed away. We'll be glad to print anything printable.

John Thornton Dunn of Arlington asks for an opinion on the proposition that "Tschaikowsky's music is greater than that of Beethoven." The fundamental question here is of course not one of Tschaikowsky and Beethoven, or of any other master of music compared with another. Rather we must consider the elements which constitute greatness in music or in any art form.

In attempting to assess relative degrees of genius, it is both fair and advisable to examine that which a composer sets out to achieve. Merely because Wagner chose to confine himself almost exclusively to operatic composition can we place him on a lower pedestal than, say, Mozart, who wrote not only great operas but also some of the world's finest symphonies, chamber works, and other kinds of masterpieces.

It is a truism to point out that Mozart's genius was of greater breadth than Wagner's, but that fact does not in itself mean that Mozart was a greater composer.

Returning to Tschaikowsky and Beethoven, public favor, a treacherous guide to quality, rates both composers at the top. We have Beethoven writing more successfully in a greater number of forms than Tschaikowsky, whose only chamber work of general acquaintance cannot be mentioned in comparison with the chamber writings of the German genius. So, too, though Beethoven completed only one opera, to Tschaikowsky's ten, a growing appreciation of Fidelio stands well above dwindling interest in even the best of Tschaikowsky's.

But we must reach the esthetic question which underlies this whole discussion: if two men succeed equally in attaining their ends then is not the final worth of the two determined by the value of the ends themselves?

If this be so, who is to decide that the ends of one great servant of music are less worthy than those of another? (At this point we leave this subject, which now enters the realm of artistic morality and esthetics.)

PHYLLIS KESSINGER of Clifton Forge, Va., puts it this way: "Aside from the fact that the would-be critic has had a whole life of musical background and experience in journalism, what other qualities are necessary or desirable? What are the opportunities today? Are women as readily accepted as men?"

My dear Miss Kesssinger, how old do you think one has to be to become a music critic, or do you admit that one can live a "whole life" in 31 years? Still, you're right when you imply that one's life should be filled with music in order to acquire as broad an acquaintance with the whole realm of the art as possible. It is not enough to listen to the music you know, or like, or the kind of compositions (symphonies, concertos, operas, etc.) you prefer.

Virgil Thomson, brilliant composer-critic of the New York Herald Tribune was asked to name the ingredients of a music critic and his answer was short: "Learn everything you can about music, and learn to write."

Few of us attain Thomson-skill in either realm, but there's the goal. That means packing away elementary harmony, theory, counterpoint, detailed musical history, esthetics, analyses and all the other matters you can study either by yourself or under guidance.

And it means listening to music ceaselessly, thoughtfully, and because you love it. It means hearing myriad performances of Carmen, Aida, Trovatore, Traviata, Lohengrin, and all the rest of the standard repertoire, and then surprising yourself by finding performances of Schwanda, Iphigenia in Tauris, Salome, Cosi fan Tutte, Fidelio, and dozens of other treasures which are too much hidden from public view.

It means to practice personal assessments of varying performances of the Appassionata Sonata, or of "Dich, teure Halle," after discovering for yourself what standards of performance you feel to be essential. It means knowing through personal research those neglected works, old and new, for piano, violin, organ, singers, and orchestra which you would recommend when asked "just what would you do if it were your program?"

Those are some of the things to keep in mind. The opportunities? Judging from the rising tide of concerts, music on the radio, on records, and in new surroundings, the opportunities must also be increasing. For as people go to concerts, and buy records, and hear music, they seem to want to read what someone else thinks about it all.

Women are fully as "accepted" as men. The finest critic in Chicago today and for some years past, is a woman whose influence and ability are matched by her solid grounding in the fields of music and journalism.

After all that it seems appropriate to quote from a recent anonymous post-card: "Your write up of the —— concert was just too nasty nice for words. What a nerve you have to even attempt to criticize—you whose ignorance stands out in anything you write. Miss —— and her accompanist were both beyond you. All I can say is, The Post is hard up to even employ the likes of you—'cause you stink, brother."

AND OUR last letter for today, in part, "I am a New Yorker, willingly transported to the fertile ground of Washington—forever more, I hope. I love this city for what it should be. I am distressed to find this Nation's Capital so immature in musical promotion. I've studied and known the musical history of Washington, and I admit that the war years following the lean years have made great strides for the musical development of this city—but—there is definitely need for a suitable concert hall. At least one that will welcome the Opera, Ballet, and Concert-Artists. I am sufficiently acquainted with the impossibilities of Constitution Hall as the proper background for music, and if I can in any way assist in the germ of a developing idea, I would be delighted to help."

Bring on your ideas for new concert halls, music criticism, and relative standings in the major league of Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, and your own especial favorites.

Good Prints Are Your Goal, And Here's How to Get Them

By Ollie Atkins

ALL photographers who have ever inspected a display of salon prints will notice that even at this high level you can pick out over and underdeveloped prints, see "burned-in" areas, "fake" skies, poor spotting and print retouching.

There is too much sloppy printing.

No matter what your ability as a photographer, you will make negatives of varied contrasts and density. The very nature of your photographic subject will impel you to be an artful printer even with the so-called "perfect" negative.

The final end in photography is to produce beautiful prints and to this subject we devote today's column.

Chemicals must be at correct temperature. This means 68 degrees. Temperature should never rise over 70. Place the negative in the enlarger so no white light escapes around the edges of the film. This stray light will often fog the paper and on some easels will reflect tiny lines from the metal edges of the easel onto sides of the paper.

THE negative must be well dusted and the glass supports in the negative carrier should be free from lint and fingerprints. Now you are ready to print. Amateurs tend to use test strips to save paper and there is certainly no objection to this. However, the fact that a test strip looks good does not mean the entire print will be good with the same exposure. Dodging and burning-in are necessary on almost every print. The only sure way to determine how much of each is necessary is to try a print using your common sense to hold back some areas and allow extra light on others.

A lovely fall picture with simple props but lots of imagination is this Speed Graphic picture made with natural morning light with a Speed Graphic 4x5 Super Panchro type B film at 1/25 F/11

Paper contrast is another key to beautiful printing. My observation is that amateurs tend to use papers too soft in contrast. Your experienced eye is a good guide for selection of paper contrast, but there will be many occasions when you will have to make two prints on different contrasts to determine the correct paper.

I have found a couple of excellent devices to assist me in printing. One is called the Willo Visible Dodger, the other, the Willo Dodgette Set—both items are of a red translucent plastic which allows just red light to pass. You can see exactly what you are doing with these gadgets. The "dodger" is a large piece of the material with adjustable holes which permit you to "burn-in" overexposed areas of almost any size or shape. With the "dodgette" you can hold back light from underexposed sections with multiformed pieces held over the print with a narrow wire handle.

YOUR perfectly exposed and dodged print now goes into the developer. Correct time for full development is one and a half minutes. Too little will produce brown prints with a mottled effect while too much development will reduce proper print contrast and fog the paper.

I find it a good idea to keep a small glass of undiluted developer beside the print developing tray and when faces and other overexposed parts of the print are slow in reaching proper quality you can force those parts a little by applying the strong solution directly to the area with your fingers. Do not use too much though, lest the strong developer run off the section needing it and streak the rest of the print. A clever operator can use short-stop in the same manner to hold back underexposed sections.

Be sure to properly fix and wash the print after development. After drying wipe lint from the surface and examine it carefully for spotting needs. It is not often you will turn out a print which needs no spotting. With your etching knife or corner of a razor blade pare off the dark spots and with the spotting colors and a tiny-tipped brush fill in the light defects to match surrounding density. Now your print is ready for mounting—but be sure to tack on the mounting tissue before trimming off print borders.

Astrid Varnay Appears With Symphony Today

FIRSTS are still arriving on our musical landscape.

This week finds the opening of the National Symphony Sunday afternoon series, with Astrid Varnay as soloist, the first concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Howard University's brilliant opener. The staid repertoire provides every bit of food for both orchestral concerts, but the singers for the week, Miklos Gafni and John Yard, include more than a few unfamiliar and excellent contributions on their lists.

MISS VARNAY

The program for Howard University by the Cambridge Collegium Musicum, Wolfe Wolfinsohn, Iwan d'Archambeau, and Erwin Bodky, violin, cello, and harpsicord, respectively, is of sterling worth and exciting promise. Two pianists round out the fare for the days ahead, with Barbershopping of the most vigorous propounding occupying seats usually reserved for the mighty, in other words, Constitution Hall.

Our faithful readers will find the second of our weekly program listings in another column today. In addition to this information, we are now listing concerts for the week ahead. All details on programs and coming concerts should be on our desk by Tuesday morning.

Zino Francescatti, than whom we know no finer violinist today, plays next Sunday afternoon. Other recent announcements include word of another concert to be presented to Washington from the Record and Transcription Fund of the local chapter of the American Federation of Musicians. This will come on Wednesday, November 5, when Harriett Serr, Stanley Weiner, and Phyllis Hoyland appear in Constitution Hall with an orchestra under the direction of Mishel Piastro.

Miss Serr, who will play the E flat Piano Concerto of Beethoven, won the Chamber Music Guild's 1947 annual auditions. Miss Hoyland, who won the 1946 auditions, was also one of four finalists in the recent "Carnegie Hall" auditions in Washington.

Word from the Felicia Rybier Music Club foretells a program by Aurora Mauro-Cottone, New York pianist, to be heard at the Arts Club on November 17. Other artists, not yet announced, are scheduled for later dates, in addition to the usual recitals at the club headquarters.

Stokowski Offers Novelties

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Leopold Stokowski, who is conducting the first four weeks of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony's 106th season, is introducing considerable modern music during his tenure.

His opening week program consisted of Bach, Brahms, Debussy and Ravel, but succeeding weeks are seeing several novelties.

Among them are the premiere of Elie Seigmeister's First Symphony, the first performance in symphonic form of Marion Bauer's "Sun Splendour"; the first New York performance of Khatchatourian's "Masquerade" Suite; the first Philharmonic performances of Messiaen's "L'Ascension"; and Prairie Night and Celebration Dance from Copland's "Billy the Kid," the Shostakovich prelude in E flat minor, and Griffes' White Peacock.

Soloists under Stokowski include Nathan Milstein, violinist, and Myra Hess, pianist. The latter has not been heard with the orchestra in more than 10 years.

Feature for Children

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony is starting a new feature this season, a series for children under 9 years of age. The series will be in addition to the regular Young People's Concerts given for older child-

New Tourel Discs Reaffirm Her Talent

ROSSINI: Arias from Semiramide, Italians in Algiers, Cinderella, and the Barber of Seville. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, with Metropolitan Opera Orchestra under Pietro Cimara. Columbia 691. $4.60.

MISS TOUREL

Apparently Jennie Tourel can do no wrong. At least we have no record of her erring publicly in the years that she has been in this country. In this, her third solo album of records, she proves herself a singer without equal as she traverses some of the most beautiful and difficult music in opera.

Rapid runs, two-octave scales, high and low notes of all volumes, and a flashing staccato alternating with perfectly sustained legato phrases remind us that Rossini wrote these arias for just such a voice as this. Furthermore, it is our opinion that he was darn lucky if he had as fine a singer a century ago.

There is no "best" or less than that in this album. Everything is what you wish for if you have the imagination to dream about great singing. Not only is the vocalization superb, but the text is accented, underlined, and made to sparkle by virtue of the magnificence of Tourel's accomplishments. To her records of songs by Villa-Lobos and Rachmaninoff, you must now add these by Rossini. Accompaniments by the Met Orchestra under Pietro Cimara are all that is needed.

MOZART: Horn Concerto No. 4 in E Flat. Dennis Brain, with Halle Orchestra, conductor not identified. Columbia X 285. $3.35. Mozart wrote four horn concertos, all in the same key, for one of those close friends who often inspired composers to add treasures to the literature of some particular instrument. Fully exploiting the range and color of the difficult horn, the concerto is good, straight-forward writing, but less interesting to me than the third work in this form. Dennis Brain, famous in this country as in his own land, plays the horn with perfect polish. It is most ungracious of Columbia not to identify the conductor on this set. We suspect it to be either Sargent or Barbirolli. Fine recording.

Prospectors Hunt 'Lost' Gold Mine

By Lloyd Bulmur

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—The story of a lost gold mine in the Pitt River area near here is slowly unfolding. Two separate parties are reported "hot on the trail."

The first attempt was made by helicopter when a city man chartered the aircraft. Although officials of the airline would not reveal the destination, hunters and fishermen in the Pitt area reported seeing the craft in their vicinity the day it was chartered.

The other attempt is being made by a Vancouver, B. C., sign painter who is reported to have a map of the area, but he says he will not be going out until next spring

Story of Bloodshed

THE STORY of the mine is one of bloodshed, and the stoical attitude of an Indian who dies on the gallows refusing to tell where the gold could be found.

It started around the turn of the 20th century, when a lonely prospector found gold nuggets the size of walnuts near Pitt Lake. The prospector returned to New Westminster but failed to register his claim. He was found murdered a short time later.

An Indian, Jim Slummock, who had been a guide for the old prospector, was tried for the murder and sentenced to be hanged. The location of the mine went with him to the grave.

The story of the mine caused much speculation and in 1903, a veteran Alaskan prospector, John Jackson, searched for the lost hoard. He brought back gold, but the ordeal of the trip was too much and he died without revealing the location of his find.

Letter Gives Clew

ON HIS deathbed, he wrote to a man called Doctor Hall. A copy of that letter came into the sign painter's hands in 1928.

The sign painter says the mine is described as being less than 20 miles from the head of the Pitt River, where the river flows down a canyon and disappears. The canyon is guarded by three mountains standing sentinel over the hidden treasure.

The Vancouver man reports he found the three peaks this summer, but was unable to enter the canyon and river bed because of ice and snow.

Tough Time in Paris

$2.40 Eggs, No Butter Presage a Hard Winter

By Dudley Harmon

PARIS, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Three years after liberation, Parisians are looking ahead to a bad winter.

Prices were high enough when this reporter was last in Paris a year ago. During the past few months they have shot up still more in many categories.

Parisians tell the newly arrived American that they now spend from two-thirds to three-quarters of their income for food alone.

Yet, they say ironically, their annual rent often costs only a little more than the sums they spend on newspapers and magazines.

A strict control on unfurnished apartments holds rent down to a sum which would buy only ten meals in a first class restaurant.

"It's typical of the lack of balance in France today," one woman told the United Press. "Take clothing, also. Materials are more plentiful and much cheaper than a year ago. But wages have increased and a dress still costs the same as last year."

A tour through the Latin Quarter, not a wealthy section of the city, shows eggs for sale at 22 francs apiece, or about $2.40 a dozen. Inferior hamburger costs the equivalent of $1.50 a pound. A dry cleaner who charged 130 francs a year ago asks 250 today.

Because of the summer's drought, many children cannot get milk. Butter was 500 francs a pound or about $4, when last seen on the market. But the waiter on the boat train from Cherbourg said with a shrug that "you can't find butter today in all France."

Much of the price increase occurred within the past two months. Bread increased 24 per cent during September. Milk went up 91 per cent. Meat is anywhere from 40 to 80 per cent higher than it was in July.

Parisians blame bad administration, the ever-present black market, the rightists, or the Communists, depending on their political point of view.

Caboose Goes Modern

LINCOLN, Nebr., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Casey Jones would wonder what they've done to the old caboose.

Symbol of railroading for years, it is being modernized, filled with expensive electrical equipment and promoted out of the category of a train-crew flophouse.

It started when engine-to-caboose communications were installed on the Burlington's 22-mile stretch between Denver and McCook, Nebr. Cost of the new electrically equipped cabooses was too prohibitive to maintain the old practice of changing them at every division point.

Traditionally, cabooses stayed with the crews to provide eating and sleeping facilities. Now, the crew leaves the caboose and is met by a sleek station wagon, which whisks the boys to a fancy dormitory. The caboose goes all the way through with the engine, successive new crews boarding at each division point.

There's not so much hand-waving any more, either. The conductor, at the press of a button, can communicate with the engineer without leaving his seat.

Cairo-to-Cape Town Tourist Route to Reopen Next Year

The 10,000-mile route through Africa, from Cairo to Cape Town, will again be open to American pleasure travelers this winter, it is announced by Thos. Cook & Son, who have arranged the first postwar "Cairo to Cape Town Safari" scheduled to leave on Jonuary 17 next.

The safari from one end of Africa to the other combines transportation by rail, Nile River steamers, automobiles and specially-chartered airplanes, and comprises 91 days of travel from Cairo to Cape Town.

Special features in this year's safari are visits to Ripon Falls, the source of the Nile; the Ituri Forest, jungle home of the pygmies; the Albert National Park, principal wild game reserve of the Belgian Congo; the King of Ruanda at Astrida, the Great African Rift Valey and Mountains of the Moon, Mount Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest peak, 20,000 feet high; the lion country of Kenya Colony and Tanganyika.

Bermuda Man Fights Against Discrimination

Hamilton, Bermuda, Oct. 18 (U.P.). Sir Howard Trott, president of the Bermuda Hotels Association, says that his organization will shortly announce a policy of absolute non-discrimination towards tourists here.

Speaking before an advertising and promotion conference, Sir Howard referred to the "unfortunate situation in which we are told that certain travel agents are boycotting Bermuda." He asked transportation companies to bear with the hotel association, in the assurance that they will have a definite policy to their satisfaction, before the end of the month.

"It has only been during the last year that this much vexed situation has arisen. The fires have been well stoked. I don't know how they have been so well stoked," he said.

"I do not think there are any hotels, except one, who are discriminating against visitors."

Truman in Minnesota—But President Is Here

A correspondent for an out-of-town newspaper contributes the following item, but says that I shouldn't use his name, because he doesn't want his publisher to know he has so much time on his hands:

"Truman is in Minnesota, Ross is in California, Marshall in Arkansas, Clark in Colorado, Snyder in Texas, Harriman in Tennessee, Anderson in Alabama, Vinson in Oklahoma, Young in Arizona, Mason in Illinois, and Barrett in Minnesota.

"But the Federal and local governments go on as usual, for all of these are cities which are listed in the United States Official Postal Guide."

SINK YOUR TEETH INTO THIS PROBLEM

Neal L. Boykin of 820 Kentuckey ave. se. defies me to cite one good reason why "tooth paste" should be known by that name.

He contends that the product is a dentifrice in paste form, designed for the cleaning of teeth. Nobody uses it to scrub a single tooth.

Therefore, says Neal, the correct name should be "teeth paste."

Is he right?

RITA WHO?

Our item about Rita Hayworth's uncle has brought in several protests that Rita's real name is Cansinos, so where do I come off with this "Hayworth" stuff.

Jack Trott of 4642 N. 15th st., Arlington, Va., sheds some light on Rita's background—and offers a possible clue to the answer:

"If you delve deeper into her history I think you'll find that her real name is Margarita Cansinos, and that her father is a Mexican.

"When I lived in San Diego I heard about Rita's ancestry and former employment as a dancer in Tiajuana's night clubs.

"It is entirely possible, however, that her mother's name might have been Hayworth, and that our District Liner of that name is her uncle."

ADD SIGNS

Along U. S. Highway No. 40 in Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Johnson of Falls Church, Va. saw a sign which suggested:

"Get Along Little Doggie."

Investigation revealed that the sign was an advertisement for dachshund puppies.

(This is one of those puns that sneaks up on you after a while.)

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three female puppies, one male." (Write to P. O. Box 32-A, Fairfax, Va.)

LOOK ALIKES

Clark Clifford of the White House and Nelson Eddy of the movies, etc.

DOUBLE MIRACLE

Ruth Holstein of 704 Chesapeake ave., Silver Spring, Md., passes along an item about two hard-to-believe facts:

"A 150-lb. plate glass mirror fell on little 1½-year-old Peter Marean of this address. Miraculously, he was unscratched.

"After his trembling mother had cleaned up the debris, father Vincent (of the District Fire Department) took apart the mirror's frame.

"Inside the frame he found a Washington Post dating back to 1923. Fashionable Que Gardens advertised plenty of vacant apartments with rent at $50 per month."

PROOFREADER'S DELIGHT

Julia Rose Wright of 1356 College Station, Fredericksburg, Va., confides:

"I looke one looke at youre Wensdee coloom and shouted rite merrilee. I had just taken a test on Chaucer that verry morn. But youre item restoared me to goode cheere."

While Crisis Heightens

Britons Leaving Home in Droves

LONDON, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—About 500,000 persons have decided definitely to emigrate from the United Kingdom, and only the shortage of transportation is delaying their departure, a United Press survey shows.

The number of inquiries received by officials indicates that the total of prospective emigrants would be greatly increased if the transportation problem was not so great.

Most of the migration will be within the British commonwealth, principally to the dominions. The United States is the destination of most of those going outside the commonwealth, with only negligible numbers applying for permission to move to Latin-American countries and other non-English-speaking nations throughout the world.

The exodus is being encouraged by the government because of the difficulty of supporting the home population under present conditions.

By far the largest number of people want to go to Australia. Australian officials in London said they had 220,000 applications (estimated to represent 400,000 persons) for free or assisted passage.

Although Australia has a target of 70,000 immigrants yearly, it was expected that there will be only 6000 by the end of this year and 12,000 next year. Applications on hand would fulfill the target for the next five years.

However, the figures do not include those who pay their own fares and travel either by sea or air, with delays up to about a year in obtaining passage.

The situation for other countries was:

SOUTH AFRICA: Expects 16,000 to 20,000 immigrants this year, with 35,000 registered on the waiting list in London. Inquiries 50 to 100 daily.

NEW ZEALAND: No figures on waiting list available. Expects 1000 to 1500 immigrants under the government assistance program by the end of the year. But transportation is crowded by immigrants who pay their own way. Inquiries, 2000 weekly.

CANADA: No waiting list figures available. No official estimate of number of inquiries. During 18 months from September 30, 1945, to March 31, 1947, there were 55,875 immigrants from the United Kingdom—a monthly rate of more than 3000. Transportation is limited and crowded.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA: 250 to 300 immigrants monthly with present transportation; 6000 on waiting list. Inquiries, 3500 monthly, but not all are serious and immigration is restricted to persons with special skills.

UNITED STATES: Quota for British immigrants is 67,721 yearly, which has not been filled. The London office, which is the largest of four in the United Kingdom, issued 6599 visas in the year ended June 30, 1946, and 11,452 visas in the year ended June 30, 1947. The majority of persons making inquiries do not follow through with applications and others are unable to meet requirements.

BRITISH COLONIES: Almost no immigration, since people going to the tropical areas normally go to specific jobs for a specified period. There is a small intake into Kenya and northern Rhodesia for special positions and farming.

Visiting Stars Compete For Eynon Bowl Here

By Marion H. Barre

THE seventeenth annual contract championships of the District of Columbia winds up tonight at Hotel Shoreham, concluding a four-day tourney under the auspices of the Washington Bridge League. Play starts today at 12:30 p. m. in the match for foursomes and Metropolitan pairs, both two-session games, to be run concurrently.

Visiting stars here from all over the East will make up at least half of the field in the board-a-match team championship for the Eynon Bowl, one of the oldest trophies owned by the local bridge league. Winner last year was the inter city five-man line-up of Leroy Thurtell, Washington; R. L. Miles, jr., Norfolk; Mrs. J. E. Folline, Richmond; Irvin Fisher, Baltimore, and Wallace Jones, also of Richmond.

The Evening Star Trophy cannot be defended by coholders Mrs. Rebecca Crane and Miss Mary Ruhl, whose 1946 win lifted them out of the "intermediate" class, meaning players holding less than 30 master points. Intermediate players being in the majority, the Metropolitan game would be well-attended even without its contest-within-a-contest for the President's Plaque, which goes to the local club whose individual members make the best showing.

Among organizations to be represented in this contest are the Federal Bridge League, the Agriculture Bridge Club, Capital City Chess Club, Euclid Studios, District of Columbia Recreation Department bridge classes, the La Salle Studios, and several others still unlisted. Each player mentions the club to which he belongs on his tournament entry blank.

C. C. Johnson, cochairman of the tournament committee, is in charge of Metropolitan pairs, while John J. Parish devotes his time to the team match. Russell J. Baldwin is directing the tourney, assisted by P. E. Golden. Baldwin represents the American Contract Bridge League, a coast-to-coast organization in which the Washington League is the oldest unit.

UNSOLICITED donations are still coming in to increase the fund raised in the Women's Auxiliary annual charity tourney on October 11, to benefit Children's Hospital. It will be several weeks before the total receipts can be announced.

Winners of the Schwartz Cup, trophy for this event, were Mrs. Marianne Boschan and Mrs. Sybil Newlands, who had a 35-point-lead over Defenders W. S. Benedict and John Moore. Though beaten by more than two boards, the former champs put up a better fight than many title holders, tying their victorious opponents for a first-round top. Moore and Benedict also finished 37 points up on the third-ranking pair of Mr. and Mrs. W. Poissant. Top score in the finals went Mrs. F. Eberson and J. G. Stone.

The auxiliary holds its bimonthly open master point game on next Saturday at Euclid Studios, starting at 1 p. m., proceeds going to the Damon Runyan Cancer Fund.

Another nationally awarded match is the Euclid Studio monthly at 8:15 p. m. next Friday. This game was postponed because of the District of Columbia Tourney.

THE usual "fourth Wednesday" team game in the Washington Bridge League begins at 8:15 on October 22 in Hotel Burlington, with a pair section played simultaneously. Foursome winners in the last match were Mrs. M. R. Reddy, Mrs. T. M. Boyle, Mrs. Roy Hackett and Mrs. J. R. Belt, with a half-board lead over McGhee, Johnson, Million and Vandersluis. Duo tops went to Mrs. Frank Summy-Mrs. Gladys Moran, Mrs. Count and Mrs. Millspaugh; runners-up being Miss Bernice Jacobson and Paul Kavalski; Mr. and Mrs. David Sentner.

On Tuesday the Federal Bridge League plays its scheduled team game for members only. The following Tuesday will be the monthly open pair event in Pierce Hall, beginning at 8 p. m.

The date for the return engagement in the challenge series between the Federal and the Maryland Bridge Leagues will be announced shortly by Federal President George Kathan.

Two former Washingtonians recently joined the "life master" ranks. They are Tobias Stone and S. Garton Churchill, now L. M. numbers 89 and 90, respectively.

A tournament which has shuttled back and forth between Alexandria and Richmond is the annual championships of the Old Dominion, to be held this year in the latter city on October 31, November 1 and 2.

Closed for the last 10 days for complete renovation, the former Cheeks Rubber Bridge Club, at 2010 R st. nw., will reopen this week under new management. Henceforth it will be known as the Carlyle Club. It will be operated on a membership basis, and along the same lines as the Regency Club in New York City, with which it is affiliated. Fred Karpin has been appointed bridge instructor.

Mrs. William Cheeks has retired to her Maryland tobacco farm near Annapolis.

Whistle Stopping

It's Hunting, Fishing, Racing Time in W. Va.

THE BRUNSWICK STEW (squirrel) season in West Virginia lasts until next Saturday, and so does the racing season at Wheeling Downs. Next Friday Davis-Elkins plays West Liberty at Elkins and Potomac State meets Salem at Keyser. The next day's lineup is as follows: West Virginia vs. Waynesburg at Buckhannon, Morris Harvey vs. West Virginia Tech at Charleston, Marshall vs. Indiana State at Huntington, and Glenville vs. Shepherd at Glenville.

FIVE NEW hotels have been constructed in Miami since last season and will be open for business before January 1, Woody Thompson says . . . He also says General Eisenhower has been invited to stand by when the new six-million-dollar Rickenbacker causeway is opened November 9. The causeway connects Miami with two big keys in the mouth of Biscayne Bay . . . But don't bet on Ike, Woody.

TWO communiques from people not only concerned but in a position to know say that storm damage in Miami Beach and New Orleans isn't as bad as painted. Owner John B. Reid says the Miami Terrace Hotel "suffered no damage whatever," and the New Orleans people say the September blow did little damage to the city proper and none at all to the French quarter . . . The Veterans of Foreign Wars are holding a benefit dance next Friday night in the pier auditorium at Ventnor City, N. J. . . . Pinehurst, N. C., is celebrating "a half-century of golf" this winter. Hang on awhile and Walter Hagen will be doing the same.

FINAL NOTE on that storm damage: The Crandon Park (Fla.) publicity people say the hurricane "improved, rather than damaged" the six-million-dollar causeway. Seems the storm widened the beach and speeded the harvesting of cocoanuts.

CANADIAN Pacific Steamships deposes and says there is a "definite indication of an easing up in eastbound Atlantic travel." Sounds extremely likely . . . You can fly in a United Airlines plane to Hawaii in time for "Aloha Week," which starts next Sunday. Hawaii is a wonderful place to fly to—or sail to—but not for any tinselly, exaggerated "Aloha Week" . . . In line with the President's food conservation plans, it'll be no meat on Tuesdays and no eggs or poultry on Thursdays aboard all B & O trains . . . American President Lines wants to reopen its three offices in Japan and has asked MacArthur about it. The company says, incidentally, that it will buy five new 19-knot passenger ships to go into its round-the-world service.

THE HANOVER (N. H.) Inn children's ski schools will operate from December 26 through January 5 and from February 23 through 28 this season . . . It's unlikely that Boulder City, Nev., will change its name to Hoover City . . . The hunting season, after a fire scare, is open again in New Brunswick. The season for grouse and woodcock closes October 31, for other game population November 30. The All-Brittany Dog Trials will be held next weekend at Elgin, N. B. . . . Snow sports, for a reason as yet obscure, will be limited a bit in Crater Lake (Oreg.) National Park this winter. Plans are reported to be afoot for a 3-mile aerial tramway from Government Camp to Timberline Lodge, 63 miles from Portland . . . Northwest Airlines has been given permission to extend its routes from Detroit to Washington, via Cleveland and Pittsburgh . . . Something called "Tombstone Days" will be celebrated in Tombstone, Ariz., next weekend. O. B. H.

Skyline Drive Color Now At Its Peak

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 18.—The foliage along the Skyline Drive is expected to be at its peak this weekend.

The drive runs for 107 miles along the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains, beginning near Front Royal and ending at Afton.

Pinnacle Inn Open

Little Switzerland, N. C. Oct. 18. Giles Pinnacle Inn, with oil heat, will be open the year around this year as usual.

WHERE WINTER IS WELCOME
Sun Valley IDAHO

● Skiers ride to the mountain tops in time-saving chair-lifts. There's the magic tinkle of sleighbells . . . and whir of ice-skates . . . and, in delightful contrast, the splash of swimmers in warm-water pools sheltered by glass walls. Winter is welcome—just as summer is—at Sun Valley, famous year 'round resort.
For information or reservations, write W. P. Rogers, Gen'l Mgr., Sun Valley, Idaho, or Union Pacific Railroad, Room 1132, Omaha 2, Nebraska.
